Arsonists' Fire Razes School Wing

Damage Is $100,000 At Santa Venetia Site

Fire set by arsonists completely destroyed a four-classroom wing at Santa Venetia Middle School Christmas night. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Marin County Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli said the wing, a separate building, was completely engulfed in flames when firemen arrived after a neighbor noticed the blaze at 11:54 p.m.

He said the building was hidden behind other wings of the school, allowing the fire to get well under way before being seen.

A witness reported seeing two men running from the school just before the fire started, the chief said. He said it was not known whether they were adults or juveniles, but it was believed they were over 18 years old.

Chief Pedroli made a plea to anyone knowing anything about the cause of the fire to contact him.

The fire, which left four classrooms a pile of rubble, was started in at least two places and possibly three, according to Pedroli. It was prevented by firemen from spreading to another building 20 feet away.

Seven firemen from the county department with four engines were assisted by a unit from San Rafael and another from Terra Linda in putting out the fire, which was under control about 1 a.m.

Pedroli said someone had broken into the school, which houses sixth, seventh and eighth grades, the night before the fire. And earlier on Christmas night, a construction shed being used by workmen building an addition to the school was broken into, he said.

School officials were meeting with insurance investigators today to determine what to do about the destroyed classrooms, according to the San Rafael schools superintendent, John F. Plank.

Plank said he thought it might be possible to rebuild the fire-damaged wing at the same time construction of a $130,000 addition is going on.

The school is being enlarged so that about 300 additional students from San Pedro and Glenwood areas may be bused there next year.

Chief Pedroli said his men were still sifting through the rubble today in an attempt to determine how the fire started.

Another Chance Of Rain Tonight

Intermittent rain, heavy at times, and gusting winds continued to hit Marin County during the Christmas weekend and there was a 40 per cent chance of more rain tonight.

Throughout California, 68 persons died in automobile accidents during the three and one-quarter day Christmas period, the California Highway Patrol reported.

There was no traffic death in Marin or Southern Sonoma County and little storm damage reported.

Chuck holes in Novato Boulevard and Center Road bothered Novato drivers. The largest hole was at Novato Boulevard and Seventh Street, Novato maintenance superintendent Carrol Madsen reported.

Travelers' warnings remained in effect from eastern Oregon and Northern California into Nevada and Utah, and another storm system was reported moving southward from the Washington coast.

The 68 traffic deaths statewide was the worst record in California history, the highway patrol said, surpassing the previous record of 64 deaths in 1950.

Strongest rains in Marin fell in the western part of the county, with Point Reyes Station reporting 3.44 inches between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. today. Woodacre had 3.63 inches in the same period.

Other totals between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. today included: Sausalito, 2.22 inches; Belvedere, 2.01 inches; Mill Valley, 2.33 inches; Fairfax, 2.2 inches; Novato, 2.87, and Petaluma, 2.12.

A total of 1.51 inches which fell in Tiburon between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday was the heaviest rain there in a 24-hour period since last March.

Winds in Tiburon gusted up to 33 miles per hour Friday and Saturday morning and up to 43 miles per hour in the 24 hours prior to 8 a.m. today.

Hanoi Broke Its Promise, Laird Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, in the face of some of the heaviest U.S. air strikes in North Vietnam since 1968, charged today that Hanoi had violated the understandings that led to the bombing halt three years ago. (See related story, page 2.)

Laird said those violations included the shelling of South Vietnamese cities, including Saigon Dec. 19; construction of an infiltration road through the demilitarized zone; failure to negotiate meaningfully as promised: and firing on unarmed U.S. reconnaissance aircraft.

"I am saying the understandings must be lived up to by both sides," Laird said. "They clearly have not lived by these understandings."

He gave no indication when the current bombing campaign of North Vietnam would end but said it was not the largest in any 24-hour period since he became defense chief three years ago.

In a year-end news conference, Laird also said there would be no draft calls in January and "quite possibly" none in February or March.

Laird said the absence of a draft in January was due to Congress' order of a further cutback in Army strength of more than 5 per cent; Pentagon wishes to test the effect of recent higher pay approved by Congress in an effort to work toward an all-volunteer Army; and progress made in withdrawing troops from Vietnam.

Greyhound's Stormy Era Of Commute Runs Ending

By JEFF GREER

A stormy romance three decades long will come to a parting of the ways New Year's Day.

That's when the Golden Gate Transit District will take over the commute bus routes served since March 1, 1941, by Greyhound buses for all of Marin and much of Sonoma County.

From 1860 until after the Golden Gate Bridge opened in 1937, the ferryboat was queen of commuterland, and the railroad train its consort.

The transfer of commuters' affections to private autos and Greyhound buses crossing the new span was both sudden and financially distressing to Northwestern Pacific Railroad and the ferryboat companies that plied San Francisco Bay.

The railroad petitioned in 1939 to abandon its commuter service, but was not given state permission to do so until early 1941.

Greyhound was already on the scene for Mill Valley and other Southern Marin commuters; the big buses started their first runs from there to San Francisco in October, 1940.

Elmer M. McVerry, Ross resident who is still Marin County operations superintendent for Greyhound, recalled that his company took over commute operations gradually. The firm extended service first to the Ross Valley and later to San Rafael. Few riders commuted from further north in the county, he recalled.

McVerry was a bus driver on the Mill Valley runs in 1940, then became a dispatcher in San Anselmo and San Rafael a year later.

He still has an office in Greyhound's San Rafael terminal, which will have far fewer buses rolling through after the commuters switch to the big green and white Golden Gate Corridor bus fleet. The terminal now has service through Ross Valley each half hour, and hourly on the Highway 101 route.

Next month, "there will only be about 10 Greyhounds a day" through San Rafael, McVerry said. They will link Marin to such points as Fort Bragg and Eureka. Commuters from east of Santa Rosa in the Valley of the Moon and Sonoma area will still ride Greyhound to San Rafael for transfer to the bridge district buses, until the Golden Gate district extends its service.

McVerry didn't recall hearing about it, but the first time commuters rode Greyhound buses probably was in 1933, when a freight train accident stalled NWP's commute trains at Corte Madera. The railroad hired lumbering "Pacific Greyhound" buses with long noses and luggage racks on top, to take the stranded commuters around the blocked section of rails to the Sausalito ferry, according to the Independent-Journal's files.

Other commuters began riding Greyhound regularly in 1934, when NWP discontinued

Now The Computer Can Deny A License

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A note of caution for the holiday partygoer: A computer which adds an average of 3,000 new names a day is making it easier for the states to deny licenses to drivers convicted of serious offenses, particularly drunken driving.

Known as the National Driver Register Service, the computer operated by the Transportation Department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration now contains the names of more than 3 million drivers.

The idea is to help state motor vehicle agencies decide when they should deny licenses by providing information on a driver's past record, no matter where he lived.

The federal government does not rule on license applications since the licensing of drivers is controlled by the states. But state officials have made some 99 million requests for a search of the computer records on drivers in the 10 years the computer has been in use.

Safety officials say these searches have turned up more than 870,000 drivers whose names were on the computer's list of license denials or revocations.

Before the computer began operating, a state official had no way of checking whether an applicant had lost his license in another state.

There is no mandatory requirement that a state participate in the computer listing service, but all 50 states now submit the names of drivers whose licenses have either been revoked or their application denied.

The government keeps the names of motorists who have lost their annual licenses for a serious violation such as drunken driving, which officials claim may be the cause of one-half of the 56,000 traffic death toll, in the computer for seven years. In less serious violations, the name is removed after five years.

Each state sets its own criteria for licensing drivers and this makes it difficult to gauge the effectiveness of the computer service.

GI Drug Rehabilitation Draws Travis Protest

Air Force officials, who operate the hospital, made no move to break up the demonstration. An unindentified Army colonel was called in to talk to the rebellious patients.

Eighteen soldiers and four civilians were in the ward, Air Force officials said.

The Air Force said there were no arrests and no violence in the protest by the 22 persons.

An antiwar Veterans group said the protest was designed to protest "unfair military policy regarding drug patients."

William Hankin, a spokesman for the Vietnam Veterans against the war, said four civilians, including a serviceman's wife, were staying with the soldiers in the ward.

Hankin said his group was "trying to fight against the army's blaming GIs for drug addiction."

Hankin, who said he was a medic in Vietnam, claimed the men in the ward were not addicts but had flunked a test "that is not accurate. A soldier could have been given drugs for a wound and flunked it."

600 Peasants Now Are Landowners

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI)— The Dominican government has distributed 100,000 acres of land among 600 peasant families as a year's-end present, it was announced Monday.

Gilberto Villanueva, director of the land reform institute, said the latest grants brought to 4,415 the number of families who have become landowners this year.

Nixon, Brandt Set To Talk

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon completed preparations today for summit talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt which he hopes will produce a new harmony in allied policy.

Nixon and Brandt are scheduled to meet for about five hours tomorrow and Wednesday in the President's Florida White House.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon is seeking to coordinate the actions of the U.S., Great Britain, France and West Germany in dealing with "the accelerated pace of change in the international arena."

'Undermanned' Corte Madera Fire Department Hit In Report

Corte Madera's fire department is undermanned, poorly equipped and inadequately trained, and upgrading it will be a costly project, according to two consulting engineers hired to investigate it.

Applying top priority remedies would cost almost $200,000 including $64,000 to add four new firemen, and provide 24-hour coverage, Bill S. Ingram, a Watsonville structural engineer, and Watsonville Fire Chief Bryce W. Connick, concluded.

Ingram in a cover letter, recommended that priority recommendations be in effect by July 1, 1972, but added, "We are certain that it will be difficult to accomplish the recommended work in the time allowed."

All of the recommendations for new equipment — including a fire station and two engines — would cost the town $500,000, the report says. It also says the ideal size of the force — now five regulars and 14 volunteers — is 18 regulars and 40 volunteers, but that would raise salaries to $227,000 a year.

That salary estimate alone amounts to more than two-thirds the total revenue of slightly more than $300,000 now raised by property taxes which must carry the burden of financing.

The preliminary report does not offer a further timetable, but Ingram said one would be supplied with the final report.

The two fire consultants will discuss their findings with the citizens fire subcommittee that commissioned the study at 8 p.m. Jan. 5 at town hall.

They proposed a step-by-step program to upgrade the department, which they said is now so bad it "will continue to be quickly overwhelmed by fires of even moderate size under any but the most favorable conditions."

One of Ingram's suggestions for keeping costs down was that Corte Madera contract with Larkspur for fire protection aid.

Biggest cost in the initial step would be $64,000 for additional manpower per year followed by $50,000 for a contract with Larkspur.

He said the town's "basically good water system needs to be extended and improved in some areas" but that the main problem is lack of manpower, equipment and training.

"Fire methods have been dangerously poor with too much dependence placed upon light manning and very small (light pressure) hose streams. This is the result of understandable attempts ... to make up for serious shortages in proper manpower and equipment," Ingram said.

He went on to say that the two-fire-station situation "serves no useful purpose in

Heaviest U.S. Bombing Raids In Three Years

SAIGON (UPI)—Squadrons of American jet fighter-bombers bombed military targets in North Vietnam today for the second consecutive day and military sources hinted at more raids to come in the heaviest strikes since the end of the bombing pause in November, 1968.

Hanoi Radio said hundreds of U.S. planes were bombing and strafing densely populated areas, including a hospital, in what the broadcasts called grave acts of war. The U.S. Command said only that the jets were hitting "military targets."

U.S. military sources said the massive raids from U.S. aircraft carriers in the Tonkin Gulf and from airbases in Thailand were ordered personally by President Nixon to counter a growing threat against withdrawing U.S. troops in South Vietnam.

A U.S. Command spokesman, in a vaguely worded statement, hinted the jets returned to their home bases at nightfall Monday and would resume the bombing at daybreak Tuesday.

"The strikes are continuing but are not necessarily continuous," the spokesman said tonight when asked whether the U.S. pilots had called off their bombing runs because of darkness.

A third day of the massive bombardment would be the longest air attack on North Vietnam since President Lyndon B. Johnson halted "offensive" bombing of the north on Nov. 1, 1968. American jets have carried out five one-day and two two-day "defensive" air attacks against the North since then.

Radio Hanoi said five American F4 Phantoms with a total of 10 crewmen were shot down Sunday and railed at the "criminal war acts" by the "stubborn American pirates." The U.S. Command has mentioned no losses officially. Hanoi said several pilots were killed and some captured.

The U.S. Command labeled the latest attack "protective reaction air strikes" against "enemy activity which imperils the diminishing U.S. forces," the command said today.

American troop strength in South Vietnam had dropped to 158,300.

That figure represented a withdrawal of 4,200 men last week and the 158,300 still left was the lowest number since October, 1965, when the U.S. buildup was still on; the figure then was 153,300 men.

Many of the raids were reported directed at huge stockpiles of Communist supplies near the border of Laos in hopes they could be destroyed before they could be sent down the Ho Chi Minh trail into Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Two Hijackings: One Makes It To Cuba

TORONTO (UPI) — A calm and polite young man who talked lovingly of his family but said he had "a mission to fulfill" hijacked an Air Canada DC9 jetliner to Cuba last night after allowing the 82 passengers to disembark here, many of them unaware a hijacking was in progress.

The man, who was not identified, handed a stewardess a note saying he had a fragmentation grenade and wanted to go to Cuba just five minutes before the plane was to have landed at Toronto Airport.

Another hijack attempt was made on an American Airlines plane which took off from the same airport several hours later but the would-be hijacker was overpowered by two crewmen and two passengers when the plane landed at Salt Lake City.

When the Air Canada jet returned to Toronto at 2:45 a.m. today after an almost three-hour stay at Jose Marti Airport in Havana crew members described their hijacker as a "very nice" young man.

The slight, fairhaired youth boarded the plane at Thunder Bay Airport in Ontario, about 50 miles from the Minnesota border.

"He showed us pictures of his little boy and his wife and talked about how much he loved them and his mother," Stewardess Ruthe-Anne Snell, 21, said. "He said he had no father and he'd never see his family again."

Several hours earlier, an American Airlines 707 with 75 persons aboard took off from the same Toronto airport bound for San Francisco. It stopped once in Chicago and took off again with 97 persons aboard.

Over Wyoming, a young man pulled a plastic toy gun and a five-inch knife and attempted to hijack the plane, officials said. The American plane made an unscheduled stop in Salt Lake City where the man was overpowered by two crew members and two passengers. He was turned over to FBI agents in Salt Lake City.

Russell Calame, FBI agent in charge of Salt Lake City, said the U.S. attorney's office authorized charging Donald L. Coleman, 24, Downers Grove, Ill., with hijacking charges, which would be filed today.

Seoul Hotel Fire Toll Rises to 158

SEOUL (UPI) —Lack of outside fire escapes and proper emergency equipment were main contributors to the high death toll in the fire at the Taeyongak luxury hotel, a Korean engineer said today.

At least 158 persons — including one American —were killed and 69 injured in the fire at two-year-old, 22-story hotel on Chritmas day. Officials said 38 persons died jumping from the upper floors, at least one man fell from a rescue helicopter and the others burned to death or suffocated.

Chi Young-dae, an engineering professor and expert on building fires, said the lack of outside fire escapes was the major cause of the death toll — the highest in a hotel fire in history.

Authorities said most of the bodies were badly burned and only 84 had been identified so far. The single American casualty was identified as G. W. Goodwin of Sacramento, Calif., a civilian security officer at the U.S. Osan Air Force Base 30 miles south of Seoul.

The hotel was a luxury establishment located in the heart of the Seoul business district.

Blades, Pot Found In Prison Gifts

Sources inside the prison said a sweatshirt addressed to Bobby Augusta Davis, 30, convicted murderer of four highway patrolmen, concealed eight hacksaw blades.

The package made it almost all the way to Death Row before its contents were detected. According to Joseph R. O'Brien, prison information officer, the blades were found in a check of Christmas gifts.

The source said another inmate almost had a high Christmas, but guards found a five-pound cache of marijuana concealed in a box of chocolates.

O'Brien said neither gift was on the list of approved presents sent to relatives and friends of the inmates.

REPORT

The second station on the east side of town "only invites controversy over which station will house the all-too-few-on-duty men."

"The headquarters station is reasonably well laid out and equipped but is much too small to house the entire Corte Madera fire operation and is not in the optimum location," Ingram said.

He recommended eventually a new building be built to house equipment and provide training space.

Ingram proposed that additional men be hired, new equipment be purchased and a training program for firemen be undertaken.

Ingram did not recommend doing away with volunteers now used by the fire department. He said, however, that the current "blackball" system of reviewing membership applications should be replaced by a qualifications appraisal and background check.

City officials commissioned the investigation after angry homeowners demanded more fire protection following a Sept. 16 fire which destroyed two houses and damaged a third. Earlier this month, another Corte Madera house was destroyed in a predawn fire.

Citizens in east Corte Madera have demanded immediate hiring of more firemen, but Mayor Holmes S. Norville said today that no action will be taken until the council appointed fire committee makes it recommendations in March. In the meantime, he said, the committee will distribute questionnaires to find out how much residents would pay for better fire protection.

He praised the report for bringing out points the town was "just maybe beginning to suspect," but said it would be infeasible to implement it in a year.

A Long Series Of Vandalism

A Larkspur man, who endured a series of vandalism for two months, finally reported the problem to police after another incident yesterday.

Police said Albert J. Byers complained that a pole lamp was smashed at 1 a.m. at his home, 450 William Avenue, then related a plague of damage during the past two months.

Byers told police juveniles cut the wires and took two outdoor lamps, smashed his Christmas lights in the street, ripped a sprinkler and plastic hose from the ground, broke his fence, vandalized his car, stoned his house and threw lighted matches, garbage and bicycle parts in his yard.

Passengers Hurt In Road Wreck

A 78-year-old man was reported in serious condition today at Marin General Hospital with a back injury suffered in a two-car accident on Highway 101 yesterday.

Anton Jensen and his wife, Elna, 72, were passengers in a car driven by Colin J. Rawnsley, 51, of 425 Corte Madera Avenue, Corte Madera, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The patrol said Rawnsley's car, northbound on Highway 101 at the north San Pedro Road overcrossing at 9:15 p.m., struck another car which had spun out, bounced off guardrails on both sides of the freeway and came to rest in the center lane.

Rawnsley was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut nose and his wife, Marjorie, 44, was treated for a bruised abdomen and possible back injury.

Mrs. Jensen was reported in satisfactory condition today with a cut right leg and possible head injuries and a fractured rib.

Man Is Treated For Gunshot Wound

A Marin City man was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital with a gunshot wound in the knee, suffered in an accident at his home.

Marin City sheriff's deputies said Gerald Ford, 24, of 149 Drake Avenue, was injured about 10 p.m. Thursday when a gun he was cleaning accidentally discharged.

Boy, 15, Injured In Minibike Crash

A San Anselmo boy was treated at Marin General Hospital yesterday for a fractured and dislocated toe in his right foot suffered in a minibike accident.

Rick Canoni, 15, of 100 Park Doive, was treated at 12:24 p.m., the hospital said. No details of the accident were available.

Junipers Taken

Eleven Juniper plants valued at $110 were dug up and hauled away from a Standard service station at 301 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard between 10 p.m. Friday and 7 a.m. Saturday, Larkspur police reported today.

TRAVIS

He said the men were being held past their discharge date because they failed the test.

In New York, meanwhile, 16 members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) barricaded themselves inside the Statue of Liberty overnight in a "symbolic protest" which they said would continue until New Year's Day. (See picture, page 2.)

The National Parks Service warned Monday the men would be removed if they turned down a last chance to negotiate. "We have the wherewithal to open the memorial," said Franklin Arthur, chief of the service's Law Enforcement Division.

The demonstration, one of a series staged during the Christmas weekend by the antiwar group, began at about 5 p.m. EST as the statue closed for the day. The protesters, most in their 20s and dressed in jeans, sweaters and old fatigue jackets with combat ribbons, blocked the three entrances to the national monument.

"We as a new generation of men who have survived Vietnam are taking this symbolic action at the Statue of Liberty in an effort to show support for any person who refuses to kill," they said in one-sentence statement.

Arthur said they had demanded evidence that the statement was printed in the servicemen's newspaper (Stars & Stripes) and broadcast throughout Vietnam on the Armed Forces Radio Network. But he said he told them he could not tell news media what to carry.

Jerry Wagers, regional director for the parks service, said he had spoken with the demonstrators early today through the locked doors. He said they turned down his offer to let them conduct a news conference and to continue their protest on park grounds if they came out voluntarily.

"We are nonviolent. We have not damaged this place. We have no plans to damage it," one demonstrator yelled to newsmen through a glass door at the rear of the statue.

An "Open Letter to President Nixon" taped to the door said:

"Each Vietnam veteran who has barricaded himself within this international symbol of liberty has for many years rationalized his attitude to the war. When we were in Vietnam we excused our actions because we thought we had no choice. After coming home we excused our bitterness because we thought that we were entitled to it.

"Last spring we threw our medals into the dirt because we thought it would excuse our guilt and because we thought it would help end the war. Now, as we sit inside the Statue of Liberty, having captured the hopes and imaginations of a war-weary nation, we have run out of all excuses.

"We can no longer tolerate the war in Southeast Asia, regardless of the color of its dead or the method of its implementation. Mr. Nixon: You set the date ... we'll evacuate."

Japan Still Bound To The Family Wedding

By JEFF PENBERTHY
Toronto Telegram Syndicate

For the second time this month, Sunday fell on a "Taian Day" — a lucky date on the lunar calendar — and 20,000 couples lined up at Shinto Shrines to be married at this special time.

At Tokyo's Meiji Keneka, the priests pumped out 150 matrimonial units in conveyor belt fashion, and similar festivities were going on all over Japan.

In several places, there were commercially-sponsored "mass weddings," with hundreds of couples taking their vows simultaneously.

Climbing the stairs, we found the new Tokaido line platform crowded with newlyweds and well-wishers. On "Taian," the bullet train becomes a 130 mph honeymoon express.

Relatives waved banners which showed wedding pledges; "We promise you the flower of our passion will bloom in northeastern Honshu." Another two blushing optimists had vowed: "We shall not regret our marriage."

One couple was standing apart by a steel pylon, a little island of misery in a sea of happiness.

The girl, pretty, eyes downcast, nervously fingered the ribbon on a bouquet. He stood several feet away, hands deep in the pockets of a dark suit, tensely waiting for the train's arrival to break the spell of his predicament.

Deserted at last by their relatives and the ominipresent "go-between," they were honeymooners but hardly acquainted.

It is a shock for a foreigner to find that in Japan, one of the most industrialized and progressive nations in the world, more than one third of the million marriages celebrated each year begin something like this.

As the percentage of modern marriages grows, so does the divorce rate. Many are still convinced that the old way is the best.

The challenge of "love marriages," for one thing, has brought some ludicruous excesses.

In recent years, Japan has been feasted to a nude wedding, couples married on buses, car rallies, aeroplanes, skin-divers wed in the water, skaters united on ice — even a pair of sky-divers who exchanged rings in free-flight.

Now, even the traditional marriage arrangement has had to undergo some modernization.

Initially, Omio flourished in Japan's rural village society, and the Nadoko (matchmaker) knew the families of both parties intimately. Marriages were often arranged while couples were still children.

With the mass movement of population into the big cities, however, the professional matchmaker's association, a non-profit organization where a husband or wife can be found for 15,000 yen ($37.50).

"Its a happy job we have," said the association's co-ordinator, Mrs. Hisae Sakata, the pretty (arranged) wife of Japanese Rear Admiral.

"There are seven million boys and girls in Japan who want to get married. We can help them find the ideal partner with a scientific approach."

A young person is introduced to the association by a guarantor — a relative, employer or person of community standing — who can "guarantee them honor." Supplying three snapshots and a studio portrait of themselves, the hopefuls then fill out a long questionaire which has two parts:

"Who I am," and "who I am looking for."

This is evaluated by Mrs. Sakata and her nine "counsellors," all middle-aged mothers, and eventually a potential partner is selected. An "Omiai" (first meeting) is then arranged between the candidates and their families.

This takes place in a brightly lit room, overlooked by a mirror which is framed by two love-birds.

"If they like each other they may meet a second time alone. If there is a third meeting, we usually consider that they are almost engaged." Mrs. Sakata said.

One advantage that the modern "Omia" lacks is that under the village system, the matchmaker and spouse were then responsible to guide the couple, and mediate n any marital problems that arose for the rest of their married life.

One reason that the marriage arrangement continues to be popular, even among modern young people, is that the Japanese are a shy race, and rarely entertain in their homes.

Young people generally have far less opportunity to mix socially than their western counterparts. Besides, the arranged marriage has an unusual record of success.

A matchmaker of the old style, Genkichi Ishizaka, 76, has arranged more than 3,000 marriages, and claims that only five ended with divorce.

Wat Takeshita Retiring From I-J

By JEFF GREER

Wat Takeshita, prizewinning reporter whose typewriter pounded to the pulse of Marin County news for two decades, will retire from the Independent-Journal Dec. 31.

The veteran newsman was guest of honor today at a luncheon attended by 50 persons, including county supervisors, department heads, longtime county employees and Assemblyman William T. Bagley. The gathering at Nero's Restaurant, in Novato was arranged in Takeshita's honor by Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos and County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell. It was the first county retirement luncheon ever held to honor someone who was not a county official, Mitchell said.

Takeshita was presented with resolutions of commendation from the California Assembly and Marin County Board of Supervisors, as well as other gifts.

After coming to San Rafael in June 1952, Takeshita handled the crime and courts beats, general assignment, the county offices and political news in Sacramento and Marin, and wrote and edited the I-J Editorial page at various times.

Associated Press through the years awarded Takeshita three top prizes for spot news stories, in competition among dailies throughout California and Nevada.

WAT TAKESHITA
Murder suspect looked a little bit like me . . . !

Takeshita's writing also earned him the California State Fair spot news contest award in 1958, when he received the plaque from Gov. Goodwin J. Knight.

Last year, he received an award from the California Association for Mental Health, for increasing public awareness of mental health problems through his stories.

Takeshita said he recalled vividly covering a host of major stories that made I-J headlines — particularly the famed "Filipino Houseboy" murder trial of Bart L. Caratativo, in 1954. Then Dist. Atty. William O. Weissich proved to a jury that Caratativo slew a Stinson Beach resort owner and her estranged husband, after forging a will that left her $160,000 estate to the former houseboy.

"The defendant was short and dark, and looked a little bit like me," Takeshita said. "The courtroom spectators used to say, 'Gee, they're pretty lenient about letting the defendant wander around' when they saw me coming and going in the courtroom."

Caratativo's death in the San Quentin gas chamber was the only execution Takeshita ever had to cover. "I'd never want to do that again," he declared. Watching the double slayer's death was "almost like an invasion of privacy, but I guess the state had to have witnesses," he said.

Takeshita's early days with the I-J reflected a more leisurely pace that vanished as Marin grew and became more hectic. "I used to sit in the Courthouse Creamery across from the Courthouse, with Sheriff Walter B. Sellmer and the attorneys. Whenever anything happened, deputies would run across the street and tell us."

Takeshita was trusted to ride along on police investigations. He was privy to official information throughout his career, an advantage he said helped him write more penetrating and accurate stories.

In recent years, he was a fixture in the Marin Civic Center's administrative wing, covering the supervisors, planning commission and other county offices. After recently being transferred back to the crime and courts beat he held years ago, he decided to end his repertorial career — with no particular plans for his future.

Takeshita, born in San Jose, lived on a Fresno County farm operated by his late father, Japanese-born Tsunejiro Takeshita, until he entered Stanford University before World War II.

Takeshita and his family were among thousands of Japanese-born and first-generation United States-born citizens forced out of their rightful homes in the Pacific Coast states by frightened fellow citizens who feared sabotage after Pearl Harbor.

Takeshita's family first was herded into the concentration camp in the Santa Anita racetrack then allowed to join other Japanese families in Gila River, Ariz. Takeshita's father came to California in 1901 and earned enough to buy his own farm which he operated until dispossessed by the war scare. Reparations were made only in the late 1960s, and even then did not fully compensate for loss.

Takeshita edited a tri-weekly newspaper in Gila River, until 1945. Then he became a Japanese language teacher in an Army school at the University of Minnesota.

He joined the Army in 1946, serving as a translator in Tokyo for military intelligence and later in civil service until 1951. He returned to Stanford for a master's degree, and joined the Independent-Journal the next year.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday unanimously adopted a resolution that other county workers said "just about tells it all" with regards to Takeshita's career:

". . . Whereas Wat Takeshita has covered the county government beat for many years, during which his reportage has always been distinguished by an extraordinary degree of accuracy, fairness and honesty, and:

"Whereas, Wat Takeshita has garnered the deep respect and warm friendship of each supervisor, every county officer, and the innumerable county employees who have been privileged to know him;

". . . Be it resolved, that this board of supervisors does hereby commend and express its appreciation to Wat Takeshita for the outstanding manner in which he has served his employer and the citizens of Marin by chronicling county government with intelligence, precision and skill."

The veteran newsman said he planned to take "a couple of months" to decide on a new career. Meanwhile, he will concentrate on his other interests. He is an active volunteer with the Suicide Prevention switchboard in Marin, a Big Brother, and a life master player and frequent winner in contract bridge competitions.

Takeshita said he intends to continue living in San Rafael.

The storm blew in Christmas Eve, and on Christmas Day there was 15 inches of new snow at Reno Municipal Airport.

Chou Undisputed Leader Of Chinese

LONDON (UPI) — Premier Chou En-lai has emerged as the undisputed "political supremo" of China after smashing a military-backed, left-wing alignment against negotiations with President Nixon, qualified diplomatic sources have reported from Peking.

Chou, whose influence has been rising steadily since the collapse of the so-called cultural revolution in China, is now all but personally running China's political scene, with the blessings of Mao Tse-tung, the diplomats reported.

With a free hand from Mao, Chou is turning Peking's course by 180 degrees, aiming at an early place for China in the world concert of big nations and a strong front against Russia as the most dangerous potential enemy of the future.

At home, opponents have been silenced for the present. But it is by no means certain that they have been silenced for good, the reports said.

The diplomatic reports said the present state of affairs in Peking is the result of planned top level changes by Mao last summer and a subsequent dramatic purge to smash a developing dangerous opposition.

It began, according to the sources, when Chou, with Mao's backing made known that the National Assembly would meet Aug. 16 for a major revampting of the ruling machinery. One of the veiled aims was to whittle down the power of the military, which had been rising to the discomfort of those in supreme political power.

Party meetings in the Central Committee and on lower levels had reflected growing domestic uneasiness, highlighted by opposition to Mao's sudden policy switch which resulted in Peking's invitation to President Nixon.

Mao's deputy, Lin Piao, aligned himself with some of the military as leader of the so-called left-wing opposing the policy switch, the reports said.

The opposition was smashed by a drastic purge which ended in the "physical elimination" of Lin and his wife and a number of military and party leaders, it said.

By HOWARD LUXENBERG.
UPI BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK (UPI)—The dramatic Wall Street rally that broke out the day after Thanksgiving will feed steady stock market growth in 1972, according to a United Press International survey of leading brokers.

Many of the analysts even predict that the Dow Jones Industrial Average will crack through the 1,000 point barrier next year.

A few were pessimistic, fearful that President Nixon's new economic program (NEP), unveiled last August, will hurt corporate profits. But most Wall Streeters, convinced that investor psychology finally has turned from caution to confidence, point to recent government actions and see 1972 as a strong year.

The Price Commission, one of the agencies responsible for establishing NEP guidelines, imposed a 2.5 per cent average ceiling on price increases. The Cost of Living Council, another NEP agency, said firms with sales of $100 million a year or more would have to get prior approval for price increases during the period of controls. This covers such giants as General Motors and, in general, the 1,300 biggest American firms doing 45 per cent of all U.S. business.

As the curtain closed on 1971, however, many companies were being allowed to raise prices in excess of the guidelines. Business analysts and economists regarded this as a sign that NEP was not as much antibusiness as a lot of people thought it might be.

International monetary conditions has been another area of worry for investors despite reports that progress was made at December meetings between the United States and its major trading allies.

The Western world's wealthiest nations, known as the Group of 10, have met regularly in an effort to hammer out a world currency realignment as part of a package to end the trade crisis. A solution is expected in January or February.

Martin D. Sass, president of Neuwirth Management & Research Corp., an investment advisory service, said he believes there will be positive developments in the realignment of international currency to facilitate international trade and encourage a flow of investment dollars into the American stock market.

Sass said uncertainty is a major enemy of the stock market, but that as some of the problems are resolved and as the visibility of the economic recovery increases it will be reflected in a lower rate of savings and a return to the investment scene. He looked for a 10 to 15 per cent increase in pretax corporate profits for 1972.

Harry W. Laubscher, senior vice president and diractor of research for Walston & Co., Inc., said "one year from now the Dow Jones blue chip barometer could be wandering around the1000 level, which since 1966 has proven to be a regular bugaboo to the market." The best closing level for the Dow was 995.15 on Feb. 9, 1966.

Laubscher declared that the history-making moves by the administration in the field of economics have done much to materially improve market prospects for 1972.

"Better attitudes toward price-earnings ratios and a rising profit pattern point to higher stock prices in 1972," said Robert H. Stovall, a general partner at Reynolds Securities, Inc.

Robert S. Waill, vice president of Inverness Counsel, Inc., echoed Stovall's feeling. Waill said "as investors finally come to recognize that profits are truly on a rising trend and that a better day is dawning, the new awareness will be reflected in the prices of common stocks."

Harry B. Freeman, Jr., president of Van Strum & Towne, Inc. and the Channing Mutual Funds, said that intermittent pullbacks in the market should be expected, but "I believe 1972 will be a successful year for common stock investments."

Alan R. Shaw, vice president and director of research for Harris, Upham & Co., said he looked for earnings among the Dow Jones industrials of $56.25 in 1971, and $63 to $65 in '72. He said this would compare with 1970 earnings of $51.64.

President's Appraisal Of Year

NEW YORK (UPI)—President Nixon said Sunday his most important decision of 1971 was opening communications with China, a move he believes will contribute more to world peace than anything else he has done.

The most difficult domestic decision las year was to impose wage-price controls and devalue the dollar, the President said.

Named "Man of the Year" by Time Magazine, Nixon's remarks were made in an interview published by the magazine Sunday.

"The most important decision I made this year was the decision to open communications with China," he said. "I believe that it will make a greater contribution to the next generation, to peace in the world, than anything else we have done.

"It was a mixed bag as far as public reaction was concerned," the President said. "I knew that it posed many problems with many of our friends in the world. But it had to be done and this country had to make that move. No other country could; ironically, the Soviet Union was unable to." Discussing his economic moves on the domestic front, Nixon said, "It became apparent that if the U.S. was going to maintain its competitive position in the world, some very strong medicine had to be taken by the patient, the U.S., and also given to our trading partners in the world.

"I was troubled by it because I am committed to the free market." But I would be much more troubled if this had been done by someone else. I don't believe in controls as an end in themselves or on a permanent basis."

Nixon said he believed he has a greater opportunity than any president in history to help create a new structure of peace in the world.

"I am convinced that the United States right now is on the brink of exercising its power to do good in the world, such good as never has been done in the history of civilization because we now can muster our moral force, our economic force and we, of course, have the military power to back up our words.

"Our aim is to build a structure of peace such as we could not dream of after World War II; we couldn't dream of this when Eisenhower was president. It wasn't the right time. It wasn't the right time when Kennedy was there. But now the time may have come, and we must seize the moment — seize the moment in our relationships with the superpowers."

The President said history showed the key to peace was an even balance of power among the strongest nations. The danger of war arises when one nations becomes too powerful.

Smallest Antarctic Creatures Will Be Object Of Study

By LOUISE WALSH

ORONO, Maine (UPI)—Allen R. Crooker, who may have seen plenty of snow during his 24 year lifetime in Maine, ain't seen nothin' yet. In early January he heads for the Antarctic.

Crooker, a graduate student at the University of Maine, will be part of a research team studying insects at the South Pole. The only break in the isolation during the six-month work, he said, will be provided by U.S. Navy personnel in the area.

A resident of Mechanic Falls in southern Maine, Crooker is well familiar with Mother Nature's work with snow. But the prospect of six months at the bottom of the world, surrounded by only snow and lab equipment, delights him.

"It's the chance of a lifetime," he said, taking a break in his packing preparations.

Crooker and three other researchers—under the guidance of biology Prof. Russell Strandtmann of Texas Tech, an authority an Arctic and Antarctic arthropods, and the sponsorship of the National Science Foundation—will be stationed at Palmer Station on the tip of the Antarctic peninsula. They will study the winter habits of mites, midges and springtails.

Crooker said he will focus on insects while William L. Graham of Texas Tech studies mites. The difference? "Mites have eight legs," Crooker said, "while insects have only six. That's the most obvious difference to the layman."

Crooker will observe insects surviving in a harsh environment. His time will be spent mostly on the wingless midge—the world's southernmost free-living insect that goes through four life stages.

"Springtails are very primitive," Crooker explained. "Many are found on water surfaces in Maine. They have a hook on the under side of their abdomen which permits them to jump—hence, the name springtail."

He also will study a species found on snow or under rocks. The springtails are black and about one-sixteenth of an inch in size.

The study will be the first on mites during the Antarctic winter. Other research has shown light penetrating the snow cover apparently provides enough warmth for mites to move around under the snow. It previously was thought only eggs could survive in winter.

Crooker and Graham fly to Santiago, Chile, Jan. 1 before going to Punta Arenas in southern Chile for a boat to Palmer Station. Crooker said he will keep weekly contact with Strandtmann via radio telephone communications by the Navy.

A Cautious Path Taken By Jordan

RAYMOND WILKINSON

BEIRUT (UPI) —Jordan expects more guerrilla attacks against its representatives abroad, but for the moment King Hussein can do nothing more than urge his officials to be cautious.

In the last few months, following their defeat on the battlefield in July and August, Palestinians have begun a steadily escalating campaign against Jordanian property and personnel.

Jordanian aircraft have been hijacked or damaged by bombs. In Cairo last month Prime Minister Wasfi Tel was gunned down.

Two weeks ago the Jordanian ambassador to London was machinegunned but escaped serious rious injury, and in Geneva four Swiss persons were injured when a package exploded at the Jordanian mission to the United Nations there.

The voice of Assifa, the radio controlled by the Al Fatah guerrilla group, said following the latest incident that a dialogue between the king and guerrillas had ended, to be replaced by "the language of bullets and explosions."

The Black September group—the organization which claimed responsibility for the Tel assassination and the London shooting—pledged to eliminate all Arab leaders, especially those of the Jordanian regime— the group considered to be anti-Palestinian.

Jordanian officials believe future attacks will be directed against Jordanians or Jordanian property outside the Hashemite kingdom.

In the last round of fighting the guerrilla presence inside the country was eliminated, making operations there the most difficult to mount.

While talks between the two sides were in progress, which was as recently as last month, there was always a possibility some accommodation might be reached.

It seemed unlikely now that these contacts would be resumed in the foreseeable future.

Thus, any chance of stopping the guerrilla campaign rested with moderate Arab countries such as Egypt which still retained influence with the guerrillas and Jordan.

Egypt was embarrassed that the Tel assassination occurred in Cairo, but it has seemed disinclined or, perhaps, incapable of influencing the guerrillas against repeat incidents—as long as they did not happen in Egypt.

At one point in guerrilla history such tactics were employed only by extremist groups such as the Popular Front for the liberation of Palistine (PFLP) which hijacked three airliners to the Jordanian desert last year.

Fatah, long considered the most moderate guerrilla organization, was said to be the mother of the Black September group. This being so it pushed most of the guerrilla movement toward extremist action and shortened the chances that an accommodation might eventually be reached.

With Jordan incapable of retaliating against the guerrillas who no longer operate from its territory, and with Arab nations either supporting the campaign or refusing to intercede, there seemed to be no early chance of stopping the attacks.

"King Hussein can tell his representatives to be careful and then wait for the next attack," one diplomatic observer said. Adv for pms Mon: Dec. 20

A Major Task For Apollo 16 Trip: Cosmic Rays

By AL ROSSITER JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Apollo 16's astronauts will carry a spenial array of cosmic ray detectors to the moon in March to find out more about the mysterious particles that can streak through men and their spacecraft.

Cosmic rays are atomic particles that travel through space at nearly the speed of light. Some come from the sun but the most powerful cosmic rays come from all directions outside the solar system.

When they pass through plastic and other materials, they leave a trail of damage less than a millionth of an inch wide. Such tracks have been found in plastic helmets worn by Apollo astronauts. Cosmic rays passing through space pilots' eyes are believed to be responsible for the light flashes seen by astronauts with their eyes closed.

Scientists say such cosmic ray penetration is of no concern to astronauts spending only a few days in space. But there has been research to indicate that men flying on two-year missions to planets without adequate shielding might suffer a potentially harmful amount of body cell damage from cosmic rays.

A four-foot long cosmic ray detector consisting of four hinged panels has been attached to the outside of the Apollo 16 moon lander. Apollo 16 astronauts John W. Young, Thomas K. Mattingly and Charles M. Duke are scheduled for launch to the moon March 17 and they will spend 12 days in space.

The panels are made up mostly of thin sheets of the kind of high impact strength plastic used in spacesuits helmets. Other types of plastic also are used and there are several glass samples.

As a cosmic ray passes through the plastic, it will leave a distinctive track which will be enlarged for laboratory study after the astronauts bring the folded detector back to earth. The shape of each track should reveal the kind of particle that made it.

The cosmic ray detector was built by the General Electric Co., and was designed by GE scientists and researchers from the University of California at Berkeley and Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

GE said the Apollo 16 experiment may answer the most important and puzzling questions about cosmic rays— how old are they?

The study of the mass, energy and abundance of cosmic ray particles penetrating the detectors also should provide new information about the origin of elements in the universe, GE said.

Included in the glass samples is a thin slice of a tektite, a puzzling glassy rock found in large number in some areas on earth. Scientists believe they are hardened drops of rock melted and splashed about by meteorite impacts, but it is not known whether they came from the earth or the moon.

By subjecting an unexposed piece of a tektite to cosmic rays during the Apollo 16 mission, scientists will get the necessary calibration data to see whether or not the tracks found in tektites were the result of an exposure of a few seconds or a few days. That would help answer whether they came from the earth or moon.

Trial Sought For Some Pakistanis

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

India is considering requests by the new Bangla Desh government to turn over former Pakistani officials in East Pakistan for trial as war criminals, Foreign Secretary T.N. Kaul said today.

Leaders in the new government have asked for the arrest of Dr. A.M. Malik, the former governor of the eastern wing, eight of his ministers and 21 other Pakistani officials on charges of genocide against the East Pakistani people during nine months of civil and fullscale war.

Kaul said that while India was bound by the Geneva Convention to take steps for the protection and repatriation of war prisoners, the government would consider the Bengali requests.

It is up to the Bangla Desh government to make investigations and place any evidence of crimes by individuals in the hands of the Indian army, Kaul said, adding that the Geneva conventions do not provide immunity to soldiers from criminal charges.

In Dacca, meanwhile, the Indian army chief of staff Gen. S.H.F.J. Manekshaw said today he hoped to withdraw about 25,000 Indian troops from East Bengal together with all Pakistani soldiers in camps in Bengla Desh now.

UPI correspondent Kenneth J. Braddick reported that Manekshaw also said a substantial Indian force would remain in the new nation for some time.

The request was the first from the new government asking Bengalis to stop reprisals against non-Bengalis since the 14-day war between India and Pakistan ended Dec. 17.

An Indian official said earlier Indian troops would not step into local affairs and planned no action to try to stop communal strife.

Bengali residents of the People's Republic of Bangla Desh—formerly East Pakistan —said West Pakistani troops and collaborators committed thousands of atrocities in the country since civil war broke out March 25.

A number of reprisal murders have been reported since Pakistan surrendered to Indian troops and rebel Mukti Bahini forces.

An estimated 250,000 non Bengalis are reported kept prisoner in two towns near Dacca—Murpur and Mohammedpur. A rebel blockade is keeping out food and medical supplies.

Also Western newsmen who visited the ferry crossing town of Goalunda on the Ganges River about 45 miles southwest of Dacca Sunday reported seeing piles of non-Bengali bodies in the area.

UPI Correspondent Kenneth J. Braddick in Dacca reported D. P. Dhar, an Indian cabinet-level foreign affairs expert, said the Indian army would take no steps to help the nonBengalis but he had been assured food and medicine would be provided.

"You must remember that the wounds are fresh. Some of those wounds were inflicted on the Bengali people by those who are now complaining they are starving," Dhar said.

"The battle for freedom has been won. We are now facing a much more serious challenge. We now have the battle for reconstruction of the country. We cannot reconstruct and build a new order without peace," the government said in a special statement.

Among other business tomorrow, the commission will consider sign standards for Northgate shopping center and a policy statement for the style, color and type of telephone booths the commission would like used in San Rafael.

CLASSROOMS DESTROYED BY ARSON

Firemen conferred yesterday in the ruins of a wing of Santa Venetia Middle School, preparing to seek clues to a costly Christmas night fire that reduced four classrooms to charred rubble. (See story, other photos, page 1.) Damage was estimated to run to about $100,000. The fire was deliberately set according to Marin County Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli.

Suspected Pot Party Nets Eight Arrests

Petaluma police broke up what they said was a pot party yesterday, but ruefully reported that half the participants escaped through a rear door and eluded arrest.

Eight others were arrested on charges ranging from being in a place where narcotics are used to battery on a peace officer.

Police said neighbors complained of a loud party at 163 Webster Street at 2 a.m. yesterday. When three officers arrived they said narcotics were observed throughout the house. Fifteen persons were believed to have been at the party, but seven escaped before a fourth officer could be called in to assist.

Booked into Sonoma County jail on felony charges were Dawn Corrinne Fowler, 20, of 163 Webster Street, possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs and obstructing a police officer; Larry John Patton, 20, of 1400 Second Street, San Rafael, battery on a peace officer and being in a place where nacotics are used; Tommy Jay Logan, 22, of 163 Webster Street, battery on a peace officer, possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs; and Ricky Bernard Joseph, 19, of 331 English Street, Petaluma, battery on a peace officer, possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

Released to appear in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court on Jan. 3, on charges of being in a place where narcotics are used were Marilyn V. Ferrera, 20, of 427 Fourth Street, Petaluma; Thomas Dale Firestone, 22, of 78 Wilmington Drive, Petaluma; Dennis Joseph Silva, 21, of 315 Seventh Street, Petaluma; and Donald Figone, 20, of 317 Wilson Street, Petaluma.

Those arrested on felony charges were scheduled to be arraigned today in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court.

Armed Man Robs Station

Menzion's Mobile service station in Mill Valley was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash at 7:45 p.m. yesterday by an armed bandit who locked the station attendant in a restroom.

Mill Valley police said attendant Michael Wagener reported a man came to the service station at 530 East Blithedale Avenue, pulled a gun and told him to open the cash box.

After removing the contents, the bandit locked Wagener in a restroom and fled, according to Wagener.

The robber was described as of Latin-American ancestry, 6 feet-2 inches, 160 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a brown suede jacket, dark trousers and dark-rimmed glasses.

'Gift' Bomb Kills Mayor

MANILA (UPI)—A bomb hidden inside a red ball of cheese and wrapped as a Christmas gift killed a newlyelected Filipino town mayor in his midtown Manila hotel suite Sunday night, police said today.

Jose Cruz, 36, was dead on arrival at nearby Manila Doctors' Hospital with multiple wounds in the neck, stomach and legs. Cruz was elected mayor of the coastal fishing town of Malabon northwest of Manila and had been staying at Manila's Shellborne Arms Hotel prior to assuming office Jan. 1.

The bomb explosion shattered the hotel suite's glass panes, ripped pieces of furniture and other articles inside the room and set fire to the curtains and the bed.

Pioneers' Descendants Forsaking Soil For Concrete

By JESSE BOGUE
U.P. International

In 1870, Elmer Zeis' grandfather loaded his household goods into a wagon and left New York state for the West, to the 3-year-old state of Nebraska.

It was not a unique event. By the thousands, others were doing the same or already had headed for those rich prairies beyond the Mississippi and the Missouri.

But Elmer Zeis still is on a Nebraska farm, living in the farmhouse where he was born, working 600 acres of level land northeast of the town of Valley, 18 miles west of the bustling city of Omaha where other descendants of the covered-wagon voyagers now live the urban life.

Zeis, a hard-working and thoughtful man, represents a declining breed—a farmer who has stayed on the land. He plans to continue his life there.

So does Jack Shafer, fifty-ish and a working grain farmer who took over his father's wheatland near Calvin, N.D., population 78; and Leo F. Howes, Moretown Common, Vt., who said he has "been farmin' for 41 years. It's changed quite a bit."

They all have ideas about what has happened to the small American farmer and why his problems—costs, prices, labor supply, marketing obstacles—continue to grow.

In 1949, an estimated 26 million persons were on farms, representing 17.5 per cent of the total United States population at that time. In 1959, it was down to 16.6 million, representing 9.4 per cent of the total, or a little more than half of what had been the proportion 10 years earlier. By 1969, it was 10.3 million, 5.1 per cent of the total; and the estimated population for 1970 was 9.7 million, or 4.7 per cent.

Out in Zeis' home state, some agriculturists think the decline must level off. Nebraska Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher sees the downward trend as primarily from financial causes, but he says that "today, with the equipment we've got and the money it costs, we don't need a man out there on every little patch of ground."

Norman Beller, head of the state-federal division of agricultural statistics in the Cornhusker state, says "There has been no slacking off on this downward trend, but some time there's got to be." Zeis, helped out by his wife, Irene, and sons Mike, 14, and David, 12, grows about 330 acres of corn, some hay, and feeds about 300 head of cattle a year. He is a Farm Bureau member, and president of the Douglas County Extension Board.

Asked to pinpoint the main problem facing farmers, he gave an answer which might be typical of any small businessman: crop and livestock prices might be satisfactory if it were not for the skyrocketing costs of equipment and maintenance.

"You can't get a piece of small equipment for under $1,000," he said. "The combine I bought this fall cost $20,000; I pay all that and use it one month out of the year. Then I have to trade a piece or two each year just to keep current."

A tractor of the type he uses costs $10,000; a smaller model, $8,000; a disc, $2,500; a grinder, $2,700; a feedwagon, $1,500.

Zeis estimates he has $50,000 tied up in machinery, and another $25,000 in storage buildings and bins. "It's just as if someone in the city would try to get along with what they made 30 years ago," he said.

Cost factors are almost as bad in the livestock area, he continued. Buy beef for feeding at $36.50 per hundred pounds; add to that the costs of feed; a death loss of 1 to 2 per cent; 7 to 7 1-2 per cent interest on money borrowed to buy livestock; machinery prices; fence and building upkeep, veterinary costs...

"We're not crybabies," Zeis said. "I just want to stay on the farm.

"We're still waiting for things to get better. Ten years ago, I would have thought by now we would not have any financial problems —and we shouldn't, but we do.

"I keep doing more very year to try and expand—like I want to put 100 more acres in crops and increase my feeding operation. Yet, I'm afraid of the prices.

"I don't think the government has solved anything since it began creating agricultural programs," Zeis continued, "but I don't think now it could leave suddenly. I wouldn't prefer any more permanent help from the government; but they got us into it, they should get us out ... pricing and tax relief are things the government could do pretty easily."

But he sees some reason for cheer for himself and others like him.

"Something has got to change because people have to be fed," he said. "And there's now way to do it without the family farm."

A half-continent away, costs figure high among the reasons cited by Vermont Agriculture Commissioner Edward Eurich for the disappearance of the small farmer—these, plus belief of many that it is easier to make a living in other fields. The number of family farms in Vermont shrank from 26,000 in 1925 to 5,000 in 1967, and are down to 4,000 today.

Howes said it is getting tougher by the year to operate a small farm. He has 331 acres, and 30 milk cows on them.

"Used to get by milking only a few cows," he said. "Gotta milk more now. We're a family farm. Got one fellow who works for me, but how long he stays depends on how long I stay in business.

"It's hard to get help these days, you know. It's hard to get good dependable help. You gotta be mechanized. Big investment even with a small farm. The expense is terrible. The price of milk is good—but expenses! Electrical work is bad, and expensive, and so is machine fixing."

In Limestone, Maine, on land he said his father "carved out of the wilderness" before the turn of the century, Hamer R. Ward Sr., 70, now rents out 280 acres of prime potato crop land, and takes in rent on apartments from airmen at nearby Loring Air Force Base.

"Just like all independent businesses, we're falling by the wayside, and I think it's a bad thing for the country," said Ward.

He resents what he said is the way the processing industry is controlling farmers. "Now the fresh market is gone for these potatoes," he said.

"We have to go through processors. Everything is getting under control of a few big people and the chains are taking over." In Fresno, California, in the land from which much of the United States gets its fruits and other land products, Vernon Wynn is manager of the Production Credit Association, source of farm loans.

Wynn said the average loan made by PCA was $20,000 in 1961, and has jumped to about $75,000 today. Farmers are having a tough time meeting expenses from their own resources, he said, and are borrowing for longer periods of time.

In some cases, he has told a farmer to find an "outside" job, or even to have his wifa get a job in order to make enough money to live upon.

Yet he refuses to lose hope in the small farmer.

"As long as he can remain economical, and I think he can, the small farmer will exist," said Wynn. "And everybody will benefit.

FIRE DAMAGES HOUSE, BURNS CAR

Fire of undetermined origin burned the garage, car and upstairs bedroom at the home of James Frush Jr. at 352 Riviera Drive in the Peacock Gap section of San Rafael. Michael, 10, first smelled the smoke and told his mother, Patricia, who looked into the garage to find it a mass of flames. Neighbors called in the alarm at 4:04 p.m. Friday as the Frush's telephone had already burned out. Damage was estimated by firemen at $10,000 to the house and $8,000 to the contents, including the 1969 Buick Riviera. It took two fire trucks and eight men from the San Rafael Fire Department 10 minutes to control the blaze, said Fire Chief Robert E. Marcucci.

San Quentin Inmate Just Walks Away

Leroy Reno, 25, was discovered missing at 11:45 a.m., according to Joseph R. O'Brien, the prison's information officer.

Reno was serving a six months to 10 years sentence for an assault with a deadly weapon conviction in Los Angeles County and another six months to five years sentence for an attempted escape from the state department of corrections medical facility at Vacaville. He had been at San Quentin since July 1967 and was to be paroled April 10, 1972, O'Brien said.

He was probably wearing prison denims when he escaped O'Brien said.

Convict's Attorney Plea Before Judge

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court today took under submission a request by San Quentin convict Louis N. Talamantez to swap attorneys.

Talamantez, one of six inmates accused of murder, conspiracy and assault in the bloody prison uprising of last Aug. 21, wants attorney G. Douglas Vaughn of San Rafael to defend him.

Attorney Louis F. Hawkins of San Rafael, who was appointed by the court to represent Talamantez, asked to be relieved from the case.

Judge McGuire said he had several other motions by attorney Steven Koolpe to consider this afternoon. Koolpe, court-appointed attorney for another San Quentin inmate, John Larry Spain, wants the court to keep sealed the transcript of grand jury proceedings which led to the indictment of six inmates and missing attorney Stephen M. Bingham.

Koolpe also wants permission to inspect inmate Spain's files including his prison records and disciplinary actions taken against him. The attorney maintains that prison officials refuse to show him those files.

Baboon Dies Of Old Age

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Waldo, a mandrill baboon who didn't care for the opposite sex, has died of old age at the Woodland Park Zoo.

Keepers said Waldo died Sunday and had been a resident of the zoo for nearly 25 years. They added they did not know when he was born but the average life span for a baboon was 10 to 15 years.

The keepers said Waldo was a misogynist and, in fact, had killed two of his prospective mates.

"Maybe that's why he lived so long," said one keeper at the monkey house where Waldo lived alone.

Flood Control Project Pact on County Agenda

The Marin County supervisors, meeting tomorrow at 1 p.m. at the Civic Center, will consider an agreement assuring the Army Corps of Engineers of the county's intention to continue with the Corte Madera Creek flood control project.

The agreement promises that the Marin County Flood Control District will fulfill the corps' requirements for acquision of rights of way, easements and utility relocations prior to construction of Phase Four of the project.

Phase Four, being protested by some Ross residents, calls for continuation of the concrete flood control channel upstream from the Lagunitas Bridge in Ross to a point near the Ross-San Anselmo boundary.

The board's agenda calls for a two-hour meeting tomorrow.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors is expected also:

LUCAS VALLEY — To consider annexing the 285-acre Thomas A. Nunes ranch in Upper Lucas Valley to the Lucas Valley County Service Area. Annexation of the property is the first step toward purchase of the land which the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association hopes to keep in open space.

PRISONERS — To consider a new contract with Sonoma County for the housing of Marin County prisoners. The contract calls for a 95-cent hike in the present $8.62 per day rate paid for each prisoner. The increase is estimated to cost an additional $13,800 over the next year.

MASTER PLAN — To consider a contract with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation for an architectural review of the Civic Center master plan. Included in the $18,000 review will be plans for the county's ballet building.

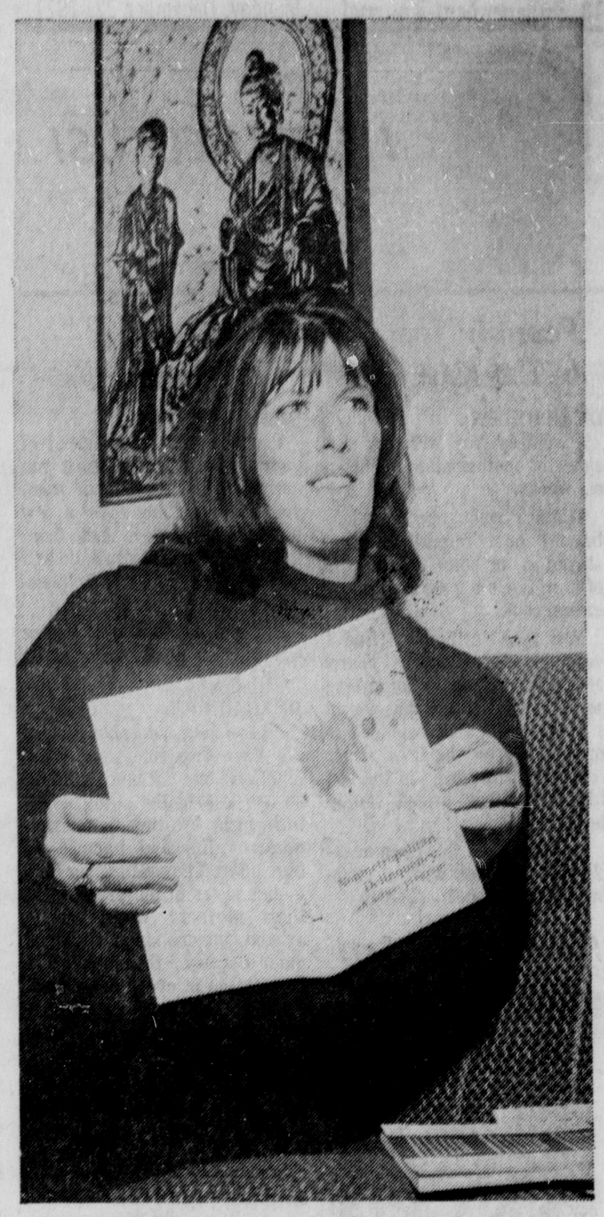
JUNE SCHWARCA displays one of her favorite pieces made from copper foil that was among 25 pieces of her sculpture exhibited in September in the Museum Bellerive in Zurich, Switzerland. Marin women artists and artisans create sculpture, paintings, tapestries, weaving and ceramics in their studios and homes.

CLUB AND organization women spent hundreds of volunteer hours on their projects. Here Mrs. William Fuss and Robert Steele try out the kitchen installed mostly by volunteers for the Pathfinders' new Tea Room at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. They serve meals throughout the week at the center.



BECAUSE SHE cares about keeping troubled youngsters out of deeper trouble, Novato resident Dyanne Bohner started an action program to nip delinquency among youths. She enlisted cooperation from the police and probation department to set up a volunteer program "KINSHIP," that uses a family-based approach.

Marin Women: A Variety Of Talents

By BARBARA HOSMER

Was there a typical Marin woman in 1971? If so, which one was she?

This past year Marin women wrote music, painted award-winning pictures, taught retarded children useful skills, did surgery on animals, sailed yachts, worked a sheep ranch, learned wilderness survival, marched for peace, collected for UNICEF, nursed the sick and wrote books.

They served as phone pals to lonely people, sang songs ranging from grand opera to rock, registered 18-year-old voters, raised champion bulls, worked to clean up the environment, lobbied for and against abortion laws, made tray favors for the convalescing, hiked and rode trails, and did cancer research.

Others lobbied for women's rights, flew airplanes, designed clothes, lectured at colleges, went back to college, served as docents at the De Young Museum, guided youngsters through the Audubon Canyon Ranch, taught each other skills, helped fix up the Senior Citizens Depot, counseled young people and studied law.

They also did the things "expected" of suburban women — played tennis, golf and bridge, held fashion shows, raised charity monies, sewed, gardened, reared children, and washed countless clothes and dishes.

Others were summertime fire watchers on lonely hilltops. Some rose to high offices in their organizations, and a few climbed Mount Whitney.

The girls have started a horse breeding and boarding business. Doctor of veterinary medicine Carrie A. Corvin (photo right) owns and operates her own veterinary hospital in Marin.

ALICE GATTERDAM took to raising black Angus as a profession and has won top prizes with her champion bulls for breeding and show. She taught herself the cattle business and runs her own 100-acre Gam Ranch.

VOLUNTEER THERAPIST Gert Foley of San Rafael encourages Jimmy Norton with his heavy locked roller skates. On crutches since she was a teen-ager, Mrs. Foley supervises early day classes for physically or mentally handicapped young children from eight Marin schools at Marin Skateland in San Rafael. Young Jimmy attends Forest Meadows Development Center.

SINGER LOU Rawls recorded a song, "How Thoughtless I've Become," written by Mrs. Charles Klieman in her home in Sausalito. The songwriter, who uses her maiden name, Thelma Gates, turned to composing when she was unable to find a teaching job. Singers Robert Goulet and Leslie Gore also have shown interest in recording her songs.

PLEASED WITH the rack of lamb being taken out of the oven by Mrs. Harold Becker (right) is Mrs. Alan Jarach, vice-president of the Marin Symphony Association. Audrey Jarach and Ruth Becker were among the association board members who cooked and served a gourmet meal to 40 guests of the Melville Owens in Ross. The guests were unaware of being served by non-professionals until Mrs. Owen announced that the dinner was the result of her winning bid at the 1970 Marin Symphony auction.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Possibly The Theft Of Jewelry Is The Key Question At Hand

DEAR HELEN:

I went to stay with my sick sister in another state for about six weeks.

While I was gone, my husband's best friend (female) stayed in our home to take care of him. She's a good housekeeper and cook.

Now that I'm home, I find a very expensive set of pearls and my mother's wedding ring set is missing. I also discovered a gold brooch that belonged to my mother on the floor under our bed. It had been in the box with the other prized family jewelry.

DEAR TOOK:

Perhaps this "best friend of your husband's" figures if you are willing to share your man, you won't quibble over a few pieces of jewelry. Let them know where your values lie and you may get your "irreplaceable" possessions back.

. . . But I still think you're worrying about the wrong theft. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I have four adorable nieces. We have two fine sons, aged eight and ten, but no daughters, so we especially enjoy these little girls. We buy them inexpensive gifts and have them over often. They return our love — but never in the presence of their mother! When she is around, they're standoffish and quiet because, though she's a fine person in every other way, she becomes angry and terribly possessive when others give attention to her children.

Here are examples:

1. She made her daughters refuse ice cream we bought them and our sons. Said she "could buy cones for them herself."

2. She tore out the ribbon I put in her two-year-old's hair when I baby-sat. Said she didn't like ribbons.

She ripped off a dress I bought for my godchild (her oldest daughter) and said the color was wrong for her. Most of our gifts she throws away.

4. She will not allow me or my husband to help dish out food to the children when we are together for family meals, though she helped our sons when they were younger.

Needless to say, these episodes upset the youngsters and cause tears. I "keep my distance," but sometimes it's hard, with kids you truly love.

Yet my sister-in-law is kind and loving in other ways, and so good to our sons. She only becomes hostile when I try discussing this with her.

Are these over-ossessive mothers afraid their children will stop loving them if they also love other people? — CONFUSED AUNT

DEAR AUNT:

Over-possessiveness stems from jealousy, which has its roots in insecurity. And insecure people are constantly fearful that others are better loved.

I hope your sister-in-law will somehow come to realize that love is like an outdoor climbing plant: Push it into a small dark, stifling place and, even though pampered, it soon dies. But if you let it grow naturally, with only a little "direction," it reaches out to become stronger and more beautiful each day. — H.

3-Pronged Attack On Mounting Trash

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — In this age of acrimony, it is rare to see industry, labor and private groups all on the same side of a major public issue.

But that is the case with solid waste, the polite words for ordinary trash and garbage. While controversy continues to plague efforts to control air and water pollution, there is growing accord on most elements of the trash problem.

There also is less urgency, according to one group of experts known as the National Center for Resource Recovery Inc. Officials of the Center set some sort of a record the other day by holding a press conference to acknowledge that there is "a problem but not a crisis." In Washington it is rare to have a press conference to herald anything but a crisis.

But the problem is mighty big — and could become a crisis if progress is not made faster in finding ways to solve it. Some four billion tons of solid waste are generated in this country each year, an average of about five pounds per person per day in homes and businesses.

THE COST of handling this mess is also high: about $5 billion a year, making it the third largest municipal expense after roads and schools. Although trash and garbage may not yet be a national crisis, the problem has reached that stage in many towns and cities.

The shortage of land for dumping trash and the pollution of air and water by trash are only two of the biggest problems.

The National Center for Resource Recovery Inc. is a joint effort of injustry and labor formed a year ago. It has a $2 million budget to help find ways to make trash removal profitable (through recoverable materials) and to speed the process through exchange of information.

Research studies have already led center officials to conclude that substantial recovery of valuable resources from refuse is attainable and that such efforts are preferred over disposal. Pilot projects, with government assistance, have proven the value of recovery processes.

Richard L. Lesher, president of the center, acknowledges that individuals contribute very little of the over-all problem. "Litter is a very, very tiny part of the problem," he says.

But that does not mean the individual cannot make a large contribution to solving the problem by reducing trash and garbage. Concern Inc., a well known citizens group, has just issued "Eco-Tips No. 3," with advice to people who want to take an active role.

The group suggests cutting down on disposable items by buying returnable products and reusable materials whenever possible. It also suggests buying in bulk, avoiding fancy packages and eliminating extra bags and boxes.

POLITICAL ACTION is also urged. The group suggests that consumers demand the use of recycled paper in government and business offices. And it advises people to find out what happens to their own trash and garbage to make certain that it does not add unduly tg existing pollution.

Natuarlly enough, single copies are available without charge from Concern Inc., 2233 Wisconsin Avenue, NW., Washington, D.C., 20007. Bulk copies cost $5 per hundred.

With groups like this and the National Center for Resource Recovery, the United States may yet keep the solid waste problem from becoming a full blown crisis.

State's Method Of Treating Youth Offenders Paying Off

By LIZ LAGUE

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — "In 1960 California's institutions (California Youth Authority) were full and wards had to sleep in the halls," says Dr. Marguerite Q. Warren, program director for the Center for Training in Differential Treatment, Human Learning Systems, a private, non-profit research organization that contracts with the CYA.

Dr. Warren said this was because the number of youngsters coming into the corrections system at that time was going up.

"If the rate hadn't changed," she added, "the state would have had to double its bed space."

Now, 10 years later, the CYA is able to close one of its institutions.

What Dr. Warren terms "one of the most impactful systems in the world" started in 1961 with the CYA decision to begin the Community Treatment Project (CTP), including in-depth research on treatment of offenders.

She joined the CYA in 1960, bringing with her experience in classification of youths, and also in treatment gained while working with the military.

THE BASIC question the CTP research is answering is "What kinds of kids benefit from what kinds of treatment?"

With funding from the National Institute of Mental Health, a federal agency, and the CYA, California began something no other government in the world had — compiling extensive research data on the treatment of juvenile offenders.

"California is a leading light in the world," said Dr. Warren, "because it was willing to try something innovative and back it with intensive research."

This research has provided comparison of treatment in institutions with treatment in home communities, plus data on which treatment is best suited for which type of youth.

After years of study, Dr. Warren can now state "the community program offers a preferable method of treatment for many youths."

IS IS THE SUCCESS of treatment of offenders in their community — while living at home or in foster homes — and the impact of this kinding on local probation programs that has greatly reduced the number referred to the state system. This, plus more effective treatment within the CYA, has reduced the number committed to state institutions, and made construction of new institutions unnecessary.

To determine the kind of treatment an individual juvenile needs, a nine-way classification system called Interpersonal Maturity Level (I-level) is used.

Once the I-level is determined, through testing and interviews, the youth is matched to a worker whose natural style he will be most likely to respond to, and an individual treatment program planned.

"Some case workers have an authoritarian approach, others have a low-threat, protective approach," explained Dr. Warren.

"This matching of child with adult workers could have great implications for public schools," she added.

Five "worker styles" have been classified for matching with the nine juvenile maturity levels.

NOW CALIFORNIA is sharing what has been learned over the past decade with the rest of the world.

"We're trying to develop a training model to teach people in other agencies how to run this kind of program," continued Dr. Warren.

The training includes a five-week concentrated session in Sacramento with four Human Learning Systems teachers. Trainees have come from several states and Canadian provinces. An upcoming session will include a trainee from Australia.

In addition, Dr. Warren is frequently invited to visit and talk with juvenile corrections staffs in other states and countries.

She attended the VI International Congress on Criminology in Madrid, Spain, in 1970, presenting a research paper on correctional treatment in community setting throughout theworld.

Dr. Warren recommends research as a good way for women to get in corrections and other fields traditionally male-dominated.

Convenience Food Bargains

Some convenience foods cost less than making the same foods from scratch, according to Better Homes and Gardens nutritionists.

Best convenience food bargains are frozen orange juice concentrate, bottled lemon juice, canned and frozen peas, cake mixes, canned soups and instant coffee.

When time is particularly short, although the cost is slightly higher, frozen French fried potatoes, refrigerated biscuits, muffin mixes and pudding mixes are economical convenience foods.

First Anniversary Dinner Party Held

By MOLLY MARIN

Mr. and Mrs. William King of San Rafael hosted the first wedding anniversary of Mr. King's niece and her husband, the Terril Retters of Manhattan Beach, with a family dinner party.

Attending the event in the King's Fairhills home Thursday were Mr. King's sisters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilkinson of Burlingame, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jones of Pasadena and Mrs. Florence Enos of Santa Rosa. Mr. Jones is a scout for the New York Yankees.

And also Mrs. Enos' daughter, Dolores Enos of Santa Rosa, sister of Mrs. Retter, and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Pincus of Novato and the Arthur G. Lindauers of Marin Country Club Estates.

THE LINDAUERS will entertain tomorrow at a family dinner in honor of Sgt. and Mrs. John Pritchard. Sergeant Pritchard is their grandson, and the couple is in Marin visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pritchard of San Rafael. Sergeant Pritchard has been stationed at Altus, Okla., for a year and has been accepted for Officers' Candidate School.

AN EGGNOG party was given Wednesday by Mrs. Harry Flachs for her new neighbor in the Marin Country Club Estates, Mrs. Benjamin Levenger. The Levengers, former Peninsula residents, have bought the home of Dr. and Mrs. Alvin Haag, who have moved to Belvedere.

Butter Balls

Lemon butter balls are good with fish. Make these by adding one tablespoon each of lemon juice and chopped parsley to two tablespoons butter. Blend well and roll into balls.

Couple Marry In San Rafael

Mrs. Mary Belle Bullard Greenlaw of Walnut Creek and Albert S. Giesecke of San Rafael were married yesterday at the bridegroom's home. Family members and close friends attended the wedding.

For the 4 p.m. ceremony the bride's daughter, Mrs. William Clark, was the honor attendant. Dr. Lewis Vickers Giesecke of Denver, Colo., served as best man for his brother.

The couple will make their home in San Rafael.

The new Mrs. Giesecke is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Noble Bullard of Woodland. She attended Woodland High School, Dominican Convent and College and the California College of Arts and Crafts.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Max Giesecke of Denver and the late Mr. Giesecke, is owner of Western Graphics in San Francisco. A former Mill Valley city councilman, he attended East Denver High School, Colorado College and Art Center Schol, in Los Angeles.

The Best Approach To Menu Planning

The best way to approach menu planning is to plan menus for several days at a time. Gather together newspaper food advertisements, cook books and recipes and the Basic Four Food Guide.

Consider nutrition, family preferences, current good food buys, preparation time, food on hand.

No Morning Coaxing Needed

There'll be no coaxing in the morning to get the children, or any other member of the family, to eat breakfast if a little variety is injected into the way food is served.

Try serving cereal, whether hot or cold, topped with a scoop of a favorite-flavored ice cream and slices of fruit.

Brezhnev Wants '72 To Be His Year

MOSCOW (UPI)—If Leonid I. Brezhnev has his way, 1972 will be a year of progress on all fronts for the Soviet Union.

It will also be the year of Brezhnev.

The Communist Party General Secretary and his policies dominated the Soviet Union during 1971, a year that saw Brezhnev rise to new heights of prestige and power. He emerged from beneath a veil of facelessness to reveal a bluff, bearish human side of him that the world never had seen.

His emergence was no accident. It was part and parcel of a carefully planned Soviet public relations campaign that targeted 1972 as a year of decision for the Soviet Union, for Europe, for the United States and for the world.

Brezhnev and his Soviet colleagues launched in 1971, a "peace offensive" that has the goal of building a new world order. If he has his way, it will be a world order arranged to work to the advantage of the Soviet Union and its Communist allies.

—A dissolution of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and its East bloc equivalent, the Warsaw Pact.

—A complete U.S. withdrawal from Southeast Asia.

—The buildup of Soviet armed forces, both strategic and tactical, that will be as good as or better than those of the United States.

Western diplomats see the first and the last elements as the keys to all the others. A new Soviet world order must have its policemen to enforce it. It is exactly that basic military point that gives the Soviet bid credibility.

Soviet bloc armed forces have never been stronger. In many military areas the Soviet Union is quickly surpassing the United States, including some areas of traditional U.S. dominance, such as nuclear missile armed submarines.

The authoritative military publication, "Jane's Weapons Systems," reported in 1971 that the Soviet Union has taken the initiative in research and development of sophisticated weaponry, rather than following the American lead.

Most Western experts have predicted Soviet superiority in nearly every major category by 1975, from missiles and submarines to tanks and troops.

Working to Soviet advantage is growing sentiment in the United States for a cutback in military spending and a pullback of American troops from Indochina and elsewhere.

The Kremlin suffers no such pressures.

Should NATO be dissolved, the Warsaw pact probably would vanish—on paper—at the same time. But geographical and ideological solidity of the Soviet bloc would mean that a multinational Communist force will remain in fact, if not in form.

The other elements of the Soviet "big plan"—trade, Vietnam, the Middle East and China—also are developing in general conformance with Soviet desires.

On the trade level, more and more Western nations, the United States and its NATO partners included, are rushing to the Soviet marketplace with everything from orange juice to digital computers. Trade barriers fall daily, and the Soviet Union is the primary benefactors.

In Vietnam, the United States is on the verge of complete pullout. The Soviets privately consider the war all but over, with Communist victory a certainty.

In the Middle East the Soviet position with the Arab nations has weakened, but not collapsed, and the Kremlin still can hope for a peace favorable to Soviet interests.

China and the Soviet Union continue their angry ideological attacks on each other, but government-to-government relations have improved. There is no indication that gunfire will break out soon along their borders.

Soviet plans could reach a decisive stage in May, when President Nixon meets Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Boeing Diversifies, Makes Fresh Water

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Boeing, the company that makes the 747 jumbojet, also is in the business of making fresh water out of sea water.

When the Boeing Co. realized that its market for airplanes was rapidly diminishing, it decided to diversify. And construction and operation of desalination plants is just one of many new enterprises Boeing has gone into.

The desalination project is a joint venture with El Paso Natural Gas, and Reading and Bates Offshore Drilling Co. The patent, which is held by Reading-Bates, once was held on option by Boeing, but the aerospace firm turned it down when the aircraft business was booming.

Boeing utilized its Kent plant, 12 miles south of Seattle, as a site for a pilot plant, which is capable of producing more than 2,000 gallons of fresh water a day by the evaporative desalination process.

After the pilot plant proved successful, Boeing put the process on the market.

The first customer is the Cancel Bay Plantation, a luxurious resort on St. John Island in the Caribbean, St. John is one of the Virgin Islands that does not have ample fresh water and must rely on imported water from St. Thomas Island.

The Boeing plant on St. John will be capable of producing 100,000 gallons of fresh water a day. The contract with the St. John developers is for eight years, starting in 1972. Boeing will install and operate the plant during that time. The original requirement, calls for furnishing only 60,000 gallons a day, with an option to increase that by 40,000 additional gallons.

Meantime, the pilot plant is being packed up and shipped to Roswell, N. M., where the Department of Interior will use it to take concentrated brine out of water from another plant. This is part of a continuing program to remove industrial pollution from water.

Throughout the world there are about 700 plants which daily turn brackish inland water or sea water into drinkable liquid.

All kinds of methods are used — freezing, boiling, forcing water through a membrane and shooting electric currents through it, and various techniques of evaporation.

The federal government is greatly involved in research involving desalination processes through Interior's Office of Saline Water.

Congress has authorized $27 million for this office for fiscal 1972. Twenty years ago the appropriation was $2 million.

Peru Road Funds Buy A Wedding

WASHINGTON (UPI) —When American contractors built a highway in Peru with U.S. government funds, part of the money went to finance a wedding, buy a stereo set, and build a house for the manager of the project.

The General Accounting Office (GAO), a government watchdog agency, made the charges in a weekend report. It said it probed the building of the $47 million Tarapoto-Rio Nieva highway project in Peru, acting on the tip of a disgruntled project engineer.

The project engineer was identified by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., as Charles Pettis, who worked for Brown & Root Overseas, Inc. Proxmire said Brown & Root was the engineering consultant and Morrison-Knudsen Inc. the contractor for the project, which was financed by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) and the Export-Import Bank.

GAO investigators charged another Brown & Root employe, who was not identified, used funds provided to buy meals for highway workers to pay for an orchestra, furniture rental, liquor, bartenders, waiters, flowers and hotel rooms for guests at his wedding and to buy stereo equipment, office furniture, silver and tools for construction of his house.

The GAO said the employe felt the use of government-paid labor to build his home was justified because there was a housing shortage in the area.

Pettis intended Brown & Root fired him and blackballed him in the U.S. engineering construction industry. He said he had been unable to find work since December, 1968.

Big, Small Planes Collide

VIENNA (UPI) —A swissair jetliner carrying 81 persons smashed into a private plane on a misty runway Sunday, killing the pilot of the smaller craft. No one aboard the jetliner was injured.

Officials said the cause of the crash was not immediately determined but an investigation is underway.

The DC9 twin-engine jetliner was traveling at 130 mph and was about to takeoff when it struck the Beechcraft 55, also a twin-engine craft, flown by Konrad Glatz, 65.

The DC9 pilot, Capt. Paul Frei, said he had been given permission to take off and was speeding down the runway when the light plane suddenly appeared.

Frei said he tried to swerve but it was too late to avoid hitting the smaller plane.

Many Wanted To See Snow

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—The urge to see snow the day after Christmas in California resulted in dozens of stranded motorists on the winding Mt. Hamilton road east of San Jose.

Hundreds of persons turned out to take a look at the white stuff, the California Highway Patrol said, and were stranded when a new freak snow fall hit.

All were cleared out by nightfall, although many stranded drivers kept their motors running until they ran out of gasoline.

Minor Injuries In Rear-End Collision

A 53-year-old Novato woman suffered minor injuries Thursday when her auto struck the rear of a trailer on Bel Marin Keys Boulevard, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Dorothy R. Webeck, of 912 Bel Marin Keys, was treated at Novato General Hospital for cuts and bruises following the 5 p.m. accident.

Officers said Mrs. Webeck, 59, was westbound on the street when her auto struck the trailer, driven by Henry Swart, 59, of Santa Rosa.

Bodega Bay Marina Plea

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Bodega Bay property owner has asked the Army Corps of Engineers for more time to complete a large marina development on the bay off Bay Flat Road.

Work has been authorized under a corps permit to Dec. 31, but Erin Shaw says she needs until March 31, 1973, to complete the project. About 70 per cent of the work has been done.

Citizen objections may be submitted in triplicate to the corps office, 100 McAllister Street, by Jan. 22.

GOOD MORNING

San Rafael Police Sgt. Charles Brobeck checks out an automobile which crashed into the residence of Lillian Freeman of 89 Brentwood Drive early today. Mrs. Freeman told police she heard a noise and saw lights at about 3 a.m., but did not investigate. She found the car in the lower bedroom at 6:45 a.m. The car, which had its lights, radio and ignition on, belongs to Richard Mackintosh of 27 Alderwood Court, which is across a courtyard from Mrs. Freeman. Mackintosh, according to police, said he and his wife went home from a party between 11 p.m. and midnight yesterday and that his wife returned to the party about 12:15 a.m. today, police said. Mackintosh said he did not know what time his wife returned home the second time from the party, and she was not talking, police said.

'Round 'N 'Round Driver Winds Up In Jail

A Fairfax man led California Highway Patrol officers around and around on Highway 101 and nearby roads in Corte Madera and Larkspur today in a chase that finally ended on the muddy banks of Corte Madera Creek.

Douglas Kersey Hoff, 19, of 23 Glen Drive, was covered with mud from head to toe when he was booked into Marin County Jail at 4:30 a.m. on suspicion of auto theft, driving without a license, drunken driving and resisting arrest.

He was held in lieu of $1,250 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

The Highway Patrol said officers Homen L. Fosdick and Roger R. Nagel spotted an auto weaving as it drove south on Highway 101 near Lucky Drive at 2:50 a.m.

They turned on their red light and siren and pursued the car, but it tookthe westbound Madera Boulevard exit, drove north on Tamal Vista Avenue and returned to the southbound freeway at Fifer Avenue.

With the officers still in pursuit, the car again took the Madera Boulevard exit and went north on Tamal Vista Avenue, north on Council Crest Drive, back onto Tamal Vista, then under the freeway to the east side and north on Lucky Drive, officers said.

The car finally came to a halt in a muddy field near Corte Madera Creek where Lucky Drive dead-ends, and Hoff ran from the vehicle and climbed onto a dock by the creek, officers said.

After a struggle with Fosdick and Nagel, Hoff was handcuffed but went limp and had to be dragged through the mud to the patrol car, officers said.

The car he was driving reportedly had been stolen 30 minutes before from Jack Ross, of 960 Bel Marin Keys, officers said. They reported Hoff told them he never had had a driver's license.

Immediate Remap Sought In Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Secretary of State Edmund Brown Jr., naming Gov. Ronald Reagan as defendant, today asked the state Supreme Court to reapportion the legislature immediately.

He said if a redistricting plan for the Assembly and Senate is not adopted by Jan. 15, it will be "impossible" for local officials in some counties to meet legal deadlines in preparing for the June 6 primary.

Brown, a Democrat, asked the court in a suit to adopt the reapportionment plans approved by the Democratic-controlled legislature Dec. 20 over Republican opposition.

The Assembly plan is designed to boost the current Democratic margin of 42-37 (one vacancy) to at least 44-36, while the Senate plan is aimed at protecting all 21 Democratic incumbents in the 40-member house.

Reagan has said he will veto the Senate and Assembly reapportionment bills. Republicans want him to veto the congressional plan as well.

Along with the reapportionment bills, the legislature also approved identical redistricting resolutions which are not subject to the governor's veto or signature. Brown accepted and filed the resolutions last week and said as far as he was concerned they had the full effect of law.

Brown, who said he filed the suit to prevent "massive chaos and confusion," insisted that if the primary election deadlines are not met, "the legal standing of the election itself will be in doubt."

"We could see the most chaotic election in California's history," the 33-year-old son of the former governor said.

He said Los Angeles County, the state's most populous, must have a final reapportionment plan by Jan. 15 and that other counties had expressed "grave doubts" that the primary could be conducted properly if redistricting was not accomplished by early January or at least by mid-month.

They included Alameda, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego and Fresno counties.

Instruments Stolen

Musical instruments valued at $492 were reported stolen yesterday from a portable classroom at Kenilworth Junior High School, Petaluma. The instruments included an electric guitar, tamborine and two snare drums.

Seamstress' Dope Case Hearing Set

A San Francisco seamstress faces a preliminary hearing in Marin Municipal Court on Jan. 11 on charges of having narcotics and dangerous drugs at the Marin Hall of Justice.

Laura Rennick, 23, of 923 Sanchez Street was arrested on Dec. 21 at the north entrance to the Hall of Justice after failing to pass the metal detector test.

Deputies said they found a cigarette box under her waistband, and the box contained a half dozen bullets of various caliber and pills and white substance which appeared to be codeine and methamphetamines.

According to investigators, Miss Rennick, a self-employed seamstress, said the cigarette box was given to her by a casual acquaintance and she was not aware of its contents.

Mars 'Oases' May Have Life

MOSCOW (UPI) —The Soviet Union's Mars 2 and Mars 3 probes are looking for "oases" on the red planet that might contain life.

Two scientists said Sunday the mission of the two unmanned craft orbiting Mars is "to study Mars thoroughly and see whether there are what might be called "oaseu on the surface —sections more suitable for life than others."

Writing in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, Prof. Georgi Petrov and Dr. V. Moroz said:

"The biosphere, if there is such, must be concentrated in such oases. They must be warmer and situated in low places where there is more moisture."

Meet Barbara. She's this year's airplane.

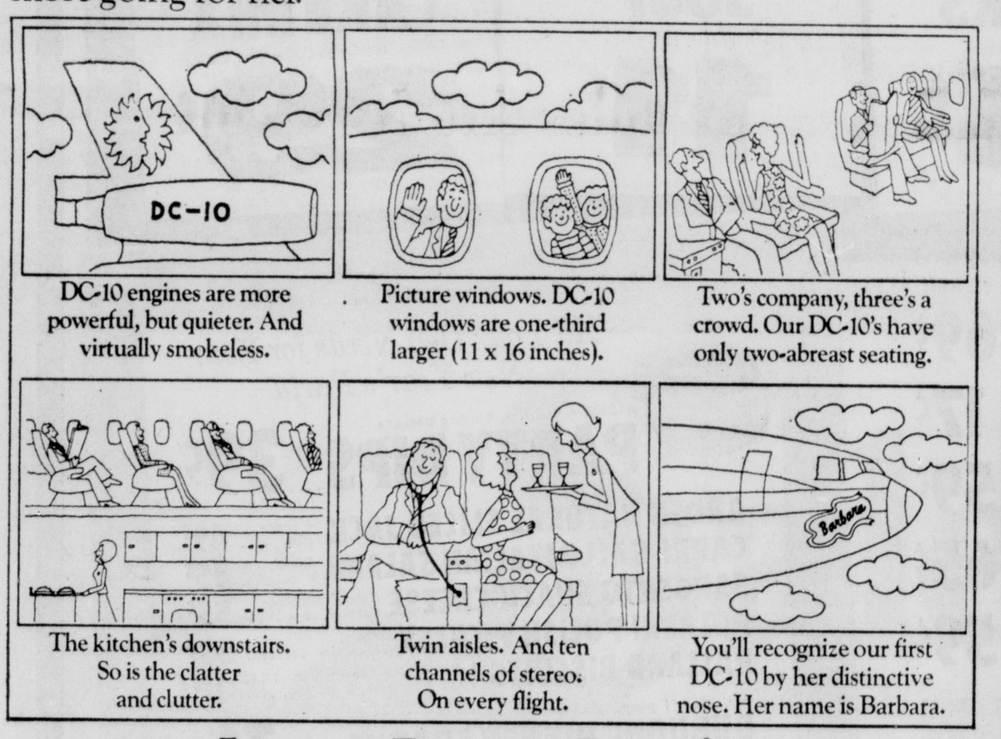
Fly Barbara. She's the first of our new fleet of DC-10's between San Francisco and Florida. She's big and beautiful. And luxuriously comfortable. And she's got a lot more going for her.



DC-10 engines are more powerful, but quieter. And virtually smokeless.

Two's company, three's a crowd. Our DC-10's have only two-abreast seating.

The kitchen's downstairs. So is the clatter and clutter.

Living Room Comfort

You get the kind of living room comfort you've always looked for on an airplane. You get armchair space. And you're never more than one seat from the aisle. In coach. You also get ten channels of stereo. On every flight.

Only National.

Only National has DC-10* service from San Francisco to Florida. Barbara flies daily nonstop to Tampa/St. Pete and direct to Miami and Fort Lauderdale. Every evening at 10:45. And it's a Night Coach, too. You'll save 20% over day coach fare. Our new DC-10 service is in addition to our five other daily flights from San Francisco to Miami.

FIRST COMMUTE BUS — "Number 190" was Marin County's first scheduled commute bus, carrying Tiburon and Belvedere residents to the Sausalito ferry beginning in 1934. It ran hourly from 6:39 a.m. to nearly midnight. The Fageol Coach bus had two engines, one driving each rear wheel, according to Joseph Horvath of San Rafael — the first driver on the run. The engines were just foreward of the Greyhound insignia. Note the striped awnings fore and aft.

A Stormy History Nearing An End

the old ferryboat Marin, which ran from Tiburon to connect with larger boats at Sausalito for the trip across the bay.

Joseph Horvath of San Rafael, Greyhound maintenance foreman who retired in 1969, recalled his days as a driver on the 1934 bus trips.

"The state ordered Northwestern Pacific to continue providing service to the Tiburon commuters, so the company hired Greyhound," Horvath said. "I'll have to plead guilty to being one of the first commute bus drivers.

"The Tiburon operation was very instrumental in Greyhound going into the commute business. It worked so smoothly," Horvath said.

Southern Pacific Railroad Co., which eventually became the parent firm for Northwestern Pacific Railroad, had a financial interest in Greyhound in the late 1930s and early 1940s.

The rail line, McVerry said, had helped arrange merger of several North Bay stage lines and bus companies that had struggled through Depression years. "Pickwick, the old Monticello Lines in Napa" and others became Pacific Greyhound, McVerry recalled.

"Greyhound's assumption of commute service in the early 1940s was a booming romance," said Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney in 1967 at a heated hearing over Greyhound application to the state Public Utilities Commission to raise commuter fares. Greyhound, Maloney said, "came courting but over the years it has become sadly disillusioned with Marin and its commuters — and now wants a divorce." His rhetoric flowered against Greyhound's request for a 7 per cent fare increase intended to raise $1.8 million more revenue.

But the romance between the commuters and the bus firm was cold ashes long before that. In 1952, Greyhound tried to divest itself of its commute runs in Marin and Sonoma County, for only $200,000. The state said no.

Then, in 1955, Greyhound won permission from the federal Interstate Commerce Commission to separate its commuter and its long-haul services into different divisions.

A coalition of commuters' clubs, spearheaded by Thomas D. Hardcastle of Novato, took the issue to court. In 1957, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the ICC had exceeded its powers in approving Greyhound's plan to create "Golden Gate Transit Lines" to take over the commute runs. The justices said they found "94.3 per cent of Greyhound's revenue was intrastate, largely commuter" derived.

THOMAS D. HARDCASTLE
Veteran of commuter wars

Greyhound officials began stressing the red ink involved in commute services by 1963. That April, they told the Golden Gate Bridge District that the firm had lost $468,000 on commute runs the previous year, and that the long-haul runs were financing the operation.

Hardcastle by then was a director of the Golden Gate Bridge District. He already was calling for the action eventually taken by the district — a publicly subsidized fleet of commuter buses. He said in a talk Jan. 29, 1963 that such a fleet would entice more commuters out of private autos and "ease traffic congestion until a second bridge (or bridge deck) can be built to carry rapid rail transit."

In 1964, Greyhound applied for a 20 per cent overall fare increase to offset claimed annual losses of $704,500 in Bay Area commute runs.

Hardcastle won a break for the bus riders. He persuaded his fellow bridge board members to lower the toll per commute bus from one dollar to 13 cents. This pulled the teeth of the Greyhound rate hike request so far as commuters were concerned. They had ridden for seven years without a fare hike.

In 1967, however, Greyhound won a 7 per cent hike in commute fares.

The firm came back a year later with a request for 40 to 70 per cent hikes in commute fares — and got 6 to 18 per cent in 1969.

By then the drive to replace the private bus line with a publicly owned transit system had gotten up a full head of steam.

Commuters through the years had complained about other things besides the high cost of riding.

During the 1950s, Mill Valley carried on a running feud with the firm over where it parked its buses overnight. Residents in the Manor area of Fairfax voiced the same battle cry in the middle 1960s. Closure of the Marin City ticket office was hotly protested.

There was a constant tug-of-war between Greyhound and riders who complained that they had to hang from straps during rush hours, rather than sit. Greyhound countered that it could not put on more buses, or it would lose even more money.

McVerry said Greyhound commuter patrongage peaked "about 1965, with about 6,500 daily riders."

Strikes either threatened to or actually hampered bus riding in 1958, '59 and 1966, clogging the Golden Gate Bridge with even more private autos. Other disenchanted riders, citing the age and lack of air conditioning and other amenities on Greyhound's commute vehicles, switched to private commute clubs that held happy little parties aboard chartered buses as they returned from their daily toil in San Francisco.

Typical of many Marinites' feelings was the complaint voiced by Mary H. Price of Tiburon in 1966. She charged that commuters on the Tiburon Peninsula were getting "old, bad buses" that passengers on other runs wouldn't ride.

Greyhound made no bones of the fact it wanted out of the commute business. In June 1965, Greyhound's president, Ralph E. Thomas, declared his firm was "not interested in promoting commute services" due to increasing losses on the operation. He admitted to state utility commissioners that the firm spent only $165 in fiscal 1962-63 to advertise and promote commuter patronage.

The company's attitude toward the commuter service perhaps is reflected in the complete lack of company records about the history of Greyhound operations in Marin County. Only the dry, emotionless fiscal records are available; there are no photos nor other mementos than those of numerous safety awards to drivers who took the passengers where they were going unscathed if not always happy.

Independent-Journal files recall a few incidents, such as Jan. 5, 1959 when winds and high waves across Shoreline Highway marooned the 6:30 a.m. coastal commute run for hours near Bolinas.

Most of the color in the history comes from the scrapbooks and the memories of oldtime Greyhound drivers such as Horvath and McVerry — and of such veteran passengers as Hardcastle.

Hardcastle, who was "Mister Commuter" for years and spoke for a Bay Area coalition of thousands of bus and passenger auto riders, probably won't be on hand for the New Year's Day switchover to Golden Gate buses. He's on vacation in Hawaii, and isn't expected to return to his office until Monday.

PIONEER RIDE — Old Pacific Greyhound tour buses were pressed into service in 1933, to carry Northwestern Pacific Railroad commuters around a freight train wreck south of Corte Madera, to the waiting Sausalito ferryboats. Joseph Horvath of San Rafael, retired Greyhound maintenance foreman, said the buses also were used whenever high water shorted out the electric trains' third rail in the Richardson Bay-Alto area.

Publicly Owned Transit Almost Reality In 1939

Few Marin County residents remember it, but the idea of publicly owned transit almost became a reality in 1939.

A committee of Marinites became alarmed because Northwestern Pacific Railroad wanted to abandon its commuter trains, and the group persuaded the board of supervisors to put a proposition on the Nov. 7, 1939, ballot. Chairman of the group was San Rafael attorney Wallace S. Myers.

The measure called for creation of a "county utility district" — embracing only the area served by Marin Municipal Water District — to set up a mass transit system.

The principal proposal was to create a fleet of buses to carry commuters across the two-year-old Golden Gate Bridge.

The ballot measure was hotly opposed — both by taxpayers who feared the system would prove an intolerable burden, and by Pacific Greyhound Co. the firm promised to spend 1.3 million and create a fleet of 83 buses if the measure lost.

The Mill Valley City Council, spurred by a voluminous report from its own transportation commission, also opposed the district. The city declared it would operate its own fleet of 16 commuter buses, and even bought rolling stock.

Greyhound bought full-page ads in the Marin Journal and other newspapers, promising that private enterprise could provide better service than a public system.

The district was defeated by a vote of 6,213 yes to 9,783 no.

According to Joseph Horvath of San Rafael, retired Greyhound maintenance foreman for Marin County, Mill Valley's equipment eventually was purchased by Greyhound.

It was not until 1964 that the Marin County Transit District became a reality, and together with the Golden Gate Bridge District launched programs that will result in the first publicly owned commute bus service in Marin's history, beginning New Year's Day.

Doctor Finds Vitamin C Helps Health Of Arteries

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON(UPI)--A doctor who found she could raise or lower the cholesterol content of blood with different doses of vitamin C believes regular use of the vitamin contributes to the health of arteries.

In an article in the medical weekly, The Lancet, supplemented by a telephone interview, Dr. Constance R. Spittle of Pinderfields Hospital in Yorkshire said her research indicated 1,000 milligrams of vitamin C a day could be an important therapeutic measure.

"The chance discovery that I could vary my own serumcholesterol simply by varying my vitamin C intake, and regardless of cholesterol consumption, led me to investigate this in other people," she wrote in the Lancet.

Dr. Spittle described how she took 58 healthy volunteers and divided them into three age groups — young, middle-aged and elderly—and did the same with 25 patients suffering from atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries. This condition is attribued to the deposit of fatty substances, in which cholesterol is implicated, on the walls of the arteries.

Her main findings were that, in healthy people under 25 the cholesterol level tended to fall on the vitamin C supplement. In the atherosclerotic group the cholesterol level tended to rise. These results may seem contradictory but Dr. Spittle said they were both consistent and beneficial.

In the atherosclerotic group the rise was probably due to "mobilization" of cholesterol in the pressence of vitamin C from arteries clogged with an excess of it. Hence there was more of it in the blood but it, too, was being transported away.

Dr. Spittle said Russian research on animals tended to support these suggestions. The Russians gave two groups of animals a cholesterol-rich diet —but one group also received vitamin C. The animals solely on the diet had cholesterol in the aorta, the major heart artery. Those that had the vitamin C supplement had cholesterol only in the liver and adrenals, not in the aorta.

"Smokers have lower vitamin C levels than non-smokers," she said. "Men have lower levels than women on the same diet and older people have lower levels than young people. In other words coronarythrombosis (heart attack) prone individuals have lower vitamin C levels than those not so at risk.

"I suggest that atherosclerosis is a long-term deficiency of vitamin C which permits cholesterol levels to build up in the arterial system, and results in changes in other fractions of the fats."

England's Thames Cleaned Up

By KENNETH JOACHIM
Toronto Telegram News Service

LONDON — Ten years ago, the 92 industrial miles of the river Thames was the most polluted stretch of water in Britain.

All fish and other marine life had ceased to live in it. The water stank. It was poison to drink.

Today, the Thames — all 210 miles of it, including the former "horror-stretch" — is acknowledged as the cleanest industrial river in Europe and is claimed to be the purest in the world.

The transformation has been so spectacular that investigators from Japan and the United States are here to find out how the miracle was wrought. Simularly, admiring teams from Europe and the continent have already come and gone.

Nobody waved a magic wand to clean up the Thames. Riding a big river of pollution takes time, money and determination. The Port of London Authority used a lot of all three.

The authority is the pollution-control body for what is known as the "Tidal Thames" — the 92 industrial miles of the river from Teddington in Surrey to the seaward limits.

The authority's powers were granted under acts of Parliament by which it licenses all discharges of industrial wastes into the Thames and enforces a rigid standard of purity.

An authority official told me recently: "Our basic concern is to ensure that the river is never devoid of oxygen, which is the first cleansing agent in the world because it encourages the natural biological processes by which the river cleans itself.

"Even power stations abstracting water for cooling purposes are required to re-oxygenate before returning water to the river — by passing it over cascades."

At the same time, the authority consulted all local councils operating sewage treatment works and hammered out a higher standard of treated effluent.

The extent of pollution had reached alarming proportions. The Thames, in the years of lax control since the war, had become the receptacle of all forms of industrial, domestic and agricultural sewage which killed off all fish and other marine life.

"It was so bad," the official said, "That all the polished glasswork on river craft discolored rapidly.

The pollution even affected houses in its vicinity: Bathtubs turned brown, paintwork got discolored and even peeled.

"All this because factories, chemical works, sewage treatment plants and others were draining their waste indiscriminately into the river."

So, armed with tougher laws for those who did not respond to persuasion, the authority got busy. They spent about $45 million on the clean-up project.

Water is constantly being sampled. Teams of pollution-control inspectors keep close vigil at all discharge points. And the authority doesn't hesitate to take legal action if the wastes fall below standard.

The result is that there now are fish along the entire length of the river.

Another recent major action by the authority was to stop the dumping of dredged material at sea, and instead pump it ashore to reclaim low-lying areas.

It was found that silt dumped into the sea was carried back to the Thames with each tide. That doesn't happen anymore.

Pot Case Christmas Eve Arrest

Eugene L. Syrup, 20, of 1000 Eighth Street, Novato, was jailed on Christmas Eve on charges of selling narcotics and dangerous drugs to an undercover Novato police officer during August and September.

Released on $10,000 bail, Syrup was scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court tomorrow for arraignment.

He was picked up Friday on a warrant of arrest charging him with selling amphetamine and hashish on Aug. 23, methamphetamine on Sept. 3, and marijuana on Sept. 28.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas said the items, purchased by an undercover man in various locations in Novato, have been analyzed and found to be dangerous drugs and narcotics.

Novato police said a couple of other men may have been involved with Syrup in the sale of drugs.

Mrs. Parsigian, Knifing Suspect, Ruled Insane

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Carolyne Parsigian of Santa Rosa, accused of stabbing Msgr. Clyde Tillman of Petaluma, has been committed to Napa State Hospital for psychiatric treatment.

Judge Joseph P. Murphy Jr. ruled Mrs. Parsigian, 56, insane and unfit to stand trial Friday after receiving reports from two psychiatrists who examined her.

She was arrested Dec. 16 a short time after allegedly stabbing the priest in front of St. Rose's Church, Santa Rosa. Police said Mrs. Parsigian had written letters complaining of harassment by the Catholic church.

No Trace Of Missing Jetliner

LIMA (UPI)—Officials said Sunday they have found no trace of a jetliner with 92 persons aboard missing since Friday on a flight over the rugged Andes Mountains.

Military and civilian planes searched the jagged peaks and nearby jungles for two days without locating the missing four engine Lockheed Electra turbo-prop owned by Lansa, the Peruvian airline.

The plane was on a flight from Lima to Iquitos, 650 miles away in the heart of the dense Amazon jungle, when it disappeared.

A 27-Year Try To Gain Soviet Freedom

By PETER WORTHINGTON
Toronto Telegram Syndicate

TORONTO — This is the story of a man named Smith. Jesus Smith, age 63, a Canadian citizen who has been actively trying for 27 years to return to Canada, and who is being kept against his wishes in the Soviet Union.

His is a story that burns into the consciousness of External Affairs, which wants to help him but is afraid that publicity will destroy what small chance he may have.

Possibly. On the other hand he can't be denied much more than he has been already, and at age 63 his best, productive years are behind him. In this age of Trudeau-Kosygin cordiality, and Soviet-Canada "friendship" protocols, perhaps for once the Soviets might be susceptible to freeing a citizen.

I first ran into the story when I was in Moscow six years ago for the Toronto Telegram. I watched, kept silent, and wondered about Jesus Smith ever since. Every time I launched a feeler toward our diplomats I got a strike-out, plus the admonition that I write nothing, else the poor chap's chances might further be jeopardized.

Jesus was born of Doukhobor parents at Borden, Sask., in 1908. His parents broke up and the father took his five-year-old son away. At age eight Jesus wound up in a Vancouver orphanage. His father had a longing to go back to "socialist paradise," which was the prevailing myth about the USSR in those days.

In 1921 father and son entered the Soviet Union through Manchuria at Harbin in 1921. The boy was 13.

They ended up along the Black Sea, working in shipyards and Jesus eventually became an electrical engineer. In 1929, at age 21, he had a longing for Canada apparently as a gesture to assert his non-Soviet origin he changed his name to "Smith."

He was married and living in Odessa when the war came to the USSR. He survived, somehow, the Nazi occupation and in the process lost all his personal documents.

When the Allied Repatriation Commission came to Odessa to help ship home Western prisoners of war, Jesus was hired as a messenger.

From there he contacted the Canadian embassy — which checked his story and issued him a Canadian passport. He was promptly arrested for espionage and sent to a camp on the Pechora river in the Arctic until 1951. On his release he tried to contact the Canadian embassy again — and was promptly re-arrested and sent to another camp in Siberia.

On release in 1955 he was condemned to live in exile in Siberia, where he remains today, despite being rehabilitated by a military tribunal when Khrushchev came to power in 1957.

External Affairs located his mother, who has since died, and his two half-sisters who have shown no interest in helping him.

Throughout the years Jesus Smith has remained staunchily loyal to Canada.

He is regarded as a walking wonder by Canadians — a miracle of loyalty, courage and persistence. Even during imprisonment he managed to smuggle a message out to the Canadian Embassy wishing Canada well on our national day, July 1.

There are those in Ottawa who have grave doubts whether Jesus Smith would be happy, at this age, living in a Canada he can hardly remember.

But that's not the point. In 1965, he was sent a certificate of Canadian identity, and acknowledged as "belonging" to us.

And yet nothing has been done, or is being done.

Surely, with Canada and the USSR so chummy these days we can exert some pressure to give Jesus Smith, Canadian, the opportunity to return "home." Fifty years is a long time.

Window Forced, Car In Larkspur Rifled

A thief forced a car window open on Christmas Day and stole $155 in tape equipment, cameras, ski gear and clothing from a car belonging to James A. Costa, Larkspur police said today.

The theft took place between 1 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. while the vehicle was parked at Costa's home, 140 Lower Via Casitas, police said.

"I got more than I asked for at Fidelity... I simply asked Fidelity Savings for a passbook account that pays interest day in to day out. Fidelity offered me a lot more. They explained their 15 different savings accounts—everything from annuities to tax-sheltered retirement plans. The account I selected will not only pay me more interest than I expected but cut my income tax."

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The Simple Principles Do Not Always Apply To Issue

In some bridge hands your only hope is to cash several tricks in a side suit before an opponent can ruff. The more cards you have in such a side suit, the fewer cards the opponents can hold — and therefore the greater the danger that one of them will ruff. It's simple and obvious, but simple principles don't always apply in complicated situations.

HEART PLAY

South wins the first trick with the ace of clubs and leads out the ace and king of hearts. East discards, and South sees that he will have to lose a trump trick. South's only chance is to get rid of the two low clubs by the time that West gains the lead with his trump trick.

In order to get his discards South must run three rounds of spades and four rounds of diamonds. Which side suit should he tackle first? (Assume, as always, that South cannot see the East-West cards.)

It's "obviously" safer to try for three rounds of spades first. But West ruffs the third spade and cashes a club trick to defeat the slam.

What happened? Did South run into bad luck, or did he choose the wrong line of play?

NEEDS DIAMONDS

South made the wrong choice, as H.W. Kelsey points out in his excellent new book "Improve Your Bridge." Even if the three spades got by safely, South would still have to find at least three diamonds in the West hand. Therefore South can lose nothing by trying three rounds of diamonds before touching the spades.

When East shows out on the third round of diamonds, South sees that West started with four diamonds. Hence South can safely cash the fourth diamond, getting rid of one club. Then he runs the three spades, discarding his last club. West ruffs the third spade, but it is too late for him to defeat the slam.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A Q 5
♥ - 10 7 5 2
♦ - K Q 8 4
♣ - 10 5.
What do you say?

ANSWER:

Pass. You have 11 points in high cards and one point for the doubleton, enough for an optional opening bid. You make an optional bid if you have unusual length in the major suits or a very powerful suit, but you should pass when you have neither.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Can 'Predeath' Disturbances Be Prevented? Or Treated?

A group of physicians from Scotland define "predeath as that phase at the end of life when the aged outlive the vigor of their bodies and the wisdom of their brains." According to the report in Internal Medicine News, they are referring to such diseases of the aged that lead to incontinence of the bladder, dementia, and arteriosclerotic brain disease. Can these disturbances be prevented? If not, what is the best treatment?

In many parts of the world there are not enough hospitals or nursing homes to care for the elderly when they reach this stage. The burden of care rests with the spouse, middle-aged daughters, neighbors, and friends. Times have changed.

TODAY, CARING for an elderly spouse, or parent is considered a burden instead of a duty or privilege. Tremendous expense is involved when the aged person is entrusted to a hospital, or nursing home.

It is doubtful whether the outcome of predeath differs when the person remains at home, or is institutionalized. Many survive beyond the age of 75 and often live for months or years in complete dependency. These people are indeed our forgotten citizens who were unfortunate enough to "outlive the vigors of their bodies . . ." Some people face these problems in their early sixties; others after they attain the age of 90.

WE LIKE to chart the course of life as a rapid rise during youth followed by a plateau that gradually declines during middle age and late life. The final trip (predeath) is usually short for those who have a heart attack, stroke, accident, or cancer. Others go on, but it is surprising how many suddenly take a turn foor the worse and switch from middle life to feebleness. A predeath disease is responsible, and if it could be prevented, or dayled, the person could have many more happy and productive years.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

PRELUDE TO HEART FAILURE

R. L. writes: What kind of heart disease is decompensation?

REPLY

This is not a disease but a prelude to heart failure, often with dropsy. Decompensation occurs when the heart no longer can deliver its quota of blood, especially after it has worked harder than usual to overcome a defect or other handicap. The return flow of blood to the heart becomes so sluggish that digitalis and oxygen may be needed to bring relief. The structure enlarges, beats rapidly or irregularly, and shortness of breath and dropsy develop.

CONSOLATION EATER

Mrs. E. N. writes: I'm 30 pounds overweight and cannot lose an ounce. Weeks will pass without sweets but then I go on a candy binge. Please advise.

REPLY

You sound like a neurotic eater who relieves inner tensions and anxieties by eating. The next time this urge comes on, take a long walk and try to determine what is "eating" you.

SEDATIVES AND COFFEE

R. R. writes: My son takes a sedative at night and then a cup of coffee. Doesn't the coffee nullify the effect on the pill?

REPLY

HE'LL BE CLEAN

F. G. writes: If a person bathes once or twice a day, what effect will this have on his skin?

REPLY

His skin will be clean. However, it may become dry, depending upon its natural oil content and the type of soap used.

TIRED LEGS

Mr. B. L. writes: I'm 51 and always enjoyed walking, but lately my feet get so tired I feel as if I'm toting 1,000 pound weights on each foot. I used to weigh 230, but am down to 195. Do you think my excess flesh is responsible for the leg problem?

REPLY

Yes, if fatigue developed before you began to reduce. If not, there is a better chance that the 35-pound weight loss plays a role in your fatugue. If this is the case, the weariness may continue until you adjust to your new poundage.

HUMAN BITES

S. M. writes: What kinds of tests are made on a man who bites another man?

REPLY

Mental tests. Human bites are serious because the mouth is teeming with lethal microorganisms. To my knowledge, only one person survived an attack of rabies. While he was sick in the hospital, there was a sign on the bed warning against human bites.

BORDERING ON NORMAL

C. D. writes: If a child is below average in intelligence, is he considered mentally deficient?

REPLY

Not necessarily, as there are many degrees of subnormality. Children who border on the normal are much brighter than youngsters who are definitely retarded, and mentally dificient.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Double Indeminity

John Walker had a few too many drinks and started to walk home. His tract house was a lot like all the others on the block. Sure enough, he wandered up to a neighbor's house. He pounded on the door and then broke the side window. The frightened neighbor got out his shotgun and aimed it at John.

The shotgun went off when John grabbed at it. Some hours later he died from the wounds. John's widow claimed that she was entitled to "double indemnity" under his insurance policy. She claimed he died accidentally. The insurance company refused the double pay.

In court John's widow won. True, John was not "accidentally drunk." But his going to another house and the scuffle over the gun resulted in the accidental death.

In a second case, the decedent felt he had been cheated in a poker game. He left, went home for his pistol and returned to get his money back. The operator of the game also had a gun and returned the fire. The gambler's widow claimed double indemnity, but lost. The use of the gun under those circumstances led to the natural and expected result of this violent conduct. Death could not be said to be "accidental."

In another case, Frank was trying to escape from police custody on a hit and run driving charge. He jumped out of the patrol wagon and hit the pavement hard. He was run over by a truck before he could get up and run away. His widow claimed double indemnity and won. The jury said that the death was by violent but accidental means.

Even though Frank's fall and possible injury from jumping out of the car wasn't an accident. Getting run over by a truck was an accident.

Generally any ambiguities or uncertainties in an insurance policy are read in favor of the insured. The insurance company writes the policy. If its language creates the doubts, those doubts are interpreted against the company.

Many policies specifically exclude injuries that result from voluntary intoxication. Some policies exclude coverage when the injury results from the commission of a felony — say by the use of banned drugs or from illegal violent acts.

'Pauper' Dies A Rich Man

GRANTHAM, Pa. (UPI)-Sam Hamilton swept floors in the stock exchange in San Francisco before he switched to washing dishes in a skid row mission.

"No one at the mission knew he had any money," according to the president of Messiah College here, who received a check from Hamilton's estate for $128,000 on Christmas Eve.

Dr. D. Ray Hostetter said Hamilton wished to remain anonymous, but his name slipped out when word of another grant, this one for $150,000, was received at life line mission in San Francisco.

Hamilton died eight months ago, apparently a pauper. Since that time his attorneys said Hamilton saved money and invested on the market, where he probably received "tips" while he was sweeping floors.

Cotati Planners Approve Switch

The Cotati Planning Commission has approved a change in zoning from duplex to multiple residential at 8192 El Rancho Drive.

The rezoning was sought by Wilmer Klebe.

The commission also asked for public recommendations and questions in preparation of the Jan. 4 meeting with the city council on the new zoning ordinance.

Listing Freighter Makes It To Port

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The Greek freighter Erato, under escort by a Coast Guard cutter, reached port safely Sunday after developing a serious list in the North Pacific.

The 13,000-ton Erato, which had been headed from Seattle, Wash., to Japan, was berthed at the Oakland Port Authority, and a spokesman said it would remain there for about two days.

Negotiation Held Key In Mideast

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said today in Jerusalem Israel is looking forward to 1972 as the year of negotiation in the Middle East.

Eban told a news conference, " I can only express hope that 1972 will be what 1971 was not, a year of negotiation. That is the keynote of Israeli government policy."

Eban said the first month of the New Year would be crucial for the area. He said by mid-January the U. S. effort to achieve a partial agreement to reopen the Suez Canal, and the mission of United Nations peace negotiator Gunnar V. Jarring could be at a crucial juncture."

"We expect to be told by Jarring whether, and how, his mission can be revived," Eban said. "And from the United States Israel expects clarifications on whetherthe canal negotiations would be free and without conditions."

Eban's statement came as Israeli military sources reported a rare incident of cooperation between Egyptian and Israeli military forces.

The sources said Egyptian military authorities had informed the Israeli high command through the U.N. truce supervisory organization in Jerusalem it is holding maneuvers on the west bank of the canal.

The sources said Egypt did so so Israel would not mistake the maneuvers as Egyptian preparations for a preemptive strike.

In Cairo Arab foreign ministers opened a meeting today to discuss the Middle East crisis and the possibility of a summit conference early next month to unify any action against Israel.

A Diamond's Color

CHICAGO (UPI)—A diamond can be more than a girl's best friend if it's the right color. Because of its other properties, says Encyclopaedia Britannica, a diamond is the only gem which is valuable when colorless. But varieties which are red, green or blue are even more valuable.

Hoover Nears 77, Says He Will Not Step Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) —On New Year's Day, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover will celebrate his 77th Birthday. He describes his health as "excellent" and says he never has considered stepping down.

"I have never considered stepping down from my position in the FBI as long as I can be of service to my country and have the health, vigor and enthusiasm to perform my responsibilities in the manner my superiors and the public have a right to expect," Hoover said.

Hoover made the comment in answer to written questions submitted him by UPI.

Hoover has served as FBI director since 1924. There have been many calls for his resignation in recent years, but President Nixon has said Hoover will stay on as long as his health and performance remain good.

The latest suggestion that Hoover retire came Sunday from Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the former urban affairs adviser to President Nixon, who now is a professor or urban politics at Harvard University.

"I think the sooner Mr. Hoover retires, the better the FBI will be," Moynihan said. "It has become a cankered bureaucracy preserving the unnecessary vanities of a man who has served too long in office."

Moynihan said he believed Hoover had endangered the FBI's role by a "very casual and clumsy attitude" toward civil liberties.

"I am sure the morale in the FBI is in just awful shape," Moynihan said.

Hoover, who has been criticized for the FBI's hiring of minorities, said the agency has 135 blacks, American Indians, orientals and persons with Spanish surnames out of 8,500 special agents. He said he would like to increase minority representation.

"I will not relax the high qualifications the FBI has traditionally demanded of its special agent applicants simply to play a numbers game with the very important issue of minority employment," he said. "To do so would only slur those who seek true equality, weaken FBI efficiency and morale, and destroy public confidence in our standards."

DREAM MACHINE?

When Dickens Bascom aims his coupe onto Marin streets, it's happy motoring — psychedelic style. Bascom, a Larkspur artist who has donated works to the city, wheeled his car into the parking lot of the California Highway Patrol office in Corte Madera the other day, and disbelieving looks from the officers. "There's something on it for everyone," said Sgt. James C. Dukes. There is, indeed — sneaker soles, clocks, a mailbox, bottles and religious figures. The vehicle had been cited last month for defective lights, but it cleared a CHP inspection Thursday. If the junk-laden auto violates any other vehicle laws, the CHP couldn't find them. Chamber Of Commerce Expert Sees Inflation Rate Increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The U.S. Chamber of Commerce's chief economist predicts American economic output will jump 9.5 per cent in 1972 while the inflation rate will be cut substantially.

The optimistic forecast was made Sunday by Dr. Carl H. Madden in a year-end paper. He predicted a "record economic advance" next year.

"The strength and breadth of accelerated economic growth will extend to every sector, including consumer buying and business investment," Madden wrote. "As the economy gathers strength, the jobless rates will fall along with the rate of price increases."

Other business leaders polled by Nation's Business Magazine generally agreed the economy should be on the upswing in 1972 but had difficulty assessing President Nixon's economic policy.

The magazine reported it surveyed 451 chairmen of boards, presidents, senior vice presidents and corporation economists.

It said only 98 of the executives said their companies had been helped by the first two phases of the administration economic plan. Another 122 believed their companies were affected adversely and 204 could see little or no effect. Of those surveyed, 391 expected to see the economy strengthened in 1972. They also were asked to predict how profits would compare in 1972 with 1971, and 33 said they expected decreases, 77 saw profits holding steady, and the remainder said profits should go up between 5 and 15 per cent.

Madden in his year end report predicted "inflation, after six long years, will be significantly tempered." He said total economic output could be expected to hit $1.15 trillion, up as much as $100 billion or nearly 9.5 per cent.

He said consumer spending should lead the increase with more emphasis on durable goods and services.

Edwards Shares Some Bubbly Brew

By RALPH CHATOIAN

The huge man with a gentle voice was sitting in his stall in the 49er dressing room when a friend walked up and handed him a gift wrapped package.

"Ah," said the 6-foot-6, 262-pound man who makes his living chasing quarterbacks and tackling halfbacks. He tore away the wrapping paper and opened up a box revealing a bottle of champagne and two glasses.

Earl Edwards, strong 49er defensive tackle who moments earlier had helped the 49ers beat the Washington Redskins, 24-20 in a National Football League playoff game, wrestled a few seconds with the top before popping the cork all the way to the ceiling.

HE POURED a glass for himself and one for Bill Belk, reserve defensive end who has the stall next to him in the Candlestick dressing room. Toasting Belk, Edwards smiled, "I've been seeing this on television a long time."

Then he stood up and looked across the room where quarterback John Brodie was sitting, completely hidden by reporters and radio-TV people. "I have to toast Bro," he said, walking over and pouring a glass for wide receiver Gene Washington on the way. He finally got the champagne bottle to Brodie and poured. "Thanks, man," said the 49er who had thrown two touchdown passes and completed 10 of 19 passes for 176 yards on a day best for ducks, not for man.

Edwards' bottle of champagne was the only one in the dressing room but thoughts were flying toward a time three weeks from now when there might be more champagne was the only one in the dressing room but thoughts were flying toward a time three weeks from now when there might be more champagne. But the dressing room would be in Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, site of the Super Bowl Jan. 16. To get there the 49ers must beat the Dallas Cowboys next Sunday in Irving, Tex.

MANY OF thefans at yesterday's game might have thought a big turning point of the game, as far as momentum goes, was in the third quarter when the Redskins tried for a first down on a fourth and inches situation, the ball sitting on the S.F. 11-yard line. The try failed, linebackers Frank Nunley and Jim Sniadecki throwing Redskin runner Larry Brown for a two-yard loss. The 49ers were trailing 10-3 at the time and I thought this was the play that switched the momentum.

When the Niners got the ball, Brodie had fullback Ken Willard run twice and on third and 1, Brodie faked to Willard who carried out the fake beautifully, then passed to the streaking Gene Washington who caught it on the 40 and then sprinted into the end zone to complete a 78-yard play. When the ball was in the air, one of the Redskins' linebackers was still trying to bring down Willard, convinced he had the ball.

DID BRODIE think that fourth down play was the one to lift the 49ers? Did that excite him?

"No, not really," he said calmly after the game. "I didn't even know they were going for the first down. I thought they would go for the field goal. Then someone said we had the ball back. I just went back on the field."

Forty-Niner head coach Dick Nolan said they had practiced that third and short yardage pass play during the week, but "I expected Brodie to call it when we were a little closer to the Washington goal line."

BRODIE GAVE HIS reasons for calling the play when he did: "We just weren't moving the ball, nothing was working, so I thought, 'what the hell,' it looked like the thing to do." It sure was, John.

WILLARD, WHO carried out another fake beautifully when Brodie passed two yards to tight end Bob Windsor for a touchdown in the third quarter, ran just as hard on the decoy plays as when he had the ball.

"It really makes you feel good when you contribute to a big play any way you can," said Willard. "That touchdown to Washington was the biggest play of the game and I'm just glad I could contribute."

One of the happiest, but quietest players after the game was reserve Bob Hoskins, a roommate of Edwards when both were playing at University of Wichita. It was Hoskins who pounced on the ball in the Redskins' end zone when punter Mike Bragg couldn't handle George Burman's low snap. It proved to be the winning touchdown and was the first TD for Hoskins since high school days in Edwardsville, Ill. near St. Louis, although he was a running back and defensive end at Wichita.

HE CARTED the ball away after the touchdown and had it in his dressing room stall after the game. Explaining his recovery and TD, Hoskins said, "Bragg started going after the ball and then he looked up at me, sort of took his eye off the ball. That's when I was able to get to it." Punting specialists don't relish the thought of competing with 253-pound defensive lineman.

A punter by the name of Jim McCann was dressing quietly in the stall next to Hoskins. He had been taken out of his job with the 49ers and replaced by Steve Spurrier, and admits it's because the coaching staff feels he can't punt under the pressure of pro championships.

"I started worrying about dropping the ball and it put a little pressure on me and my punting. It's something I'll just have to get over. No, I don't know whether they'll use me against Dallas."

"It was our worst game ever," said Elmer Collett of Mill Valley about the special teams of

Nixon Tells Allen: 'Don't Look Back'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— President Nixon, who made one of the greatest political comebacks in history, has a few words of solace for the Washington Redskins: "Don't look back ..."

Redskin defensive back Pat Fischer looked back at the wrong time, center George Burman looked back but never reached his target and coach George Allen looked back at a fourth-down gamble and tried unsuccessfully to repeat it.

When the NFC semifinal playoff between Washington and San Francisco ended in the rain Sunday, the Redskins were 24-20 losers to the 49ers. They climaxed their finest season in pro football since their last playoff year of 1945 with a comfortable telephone call from the President.

"He thought we played a fine game," said Allen. "He said all of Washington (D.C.) was proud of our team and asked me to relay that to the players . He said don't look back ... look ahead."

Allen, who led the Redskins to an overall 9-5-1 record in his first season at the helm after leaving the Los Angeles Rams, said a pass interception, blocked field goal try and two

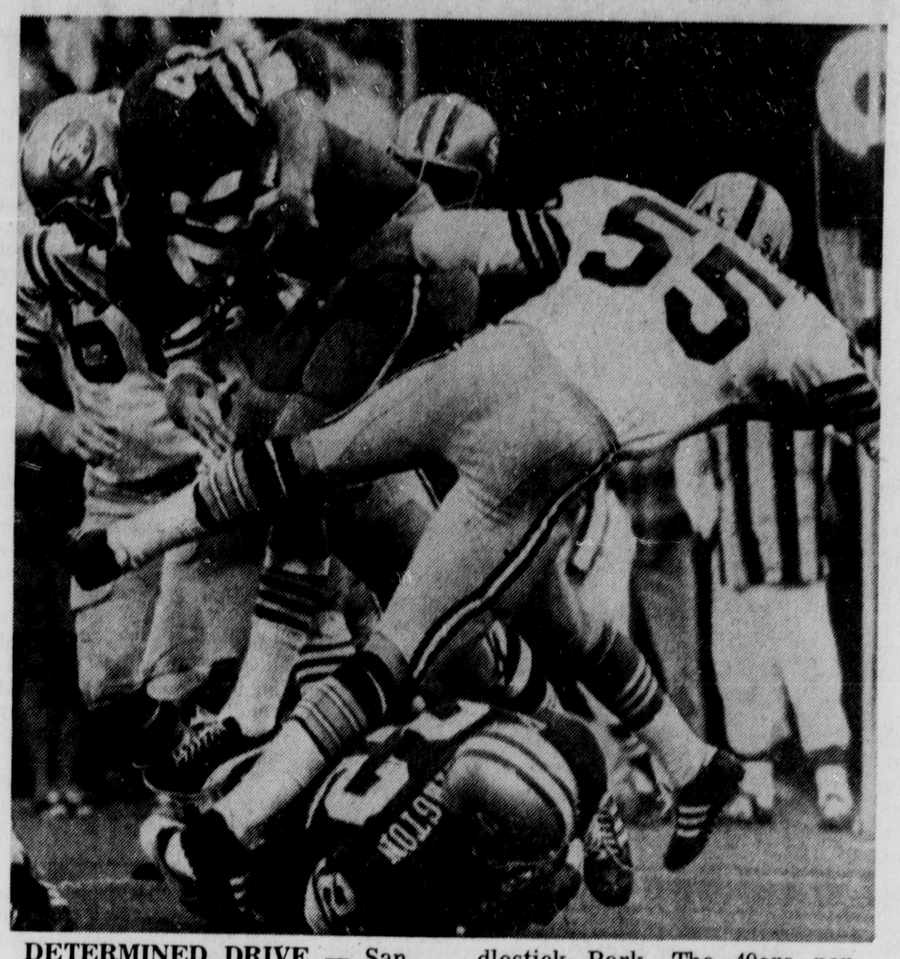
49ers Get Second Shot At Dallas



DETERMINED DRIVE — San Francisco 49er fullback Ken Willard churned out five yards Sunday against the visiting Washington Redskins in fourth quarter playoff action yesterday at Candlestick Park. The 49ers pervailed 24-20 to win the right to meet the Dallas Cowboys Sunday at Texas Stadium for the National Football Conference title.

A year ago, the Cowboys defeated the 49ers, 17-10, for the National Football Conference title, and now 15 games later the two clubs will square off again —next Sunday in Dallas —for the 1971 title.

The Cowboys defeated the Minnesota Vikings, 20-12, Saturday to reach the title game while them 49ers, taking advantage of Washington mistakes, beat the Redskins, 24-20, Sunday.

San Francisco head coach Dick Nolan doesn't care one way or the other about having to play Dallas again. He's content to be in the title game, but some of his players feel different.

"I don't care who we play," said Nolan after his 49ers scuttled the Redskins. "The only thing that counts is that we are going for the title again."

Ken Willard, San Francisco's short-yardage man who was stopped cold by the Cowboys last year, is happy to get another crack at them. So, too, is John Brodie, whose two third period touchdown passes Sunday ended Washington's dreams of reaching the Super Bowl in George Allen's first year as head coach.

"They knocked us out last year," said Willard, "and it's only fitting that we play them again."

"We know we'll be playing a

Stanford Closes Workouts

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The Stanford University football team closed its workouts to all observers today as the Indians installed their game plan for the Rose Bowl encounter with Michigan.

While Michigan was forced to travel to Bakersfield to find a good practice turf, the Indians reported conditions at Cal State Long Beach were excellent after the torrential rains of the past weekend.

The Indians worked out for an hour and 45 minutes Sunday on the field and coach John Ralston said the drill was filmed so he, his staff and the players could study the first day's effort on the game plan.

Ralston said the possibility of rain on New Year's Day would not have much effect on Stanford's preparations for the game but he hoped for sunny, dry weather chiefly for the benefit of the 100,000 spectators.

Secret drills were scheduled to continue for the balance of the week, Ralston said.

VS. SACRED HEART

Redwood String On Line

Just how important can a non-league basketball game be? Very, if it's Redwood vs. Sacred Heart.

The San Francisco high-school basketball power visits Redwood's Larkspur gymnasium Wednesday at 8 p.m., and all sorts of regional prestige will be riding on the outcome.

Tomorrow evening, San Rafael High opens play in the Spartan holiday tournament in Pinole, facing defending champion Pinole Valley at 8:30. Also tomorrow, Drake hosts Lincoln of San Francisco at 11 a.m., Redwood entertains Cottage Grove of Oregon at 8 p.m., and San Marin is home against St. Elizabeth of Oakland, 8:15 p.m.

On Wednesday, San Rafael continues play at Pinole and Terra Linda hosts its alumni at 8 p.m. Marin Catholic plays Lowell of San Francisco at Redwood, 7 p.m., right before the Redwood-Sacred Heart clash.

Thursday, Drake hosts Lowell, 11 a.m.; Marin Catholic entertains Serra of San Mateo, 7 p.m.; San Marin is home against Petaluma, 8:15 p.m.; and Tamalpais visits Santa Rosa, 8:15 p.m. San Rafael concludes its play at Pinole.

Redwood (10-0) is off to its best start in history, but was in real danger of losing only twice. "I guess we'll find out what kind of team we have against Sacred Heart," said coach Dick Hart.

The San Franciscans are 7-2, but both losses came during the Catholic lay teachers' strike, and coach Jerry Phillips is on record saying his team would be unbeaten if not for the interruption.

Sacred Heart's star is 6-foot-6 center Glen Hubbard, well known to Marin County fans because of his devastating performances in the summer league here. Playing in the adult loop, he scored around 30 points a game.

Sacred Heart is a patient team, working carefully for the good percentage shot. "They run very good patterns," said Marin Catholic coach Dave Gonsalves, whose team lost to the Irish last week, 50-46.

Helping out on the front line are 6-5 Ken Cooper and Terry Richardson, who is only 6-0 but jumps like a kangaroo. Steve Pasera is a good guard who scored 15 against Marin Catholic.

Marin Catholic (5-6) has tended to be erratic this year, playing its best against the better teams and not so well against also-rans. Lowell is good, having among its performances a victory over St. Ignatius of San Francisco and a one-point loss to Tamalpais. Lowell features a high-scoring gunner, 5-foot-10 Nick Hoppe.

Drake (5-4) did not fare too well in previous encounters with San Francisco, losing its two opening games by a combined 39 points. But this is a different Drake team now with a 5-2 record since those debacles. Short but quick, Drake came up with its most impressive performance yet Dec. 17, shattering Hogan of Vallejo, 70-40.

San Marin (3-4) is biting off a hugemouthful. St. Elizabeth is not bad and Petaluma, the Drake tournament winner, is genuinely powerful. The Mustangs, still putting it together, may have found a third scorer to go with Hoza Wright and Fred Doar. Bart Saling tallied 20 in their last outing, against John Swett of Crockett.

San Rfael (5-4) wins its odd-numbered games and loses its even-numbered ones. This one is even. The Bulldogs are coming off a 71-34 crushing of Terra Nova of Pacifica, however, and are not about to believe in any numbers game.

Tamalpais (6-4) also has a tough game at Santa Rosa. The slick Allen brother combination, Tom and Chris, almost defeated Redwood at the beginning of the year and did subdue Terra Linda later on.

Ali Stops German In Zurich

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI) —The toughness and the courage of an unheralded German helped Muhammad Ali to show that he might whip Joe Frazier the second time around.

The former world heavyweight champion knocked out Juergen Blin after two minutes and 12 seconds of the seventh round Sunday night at the Oerlikon Hallenstadion and looked in much better shape than he was for the Jimmy Ellis and Buster Mathis fights.

"I was hurt twice," Ali admitted. "But he did not have the skill to follow it up."

Ex-Oklahoma Back Killed In Accident

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (UPI)— Joseph G. Golding Jr., a fleet halfback for the 1941 and 1946 Oklahoma Sooners, was killed in a one-car accident south of Muskogee Sunday.

Warriors Hope To Thaw Out Against Celtics

BOSTON (UPI) — Golden State Warrior coach Al Attles hopes his men thaw out tonight against the tough Boston Celtics.

The Warriors are in a December freeze which showed Saturday night when they were beaten 114-89 by the New York Knicks. The Warriors shot only 33 per cent.

"We had only 12 more shots than the Knicks," Attles said, "but we weren't getting the opportunity shots or anything inside.

Russell had 30 points but the only other Warrior in double figures was Jeff Mullins with 12.

"You expect one man to be cold or even two, and someone else will pick them up," he said. "You don't expect everyone to be cold."

Southern Cal Crew To Join Sailing Field

LONG BEACH (UPI) —A University of Southern California crew won a sail-off Sunday for the right to take part in the eighth annual Long Beach Congressional Cup Sailing Championships.

Skippered by Doug Rosetello, 19, of Long Beach, the five-man Trojan team defeated a crew captained by Dr. William White of Pasadena for the right to represent the host Long Beach Yacht Club.

The Trojans won two straight races in the best of three eliminations.

Both boats were Cal 40 sloops.

LONGEST GAME

Miami Upsets Kansas City

Almost lost in the hullaballoo of pro football's longest game, the jubilance of the Miami Dolphins and Garo Yepremian's 37-yard field goal, was the fact that the game probably was the last sports event played in Municipal Stadium, built in 1923.

The Kansas City Chiefs will move into their new Arrowhead Stadium next fall and their baseball counterparts, the Royals, also expect to open the 1972 season in their new stadium in the Harry Truman Sports Complex.

FITTING END

So, 48 years of sports action ended fittingly. The Dolphins won, 27-24, after 82 minutes, 40 seconds of playing time. The actual length of the game was three hours, 21 minutes.

The loss was a bitter one for the Chiefs, who never trailed until Yepremian ended it 7:40 deep in the sixth quarter.

Middle linebacker Willie Lanier, who made 22 tackles, summed it up when he said: "There's no blaming of anyone. I missed big tackles, somebody misses a kick. So what? You're looking for an easy way out when you do that, and there's no easy way when you lose.

'BIG PLAYS'

"They came up with the big third-down plays, that's all. We'd go ahead, they'd tie it up. You should talk about their ability to come back. That's worth it."

If the Chiefs were gloomy — some showed it by throwing their helmets at the wall, others by crying openly —the Dolphins could not contain their ecstasy.

"We've never had a bigger victory," coach Don Shula said. "It's a story of guts and determination of a bunch of guys who won't quit. When we ware down, we seemed to come up with the big plays.

'LONGEST GAME'

"They say it was the longest game in football history. But I could care less. I'm only interested in the score."

The Dolphins now turn their thoughts to next Sunday, when they will play in their first American Football Conference championship game. The Dolphins will host Baltimore, 20-3 victor over Cleveland Sunday, in the Orange Bowl. Miami and Baltimore split two games during the regular season, each winning at home.

TAYLOR HELD

The Dolphins held Kansas City's ace receiver, Otis Taylor, to three catches for 12 yards. He was never a factor in the game after making the big play for the Chiefs all year.

"I wasn't surprised," said Taylor. "Every time I came off the line of scrimmage there were three or four guys on me. I was always doubled or tripled, I never did get single coverage."

Chiefs running back Ed Podolak enjoyed perhaps his finest game. He accounted for 350 yards rushing, receiving, and returning kicks. He had 85 yards rushing, 110 yards receiving, 154 yards on kickoff returns (including a 78-yarder) and one-yard on punt returns.

Eleven Chiefs still have another game to play. They were selected to play in the Pro Bowl. But as Taylor, one of the chosen, said, "my year is done. It's all gone."

Shrine Tilt To Feature Offenses

A Shriner parade and pageantry will precede the 1 p.m. kickoff.

The game, to be televised live on ABC's Wide World of Sport (Channels 7 and 13) will feature balanced attacks.

Coaches Murray Warmath of Minnesota, Alex Agase of Northwestern and Charley McClendon of Louisiana State will present the passing of Florida quarterback John Reaves, plus the running of Michigan State's flea-like sprinter Eric Allen and Ed Marinaro of Cornell. The latter was the runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

Coaches Jim Owens of Washington, Hayden Fry of SMU and Don Coryell of San Diego State will counter with such aces as quarterbacks Jim Jones of Southern California and Brian Sipe of San Diego State. Bob Moore of Oregon and Bernard Jackson of Washington State will bulwark the West's ground assaults.

Defensively, the West sports former Terra Linda standout Jim Sherbert, an Oregon State end; San Jose State linebacker Dave Chaney and Willie Hall, Southern California end, and University of California All-American end Sherman White.

While the West defensive stars abound, the East also possesses a fair share. The East array has backs Tom Casanova of Louisiana State and Tom Myers of Syracuse.

NINERS NEXT

Dallas Tops Minnesota

DALLAS (UPI)—Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, who predicted all along the San Francisco 49ers would be back in the National Football Conference championship game, figures next Sunday's title games will be a toughie for his Cowboys.

'TOUGHER GAME'

"I expect it to be a tougher game than last year," Landry said after watching San Francisco dump the Washington Redskins 24-20 via national television.

Landry, who could watch the West Coast game in leisure since his Cowboys had earned their second straight title game berth Christmas Day with a 2012 victory over Minnesota, was refferring to the game a year ago when Dallas beat San Francisco 17-10 in the NFC finals.

'BETTER CLUB'

"San Francisco's a better club than it was last season," said the Dallas coach who lost a member of his own staff when Dick Nolan became head coach of the 49ers after the 1967 season.

Landry also thinks his Cowboys are a much better team execpt that he likes to use the word "maturity" in referring to his club which now has won six straight division or conference championships and will be shooting for a second straight Super Bowl trip Sunday.

"This is a very mature team we have now, but it has taken us years to build up the playoff experience we really need," Landry said.

"It just goes out and gets the job done. It shows up in the fact we haven't made many errors.

'CONCERNED'

"I was a little concerned about our defense rising to the height it did against Minnesota because it hadn't had to since last season."

The victory over the Vikings last Saturday, did, indeed, belong to the Cowboys' defense altough the offense also came up with the key plays when the chips were down.

But, it was the defense which had stolen four Minnesota passes and forced and recovered a key fumble by the Vikings.

Three of these turnovers were convered into points, causing middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan to comment:

"We set 'em up and the offense knocked 'em down."

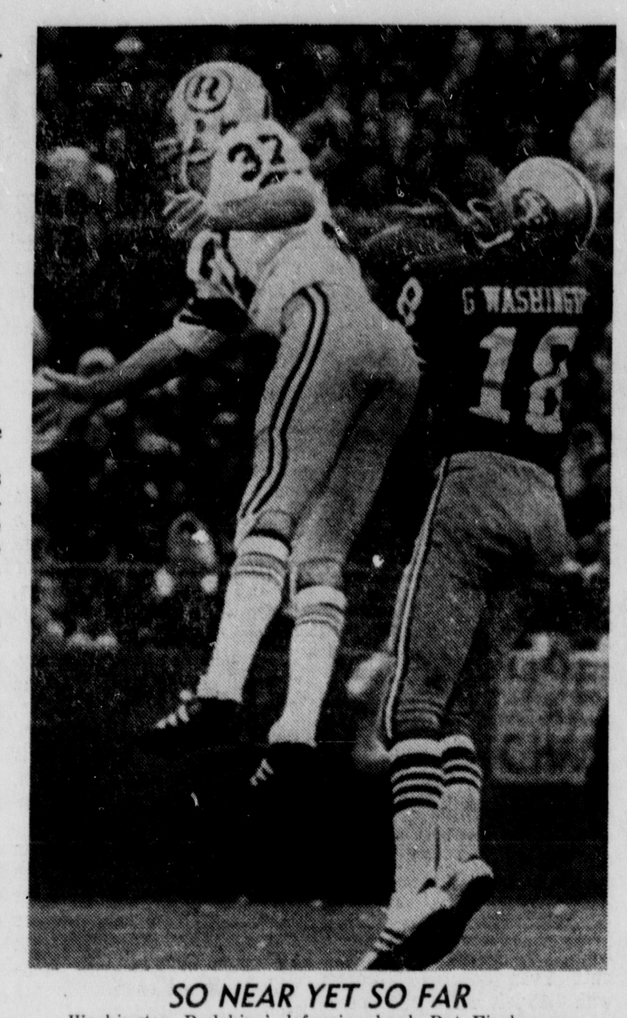
The fumble recovery set up Mike Clark's 26-yard first quarter field goal and Chuck Howley's interception and 26yard runback set up Clark's 44yard field goal which gave Dallas a 6-3 halftime lead.

And, Cliff Harris' 24-yard return with another interception early in the second half set up an explosive 13-yard touchdown gallop up the middle by Duane Thoamas that took the sting out of the Vikings and gave the Cowboys the momentum.

PUNT RETURN

And, Charles Waters' 24-yard punt return led to Dallas' other touchdown in the third period. Roger Staubach, who completed 10 of 14 passes for 85 net yards, hit Lance Alworth on a third down and 15-pass for 30 yards and then hit Bobby Hayes on a nine-yard touchdown pass that put the game out of reach.

The Vikings outgained the Cowboys 311 yards to 183 yards, but couldn't get the clutch yardage. They scored on Fred Cox 27-yard second quarter field goal, a safety when Staubach was tackled in the end zone and on a six-yard pass from Gary Cuozzo to Stu Voight, the latter with just 2:08 left in the game after the cause was lost.



SO NEAR YET SO FAR

Washington Redskins' defensive back Pat Fischer narrowly missed batting down this John Brodie pass which San Francisco 49er receiver Gene Washington snagged on a 78-yard scoring play in the third quarter yesterday. After accepting the toss, Washington scampered untouched across the goal line. (UPI Telephoto)

CLEVELAND FALLS

Baltimore To Face Miami

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Baltimore Colts will have just one thing on their minds when they meet the Miami Dolphins next Sunday for the American Football Conference championship, and the one thing will not be Don Shula, their former coach.

The Colts are more interested in the winning Super Bowl shares of $23,500 than in any embarrassment they could bring to Shula, who walked out on them two years ago and has built the Dolphins into a power.

Shula's expansion team is all that stands in the way of Baltimore and a record third Super Bowl appearance following the Colts' easy 20-3 victory over the Cleveland Browns Sunday.

Miami edged Baltimore by a half-game for the AFC East title this season, the Colts making the playoffs only as a "wild card" team, but they say they have no quarrel with their former coach.

"All that 'bitterness' is garbage," says middle linebacker Mike Curtis. "I feel that way and 95 per cent of the Colts feel that way.

"Shula's a good coach and we have to play a good team. The rest of it is theatrics invented by people to keep busy."

The Colts' tough defense, still smarting from suggestions they deliberately blew their season finale a week ago to draw Cleveland instead of Kansas City as a playoff rival, bottle up the Browns' offense at a skimpy 165 yards.

Bubba Smith blocked two field goals, Rick Volk intercepted two passes and the rest of the Baltimore defense came up with two fumble recoveries and another interception.

Johnny Unitas, as always the master, completed six straight passes in one 92-yard touchdown drive and rookie Don Nottingham, the 441st player chosen in last year's draft, gained 92 yards on the ground and scored touchdowns on one and seven-yard runs to stake Baltimore to a 14-0 halftime lead.

Nottingham was filling in for injured Norm Bulaich, who the Colts hope to have back next week.

Jim O'Brien, the hero of last year's Super Bowl, accounted for the rest of the Colts' scoring with second half field goals of 42 and 15 yards, more than offsetting a 14-yarder by Cleveland's Don Cockroft.

"Our defense did it for us," said Coach Don McCafferty of Baltimore. "They were fantastic."

Cleveland quarterback Bill Nelsen, who was forced into the three interceptions by a strong pass rush, dumped four times for losses and got only one pass to a wide receiver all day, observed improvement in the Baltimore defense since the teams met in a September game won by Cleveland, 14-13.

"I think they were much stronger than they were in September," Nelsen said. "and we didn't put much pressure on them. The double-teamed the outside men so I went to the backs more, but I didn't even have time to throw to them."

The Browns threatened the first two times they had the ball, twice penetrating deep into Baltimore territory on a 39-yard pass from Nelson to Fair Hooker and a 48-yard punt return by Leroy Kelly, but a fumble and the first of Smith's blocked field goals stopped the drives.

"With Baltimore's great defense, you have to capitalize when you can," lamented Skorich. "We couldn't."

The Colts, who allowed 500 yards less than any other team in the NFL this year, held Kelly to 49 yards on the ground and stopped Bo Scott with 25. Cleveland had a net of 69 yards rushing.

The classic performance by the world champions set up an ideal match for next Sunday at the Orange Bowl. Miami won the AFC East with a 10-3-1 record while Baltimore was 10-4, the teams splitting their two games.

Whatever happens, Curtis gives assurance, Baltimore will not be trying to win it for Shula's sake.

"I have to play them," he said pointedly. "I don't play Shula."

Passing Duel Looms In Shrine Contest

MIAMI (UPI)—The director of the Shrine North-South football game says if he has his way tonight the two coaches will shake hands and come out throwing.

Andy Gustafson prides himself on picking quarterbacks for the game that go high in the pro draft despite a lack of publicity during college, and he says tonight's game is no exception.

"We get out list of talent from friends in the pros and both quarterbacks Dean Carlson (Iowa State) of the North and Jim Hamilton (Arkansas State) of the South are high on their lists," he said.

"There's been so many great football players who didn't get a line of ink in college and their satisfaction must come from making it in the pros," Gustafson said. "This gives the North-South spectators a chance to say they saw so-and-so play while he was still an unknown."

Hamilton will be throwing to speedy Fred Graves and James Quinn of Virginia Tech and Carlson will be tossing to Al Hannah of Wisconsin and Barry Pearson of Northwestern.

But all the South throwing might not be done by the quarterbacks. Coach Bill Battle of Tennessee has installed a few gimmicks in his offense, including halfback passes and an end-around pass.

Tommy Durrance of Florida, who'll start at tailback for the South, has been hitting consistently in practice on short passes and Calvin Harrell of Arkansas State was practicing the long passes.

North coach Johnny Majors of Iowa State is expected to be a little more conventional, using Ernie Cook of Minnesota and Bill Butler of Kansas State to run the ball.

A family rivalry will also be involved in tonight's game, which will be nationally televised (ABC).

Majors' younger brother Bobby, an All-America at Tennessee this year, will be in the South team's defensive backfield.

The elder Majors said with a grin, "I haven't lost any sleep over it and I'm sure Bobby hasn't either, but it should be real interesting."

The North-South series is tied at 11-11-1 overall, but the North hasn't lost a game since 1966.

NBA PLAY

Cleveland Triumphs; Lakers Trim Houston

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The National Basketball Association's Central Division race is reaching the critical stage—the Cleveland Cavaliers are threatening for first place.

The Cavaliers, who gained national recognition last season with their extended losing streaks, moved to within a half-game of the division lead Sunday night with a 108-102 victory over the first-place Baltimore Bullets. It was Cleveland's fourth consecutive victory and moved the Cavaliers to a 13-23 mark as compared to the Bullets' 13-22.

Cleveland could move into first place Tuesday night if the Cavaliers can beat Portland and Cincinnati defeats Baltimore.

In other NBA action, Los Angeles extend its record winning streak to 28 games with a 137-115 rout of Houston, Chicago edged Seattle 103-102 and Milwaukee topped Atlanta 114-92.

Some hands reach out to touch and help, others are clenched in pain and despair. We all ask "Why?" to the cruel contrasts of our life. Why poverty in a land of plenty? Why loneliness in a world that would join hands? Why war when the impulse of the heart is to love? The aching chasm between the real and the ideal everywhere provokes the question . . .

WHY?

In a world looking for answers
maybe God is the place to start.
God is hope. God is now.

tough team," said Brodie, "but we wouldn't want it any other way."

Brodie threw scoring strikes of 78 yards to Gene Washington and two to Bob Windsor in Sunday's victory over Washington, but it was a gamble by Allen that turned the game around.

Allen had passed up a chance for a field goal early in the game and went instead for a first down try on fourth down. Charlie Harraway rewarded his coach with a one-yard smash to the five and two plays later Billy Kilmer threw five yards to Jerry Smith for a touchdown.

In a similar situation in the third quarter and with the Redskins ahead 10-3, the maneuver failed when Frank Nunley and Jim Sniadecki dropped Larry Brown for a two -yard loss at the San Francisco 14. The big defensive play seemed to perk up the 49ers, who were less than brilliant in the first half.

Brodie needed only three plays to tie the score, hitting Washington at the Redskins 40 over Pat Fischer, and the fleet San Francisco wide receiver galloped the rest of the way to score. The play came on third down and Nolan praised Brodie for making the call that he did.

Bruce Gossett booted a 23yard field goal for San Francisco's only points in the first half and Bob Hoskins fell on a fumble in the end zone with 3:20 left for what proved to be the winning score.

That "gift" came on a low snap from center George Burman to kicker Mike Bragg, who was standing in the end zone. Bragg couldn't handle the ball and Hoskins, who plays on the specialty teams, fell on it for the score.

That TD pushed San Francisco into a 24-13 lead but the Redskins, who never gave up and earned the praise of President Nixon, fought back for a touchdown —a 16-yard pass from Kilmer to Larry Brown — to cut the lead to the final spread and were still battling at midfield when time ran out.

Seals Waste Lead, Fall To Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI) — The California Golden Seals must have had a funny feeling they'd been there before.

The Seals were in front twice in the first period Sunday night and then bowed, 6-2, to the Vancouver Canucks.

The same thing happened in October when the two squads clashed in Oakland. The Seals then took an early 4-0 lead and fell apart for a 9-6 dumping.

Penalties caused havoc in the California camp Sunday night.

The final period saw Canucks Wayne Maki, Ted Taylor and Dale Tallon score while Dick Redmond of the Seals was in the penalty box and teammate Gary Croteau was sitting out a penalty.

Ironically, before Sunday the Seals' penalty had only allowed one goal in the last six games. That was against Los Angeles Saturday, a contest California won 3-1.

The Seals next meet host Montreal Wednesday and go on to Detroit Friday. It's Buffalo Sunday before returning to the coast where the Seals visit Los Angeles Jan. 4.

Score by periods:

California	2	0	0	—2
Vancouver	1	2	3	—6

First period — 1. California, Pinder 11 (Sheehan-Boldirev) 5:04; 2. Vancouver, Guevremont 6 (Tallonaboddy) 8:15; 3. California, Pinder 12 (Sheehan-Boldirev) 14:29. Penalties — Schella 0:32; Quinn 13:39.

Second period — 4. Vancouver, Connally 9 (Guervremont-Kearns) 7:28; 5. Vancouver, Boudrais 11 (Schella-Tallon) 17:3;6. Penalties—Shmyr 6:13; Taylor 14:59.

Third period — 6. Vancouver, Maki 9 (Kurtenbach-Schella) 2:33; 7. Vancouver, Taylor 6 (Guevremont-Ward) 8:07; 8. Vancouver, Tallon 9 Boudrais-Baloni 12:13. Penalties — Redmond 0:35; Croteau 10:37; Quinn (major) 19:06; Pinder 19:41.

BILETNIKOFF

Oakland Star Paces AFC Receiving Corps

OAKLAND (UPI) — The National Football League campaign ended on a sad note for the Oakland Raiders —they failed to make the playoffs for the first time in five years—but Fred Biletnikoff proved something he set out to do six years ago.

When the Florida State product was drafted on the second round in 1965, the rap on him was that he lacked the speed necessary to make it as a big-time wide receiver.

Although he has had better seasons, 1971 was the most satisfying from the standpoint of accomplishment while playing under adverse conditions.

When the totals were added up after 14 regular season games, he was at the head of the class with 61 receptions for 929 yards.

Winning the league's reception category was great, of course, but it becomes all the more impressive when the problems that wracked the Oakland receiving corps are unfolded.

To begin with, Warren Wells, who with Biletnikoff gave the Raiders one of the most feared pass receiving tandems in the NFL, was sidelined before the season opener because of offthe-field difficulties.

When injuries struck, it forced rotation of the post normally held by Wells and, in turn, opposing teams found it more profitable to double-team Biletnikoff.

Not only that, the Raiders, considered the passingest team in football, made a 190-degree turn and became a grind-it-out squad on offense.

"Actually, all of that didn't make much of a difference," Biletnikoff said earlier this week while storing away his equipment for the last time.

"Winning the receiving title was satisfying, but so what?" he added. "The only thing that counts is winning the Super Bowl and we're not even in it.

"I'd gladly be the 20th ranked receiver if we could go to the Super Bowl."

All athletes work hard to reach the top in their field and with the 6-1, 190-pound Biletnikoff, it was no different.

Realizing he lacked the blazing Bob Hayes-type speed, Biletnikoff concentrated (the most important word in his vocabulary) on precise pattern running and perfected his "moves."

"As a receiver, he has many assets—among them fantastic body control and tremendous spring in his legs," Oakland's Daryle Lamonica said recently. "But maybe the most important attribute is his concentration on the ball. It's the best of anyone I've ever seen.

"It hasn't been easy for him this season," Lamonica continued. "With Wells gone, he has attracted much more defensive attention. Double coverage has been almost standard for Fred. I'd have to say this has been Fred's best year overall. He's the greatest."

Skeptics who said he'd never make it in the pros would have to agree with Lamonica after the kind of season Biletnikoff has had.

Foster Thrashes Italian Champ In Zurich

ZURICH (UPI) —Mac Foster, a California heavyweight, used former Italian champ Bepi Ros as a punching bag Sunday and scored a technical knockout in the eighth round.

Foster, whose home is in Fresno, was hitting the bulky Italian almost at will when Ros's handlers threw in the towell.

Ros took a mandatory eight count in that round and was bleeding heavily from the nose.

It was Foster's 29th knockout in 30 pro fights. He lost, but only once, to Jerry Quarry.

"We made too many mistakes; they didn't make any mistakes," he said. "The club that makes the fewest errors will win the game. That's what happened."

"The ball was wet and tough to handle," said Allen.

Not so, replied Burman, a six -year pro from Northwestern. "It was just a bad snap...too low. The ball wasn't wet. It's up to the center to see that it is dry."

Less than five minutes earlier with the 49ers having third and one yard to go for a first down at their own 22, Gene Washington got behind cornerback Fischer and caught a 78-yard bomb that gave the 49ers a 10-10 tie.

"(John) Brodie's been doing that for 10 years," said Allen. "Our defender just misjudged the ball." (Gene Washington said the tricky Candlestick Park winds blew the ball over Fischer's outstretched fingertips.)

But the play that seemed to turn the tide was when the Redskins' Larry Brown failed to get a first down early in the third quarter on fourth down and inches to go at the SF 11. Linebackers Frank Nunley and Jim Sniadecki smeared him for a two-yard loss with Washington leading 10-3 at the time.

NHL ROUNDUP

Rangers' Yule Long, Merry

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The New York Rangers agreed today that the longest Christmas most of them have ever spent at least ended on a merry note.

The Rangers were away from their families from Friday afternoon when they left for Minnesota until after Sunday night's game with Montreal in New York but came home with a pair of victories — a 2-1 win over the North Stars Saturday night and Sunday night's 5-1 romp over the Canadiens.

The Sunday night triumph gave the first-place Rangers a seven-point lead over the third-place Canadiens in the National Hockey League's East Division. The Rangers lead the second-place Boston Bruins by four points.

Vic Hadfield scored two goals and went past the 400-mark in career points and Ted Irvine, Glen Sather and Pierre Jarry also scored for the Rangers. Gilles Villemure, who has yielded only one goal in nine of the 18 games he has been in the New York net, had a shutout until Yvan Cournoyer scored with 4:15 left in the third period.

"We hated the schedule when we first saw it," said Hadfield. "But now that it's over at least we got the four points we could get out of the two games. It's like money in the bank."

Ken Hodge scored two goals and Phil Esposito tallied his league-high 28th of the season for the Bruins, who stretched their unbeaten string to six games with a 3-1 win over the Toronto Maple Leafs. Bob Baun's first goal of the season cut the Bruins' lead to 2-1 in the third period but Hodge scored his second goal of the game into an open net with 23 seconds left.

The Chicago Black Hawks ran their winning streak to eight games and increased their lead in the West Division to nine points by beating the Los Angeles Kings, 6-3, on third -period goals by Chico Maki, Bobby Hull and Jim Pappin. The Black Hawks remained unbeaten at home this season with 15 victories and two ties.

The Detroit Red Wings defeated the North Stars, 5-1, the Philadelphia Flyers routed the Pittsburgh Penguins, 6-1, the Buffalo Sabres downed the St. Louis Blues, 6-3, and the Vancouver Canucks topped the California Golden Seals, 6-2, in Sunday's other games.

Mickey Redmond scored two goals for the Red Wings, who outshot the North Stars, 19-4, in the second period; Serge Bernier had a goal and a club record of four assists in one game to lead the Flyers; Mike Byers and Rick Martin had two goals each as the Sabres extended the Blues' winless streak to 10 games and the Canucks rallied from two one-goal deficits in the first period to blast the Seals with the help of power-play tallies by Wayne Maki, Dale Tallon and Wayne Connally.

Six Marin Net Stars Invited To Tournament

Six Marin County players have been invited to participate in the Northern California Tennis Association's 10th Junior Round Robin tournament, which will begin Monday at the Carmel Valley Racquet Club.

The selections are Jerry Suyderhoud of San Anselmo in the boys 18; Dan Tierney, Tiburon, boys 16; Leslie Airola, Tiburon, and Bee Kilgore, Tiburon, girls 16; and Sue Beatty, Tiburon, and Diane DeMartini, Greenbrae, girls 14.

The seven leading players in each of eight divisions were invited to play. Each player will play two 16-game matches a day against the other six in his division. Final standings will be based on total games won.

The NCTA will award a gift certificate to the winner in each division. The outstanding player, determined by total games won, will be awarded a perpetual trophy. A sportsmanship trophy also will be awarded, the recipient determined by a vote of the players.

Indiana Upends Kentucky

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Unable to handle one division leader Saturday night, Indiana tried the other division front runner Sunday night with a much better result as far as the Packers were concerned.

Following a 150-129 loss at the hands of Utah, the Pacers came back to beat Eastern Division-leading Kentucky 117-111 in one of two American Basketball Association contests Sunday night. In the other game, Carolina rallied for a 123 -117 victory over the New York Nets.

Mel Daniels scored 26 points, including the go-ahead basket in the final quarter, to help Indiana beat Kentucky and snap the Colonels' winning streak at six. Roger Brown, with 25 points, and Fred Lewis with 23, contributed to the Pacer's attack.

Dan Issel paced the Colonels with 28 points, 23 of them in the second half, while teammate Louie Dampier chipped in with 26.

Joe Caldwell scored 15 of his 21 points in the last quarter and rookie Jim McDaniels tallied 38 points and pulled down 20 rebounds while playing the entire game as Carolina came from behind to beat the Nets. Rick Barry led the losers with 44 points.

Kicking Keys NFL Playoff

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—This may bring the whole state of Florida down on my neck but I don't think the better club necessarily won that ball game between Miami and Kansas City.

I say that primarily because of the way the longest game in pro football history was settled.

Garo Yepremian decided Saturday's playoff game in Kansas City with a 37-yard field goal after 7:40 of the second overtime period, his boot providing the Dolphins with a 27-24 win and a berth in next Sunday's AFC's finale against Baltimore, which conquered Cleveland, 20-3.

KICKER DECIDES

In the end, it all came down to which team had the better field goal kicker, or more specifically, which kicker had the better day because when it was all over Garo Yepremian, Miami's left footed little Cypriot, readily conceded that Jan Stenerud, Kansas City's skinny field goal specialist from Norway, really was "the best kicker" even though his two misses cost KC the game.

Again, this isn't taking anything away from such men as Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick, Bob Griese or Paul Warfield, but I had the feeling here was a ball game really being kicked away more, by Stenerud, a man trying to be too precise, than it was actually being won by superior forces.

Every time I looked up, it seemed, somebody was going for a field goal. If pro football is turning into a mere game of kicking field goals, why doesn't each club station its kicker on the 40-yard line or thereabouts and let him see how many he can make good in 10 tries?

There even is evidence some of the players are getting tired of all these field goals also.

What was it that Alex Karras grumbled?

BREAK BACK

"You break your back out there all day and here comes some 5-foot-6 foreigner running out on the field yelling 'I'm going to keeck a touchdown.'"

Alex Karras is a cynic, true. And why pick on foreigners?

But even some of the Dolphins admitted it was "a bit of a letdown" to see Saturday's struggle settled by this quiet little fellow who didn't even get his suit dirty.

Don't get them wrong though. The Dolphins love Garo Yepremian and they'll take what he has given them, but it makes me wonder a bit when a ball game like Saturday's is settled by a field goal, as last year's Super Bowl Game between Baltimore and Dallas was, if maybe too much of the foot has been brought back into football.

Take a look at the four playoff games this past weekend. There were field goals flying all over. Three in Dallas' 20-12 win over Minnesota, three in the Miami-KC contest; three more in the Baltimore-Cleveland clash and three more in San Francisco's 24-20 elimination of Washington.

TOO MUCH

That's 12 not counting the missed attempts, and I think it's too much. You get a ball club that plays a brilliant game on defense and is beaten by a field goal. I don't think that's what pro football really was meant to be. You get Garo Yepremian leading the league in scoring and Jan Stenerud right at his heels. Again, I don't think that's what the original designers had in mind.

"The game has changed," says a fellow like Gino Cappelletti, who did such an excellent job kicking field goals for the Boston Patriots before retiring this year.

"The way the game has changed, every team has a field goal kicking specialist, and all the coaches and the teams really want to know now is a kicker's percentage," Cappelletti adds.

"I dunno," says Gino Cappelletti, "I've got a lot of respect for a guy who can stand on the sideline, then come in cold and do the job."

Me, too. But I've got far more respect for the guy who works down there in the pit all day long and does the much tougher job.

Utah State Defeats Japanese Gridders

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Aggies, the first American college team to play in Japan since the sport was introduced here 57 years ago, clobbered two Japanese all-star teams during the Christmas week.

The Aggies beat a Japanese University East all-star team 50-6 in Tokyo Dec. 19, and trounced an all-Japan University West team 45-6 in Osaka Sunday.

Utah State head coach Chuck Mills said: "All-Japan had a well-drilled team with excellent fundamentals and gave us a hard time. I think it would be a good idea for an American university team to come to Japan once every three years. It not only would help to stimulate interest in American football, but would also give the Japanese teams a chance to find out their improvement and their level of play."

The varsity squad resumed practice Sunday night after a 10-day examination layoff and four of the blacks participated. One was delayed enroute to Ithaca and the sixth is injured, the spokesman said.

Basketball

ITHACA, N.Y. — Cornell University's varsity basketball squad is back at full strength with the return of its black players who had boycotted the team in a dispute with the coaching staff.

A school spokesman said Sunday night that the differences "have been resolved."

which he is a member. Elmer was one of the 11 49ers on the field when Redskin kick returner Leslie "Speedy" Duncan was doing his thing, 66, 67 and 37 yard returns.

"If it wasn't for Hoskins it would have been disaster for the special teams," said Elmer, nursing a groin injury suffered late in the game. You can bet that won't keep him out of the Dallas game."

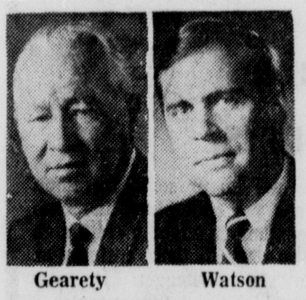
Northgate Park's I-Info Corp. Acquires Rest Of Subsidiary

The fast-growing I-Info Corp. at Northgate Industrial Park has acquired the remaining 40 per cent of its subsidiary, Display Dynamics Corp., Berkeley-based producer of high resolution microfiche readers which I-Info uses in its date retrieval systems.

Display Dynamics, now a wholly-owned subsidiary of I-Info, will serve as the latter's research and development arm, according to president Armand DePizzol of San Rafael. It employs 20 workers and has annual sales of $400,000.

I-Info now has microfiche credit verification systems in operation in Salt Lake City, Denver and Phoenix. The system is being used by three major airlines to detect stolen airline tickets and also by two oil companies to monitor credit cards presented in their service stations.

A CITYWIDE CLEARANCE SALE by Novato merchants will be held Jan. 6, 7 and 8, according to Irving D. (Chip) Chapman of Chapman Shoes, who is chairman of the Novato Retail Committee. Stores will attempt to clear their inventories and offer bargains in merchandse that is left over from the holiday season.



Gearety Watson

M. A. (KELLY) GEARETY of Gearety Construction Co., San Rafael has been elected president of the San Francisco, Peninsula and Redwood Empire Building Industry Association. The Building Industry Association is the affiliate of the National Association of Home Builders in Marin, San Mateo, San Francisco, Napa and Sonoma counties.

Other Marinites active in the association are Reuben Kaehler and Paul Scheller, both of Novato.

PAUL M. WATSON of San Rafael, an assistant vice-president of Wells Fargo Bank, has been named manager of the Cow Hollow office in San Francisco. He formerly was at the Civic Center office and has been with the bank since 1958. He succeeds Richard A. Olrich of San Rafael, an assistant vice-president, who has been given a new assignment in the bank's West Bay division.

DAVID HOUSTON JR. of Kentfield has been appointed senior sales assistant in the San Francisco sales district of Bethlehem Steel Co. He joined Bethlehem in 1940 in the sales department and was transferred to the accounting department the following year. After serving in World War II in the Naval Air Corps, he rejoined the company in 1946.

New Responsibility

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Dr. John C. Hamaker has been named a vice-president of Automation Imdustries Inc. and will be responsible for the company's metal processing and aerospace manufacturing activities.

BIKE 'N BANK

That's the way Inge Kahn of San Rafael prefers to take care of financial matters since Wells Fargo installed concrete bike stands in offices in San Rafael, Mill Valley and Novato. The Bank also has installed bike racks in offices in Stockton, Woodland, Davis, and Sacramento, and is installing additional stands for bicycle enthusiasts on the Peninsula, south of San Francisco.

Grace Is Typical Of Diversification

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mention W. R. Grace & Co., New York, and most people think of shipping, cruises and South America.

Those areas actually accounted for only 2 per cent of the 120-year-old company's earnings last year. One would hardly recognize Grace, long noted for its "Casa Grace" in South America and the familiar green and black stacks on its ships.

W. R. Grace, completely out of the shipping business today, typifies the way companies are diversifying and internationalizing to stay afloat competitively.

Chances are the last turkey or record album you bought was wrapped in a Grace division's flexible packaging film, and your order of fresh meat may have been marketed in a Grace-made meat tray. That new skyscraper downtown may have been coated with a new Grace spray-on fireproofing, or perhaps the Halloween candy you gave the neighborhood kids came from Grace's candy unit. Even the books you take out of the public library may have been purchased through a Grace division.

Grace employs more than 60,000 people around the world in more than 300 plants, 1,000 sales office and distribution facilities. They are located in 48 states and 43 countries of North and South America, Europe, Africa, Asia, Australia and New Zealand.

Its main business thrusts today are chemicals and consumer products and services.

Grace's chemical business includes battery separators, container sealing compounds and catalysts. Industrial chemicals and specialty products, bases for its chemical business, range from petroleum and industrial catalysts and graphic arts products to cleaning chemicals and water and pollution control chemicals.

In the early 1960's, Grace decided to get into the consumer market and has. Its frozen foods business includes national distribution for seafood and pizzas. On the West Coast and in the Southwest, Nalley's (a Grace division) snack food products can be found on supermarket shelves.

The company retains some of its nautical flavor through riverboat-style restaurants in St. Louis and California.

Grace units design and market furniture upholstery and bedding, office supplies, footwear and handbags, women's casual wear and sporting goods. F.A.O. Schwarz, the famed New York toy store, is part of the Grace family.

Abroad, through subsidiaries, Grace is No. 1 in France and Spain and No. 2 in Europe in the expressway business. It dominates the in-plant feeding and meal voucher business in Continental Europe. In Italy, it operates the world's largest pasta manufacturing unit. It is a major producer of ice cream in Ireland and Italy, markets salad oil and household soap products throughout France and is a leader in the Netherland's soft drink industry.

Isn't It Time To Set Graduation Standards?

"It is inconceivable and appalling that a major educational system has not laid down some basic achievement to be met before a high school diploma is issued."

This statement is from a San Francisco Grand Jury report, sharply critical of the San Francisco schools, which was issued this month.

WHILE IT MAY BE "inconceivable and appalling," the fact is that few school districts have set standards that students must meet before receiving a high school diploma.

Quoting again from the San Francisco Grand Jury report: "It appears that the only standard now in effect is that the student attend a certain required minimum number of classes each year, for a specified number of years."

Even this much may not be always true. Not all high school teachers "take the roll" every day, so there is not always a check on whether the student has attended "a minimum number of classes each year" Nor is there, necessarily, a minimum attendance requirement for the student to pass the course.

THIS SCHOOL YEAR, for the first time, there will be some minimum requirements for high school graduation in California.

The George Miller Jr. Act of 1968 specified that the state Board of Education should prepare minimum academic standards for graduation.

The board in June, 1969, set the first of these, in mathematics and reading. It ruled that, effective with the 1972 graduating class, no student could be graduated from high school who had not attained the eighth grade level in reading and mathematics.

So far, the state board has gone no further.

THE GEORGE MILLER JR. Act also provided: "The governing board of any school district maintaining a high school shall adopt minimum academic standards for graduation . . ."

The late George Miller Jr., perhaps not fully aware of the dilatory tactics of many school boards, did not include any deadline by which such standards should be adopted. So far, few high school districts have gone beyond the eighth grade proficiency in reading and mathematics prescribed by the state.

What the San Francisco Grand Jury described as "inconceivable and appalling" therefore applies also in Marin and elsewhere.

THE SAN FRANCISCO grand jurors are not alone in being appalled at this lack of standards — which renders the high school diploma largely meaningless, to the detriment of those graduates who actually applied themselves and earned their diplomas.

We are in the third school year since passage of the George Miller Jr. Act. Would it be too much to ask that our school boards get busy on setting the standards which the act requires?

Ecology Madness

"Ecology! Everything these days is ecology! I hate the word." So says an engineer friend. And it is true that some people are lusting after the chaste maiden in an unseemly manner, denouncing as soon as the proposals are laid upon the table every new project to generate more electricity. "If we have to have a brown-out someday, some of these same people will yell the loudest and blame the utilities," says our friend.

We know there is some truth to his charge. Two decades ago Californians were ready to accept any kind of project, just so long as it was labeled Progress. Today some people display a similar myopia in the presence of the great god, Ecology.

By PAUL E. PETERZELL:

Growth Of Secrecy Keeps Pace With New Agencies

It's no wonder that John Q. Public harbors dark thoughts about his government; that's the way it feels about him, too — especially the federal government.

We had assumed that keeping the public in the dark about its own government's business was a bureaucratic passion that grew as agencies atrophied, but we were wrong. The Economic Stabilization Board, with virtually no history at all as it tackles price and wage controls, already has sealed its doings inside a black box.

We tried to peek inside the other day, but the lid was slammed shut.

ALL WE WANTED to know was the board's decision on whether it would challenge the Golden Gate Bridge District's elimination of commuter discounts. We might as well have asked for the guidance system to our latest hush-hush missile.

"We are not permitted to give out that information," we were told by the board's public relations spokesman. We were tempted to ask him why the board even bothered in that case to have a spokesman, but he seemed so happy — all wrapped up in edicts from Washington — that we did not want to chill his day.

The fact that the board's decision would be free for the asking at the bridge district made no difference, he said. He had to stick to the rules.

It's that sort of flypaper-thinking that makes government such a marvelously inefficient machine. All very depressing.

STANDING AT THE OTHER end of the secrecy scale is the bridge district's general manager, Dale W. Luehring. Largely because of his open manner, the district's image and accomplishments have a new luster.

Luehring is everywhere with his message about the district's role in transit. Even when we took our son to see Santa, there was Luehring — all 20 of him as we passed the television sales area. All of the demonstrator sets were tuned to the same channel, and there he was, being interviewed again.

FOR WEIRD ACRONYM of the year we commend People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area, who claim it's pronounced "piffgunura." What an awful label for such a noble cause!

Speaking of noble causes, San Francisco Supervisor Roger Boas's campaign for the Democratic nomination in the Sixth Congressional District (which will include all of Marin by next June's election) has picked up new support in Marin. Included in a list of endorsements were Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, Mill Valley City Councilman Jean Barnard, and former Marin County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker.

The common "inside" prediction now is that Boas will not be challenged for the nomination by fellow Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn. The reason: Mendelsohn's big San Francisco supporters haven't recovered from his hugely successful 1971 campaign in time for him to run so soon again.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Letters for "What Our Readers Say" are welcomed. To be published, they must bear the writer's signature and address (only the city will be printed, but street or post office box address must be included.) Try to limit letters to 200 words. The editors reserve the right to cut long letters, or to reject any that may be libelous or in bad taste.

Two Columns Expose Wrongs In Our Country

Thank you, thank you for your two columns by Walton and Furgurson on Dec. 1.

Walton pointed out all too vividly how the big corporations are sending California down the tubes.

Furgurson and this "Fat Society" of his were great. He lays bare the idiocies of the "Fat Society" and those in it who would wreck our remaining wilderness.

Eureka To Usurp, Not Buy Tidelands

In your issue of Dec. 17, under "What Our Readers Say," you printed a portion of my letter, Double Indemnity in Tidelands Bill."

Your editor stated, "Senate Bill 1008 calls for a State loan to the City of Eureka for purchase by it of tidelands in private ownership, with the State to be repaid from Eureka's share of sales tax."

The sum of money alocated by this legislation is not for the purpose of purchasing tidelands. Rather it is for use by "City Hall" Eureka as a "war chest" to usurp private property from present lawful owners.

The money voted by the legislature will be used for attorney fees, court actions, surveys, etc. . .

What Revenue Has Deficit To Share?

The propaganda machine is revved up again spewing forth the glories of revenue-sharing.

Congressman Mailliard says the controversy between San Francisco and the federal government "is probably the best argument for revenue-sharing that I can think of". Comment: the best is none too good.

President Nixon has made some hints about picking up the tab for school financing to relieve the property tax burden. Let the efficient IRS syphon the money off from your wallet, pay the bureaucrats to administer it up and down, send some of it back to your schools if they behave and conform to federal bureaucratic standards. Any left over might be sent to Fargo, North Dakota, where a local politician needs votes. (No offense intended, Fargo)

Beware of revenue-sharing! Ask yourself — what revenue does a federal budget deficit have to share?

AN EDUCATOR'S VIEW

Did Supreme Court Decisions Make Humanism State Religion?

By Dr. JOHN W. GILBAUGH
Professor of Education, San Jose State College

Have the secular public schools become temples for a religious minority — the Humanists? Aftermath of the recent school prayer debate in the United States House of Representatives may dwarf previous separation-of-church-and-state controversies before the issue is finally resolved.

Motives may be open to question of those opposed to the proposed constitutional amendment which would allow prayers that are not compulsory in the public schools. While reasons given for opposition by various groups to nondenominational and non-compulsory prayers may seem logical and objective to minority groups who voiced them, they do not represent the feelings of a substantial majority of United States citizens.

Though the motives of all school-prayer opponents should be examined in depth, an initial probe of the Humanists, a minority religious sect, might prove to be an eye-opener.

THE READER may recall that nondenominational prayers and reading of the Bible without comment had been as much a part of the public school curriculum as the 3 R's and flag salute throughout the entire history of public education. That is, until the Supreme Court intervened by its 1962 and 1963 decisions which took God out of the public schools. This, of course, must have enthralled the Humanists. For, according to a spokesman for the Humanists, Humanism is identified as a non-theistic religion.

Here are some pertinent excerpts on Humanism and school prayer from Gina Allen's editorial broadcast on behalf of Humanists, on Dec. 9, over KCBS Newsradio, San Francisco:

"The American Humanist Association, with its national headquarters in San Francisco, has taken a firm stand against the prayer amendment. The AHA is the largest Humanist organization in the United States, with a great many members in the Bay Area . . . These members are drawn to Humanism because of its non-theistic philosophy. Humanism believes that people can and should take responsibility for their own lives without divine guidance. We are a religious minority and recognize that traditionally religious minorities are best protected by separation of church and state."

WHEN THE SUPREME Court banned God from public education it would seem reasonable to expect the same court to provide judicial safeguards to prevent any religious group from moving in to fill the resulting vacuum. A religious philosophy articulated in the public schools which places man on the throne that some religions reserve for God is as much a violation of the concept of separation of church and state as was the practice of reciting a nondenominational prayer, ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

To teach children to work out their own moral codes and to arrive at their own notions of what is right and wrong, all Humanistic, is offensive to those who believe in a supreme being other than worldly man. Yet this Humanistic religion has been given free reign in the public schools.

Recently, this educator observed a classroom bulletin board attractively decorated which conveyed in tall letters the Humanistic message: "DO YOUR OWN THING." Yet, if that same emphasis had been given to such messages as "TRUST IN GOD," or "JESUS SAVES," would the non-theistic Humanists have been the first to complain?

The time may be now for concerned Americans to address themselves to the question: Did the United States Supreme Court inadvertently establish Humanism as a state religion by its 1962 and 1963 rulings banning prayer and Bible reading in the public schools?

ALMANAC

Today is Monday, Dec. 27, the 361st day of 1971 with four to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full stage.

The morning stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1945 the United States, Russia and Britain announced they would govern Korea as joint trustees for five years, then grant independence.

In 1968 the Apollo 8 astronauts returned to earth after a trip around the moon 10 times.

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Everything Going For Nixon As He Enters Election Year

GOP CONSERVATIVES DON'T WORRY NIXON. The growing evidence of conservative dissatisfaction is seen as no political threat to the President.

Not that conservatives are without political power. Nixon was defeated for governor of California because of conservative desertion. He won the nomination for President in 1968 because he had conservative support.

But running for re-election as incumbent President is different. The electorate is nationwide. Nixon is winning more support from independents than he is losing to conservatives.

Nixon can't lose many conservative votes when he has Governor Reagan and Senator Goldwater actively campaigning for him.

THE LEGISLATIVE RECORD OF 1971. This Democratic Congress spent half its time attacking the President and the other half passing the legislation he most wanted.

It extended the draft, passed wage-and-price-control authority, and enacted a wide-ranging tax reduction.

Nixon succeeded in deflecting all congressional efforts to force him to end the U.S. role in Vietnam faster than he thinks wise, but by ever narrower margins.

The Vietnam doves lost some battles but are shaping the President's decisions. Withdrawal will be speeded up in the coming months.

THE LEGISLATIVE PROSPECTS FOR 1972. Though not in quite the form he would like, Congress will pass the measures the President most wants — some kind of revenue sharing, a reshaped family assistance program, limited reforms in the machinery of the executive branch.

The new international monetary agreement, including dollar devaluation, will be quickly approved.

THE DEMOCRATIC DILEMMA. It's this: In both House and Senate the Democrats simply have to give Nixon nearly everything he needs to implement his new economic program. When they support his economic policies, they help elect him, but if they refuse to support them they help defeat themselves.

Reason: The state of the economy is the overriding concern of the voters — and will be all next year.

Their hope: That Nixon's economic policies will work, but not too well, too soon.

NEW WAR THREAT IN ASIA. Kim Yong Shik, South Korea's foreign minister, sees a mounting threat of a new invasion from North Korea. Here is the evidence behind this fear:

1—The North Koreans are stepping up their psychological warfare. Their broadcasts daily proclaim that the government has completed its preparations for war.

2—It has named the approximate time of the attack — before March of 1972.

3—North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung is reported to be determined to reunite Korea by military means by his 16th birthday — April of next year.

Japanese visitors to North Korea report they found the country widely fortified and mobilized.

The big unanswered question: Will Red China aid a North Korean invasion, as it did in 1950, or act to deter it?

MORE CONSUMER PROTECTION IN PROSPECT. Congress will have a sheaf of bills before it next year to provide a comprehensive new-product safety law.

One out of every five accidents related to household products is placed to faulty construction or bad design.

This translates into 6,000 lives lost, 22,000 cripples, four million injuries.

Mrs. Smith Tells Senate A Plain Truth That Hurts

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Quick — what contribution to American history was made by Rebecca Felton? By Rose Long? Dixie Graves? Rose Bushfield? Gladys Pyle? Hattie Caraway?

The office trivia expert identified them as Secret Agent 99 on "Get Smart," a famous southern stripper, a turn-of-the-century suffragette, a silent film star, Shirley's old science teacher, and that old bat who used to go around chopping up bars.

Few historians, and even fewer U.S. senators, remember today that these were the only ladies to make it into the Senate in the first 170 years of our nationhood. The greatest political distinction achieved by one of them was Mrs. Caraway of Arkansas' chairmanship of the Committee on Enrolled Bills, a position that does not automatically qualify one for enshrinement in the rotunda of the Capitol.

But ask any member of that "world's most exclusive men's club" who Margaret Chase Smith is, and he can immediately tell you that she is the only current lady member of that club. If he is a vigorous campaigner for the presidency, as so many club members are this year, he might today add some colorful descriptive adjectives which are not to be quoted under any circumstances.

WERE MRS. SMITH some outsider pounding to get in, or some freshman who does not yet understand the club rules, the gentlemen might merely sigh gently and go on with their business as usual when she challenges the very principles on which the Senate operates.

But she isn't. She came to the Senate in 1948, only three years after Hattie Caraway left, and then she was already a veteran of three terms in the House. That means she is senior to 88 of her 99 colleagues. Not only that, but for all those years she has been independent, tough, thorough and incorruptible. So when she speaks, they listen.

They have to strain to hear her, and when they do they are not always glad they did. It is her words, not her rhetorical style, that make an impression.

THE FIRST TIME they did was nearly 22 years ago, when she stood and quietly delivered a "declaration of conscience" against the late Joseph McCarthy's abuse of Senate rules in his campaign of "anticommunism." She said he had made the Senate a "forum of hate" and a "rendezvous for vilification." McCarthy was not the only one of her Republican colleagues who felt the sting of her indignation that day. Many others have felt it since.

Thus, when the grandmotherly lady from Skowhegan issued a statement just before the Christmas recess, less than a week after her 74th birthday, the Senate knew better than to expect a soft and lacy Merry Christmas greeting. What it got instead was a kick in a vulnerable spot the club would prefer not to have exposed to the public. And it hurt.

She said, quite accurately, that "the Senate is a club of prima donnas intensely self-oriented — 99 kings and one queen —dedicated to their own personal accommodation."

Her inclusion of "one queen" was mere graciuosness, for she is more Spartan and less guilty of the self-orientation she complained about than any of the 99 kings. She set a record that still stands for answering Senate roll calls — 2,491 of them consecutively until she was out with a hip operation three years ago. Since then, she has taken up where she left off.

BUT NOT HER colleagues. As she said, in the last Congress the average member voted only 79 per cent of the time, and a handful missed more than 40 per cent of roll calls on each side of the Capitol.

The worst villains, she said, are those who use the Senate as a springboard to moonlighting for fat fees on the lecture circuit or to running for president. Both take senators away from the duties they are paid $42,500 a year to perform, she said. And why does the Senate itself not do something about it instead of "piously wringing its hands?" That was what brought her to describing the Senate as a club of self-oriented prima donnas.

In effect, she predicted in advance that nothing will ever grow out of her proposal for a constitutional amendment to correct this abuse. She declared that any member who missed more than 40 per cent of the votes in any session should be expelled — not at the whim of his colleagues, but by constitutional law.

Her proposal did not draw unanimous endorsement from her colleagues. In fact, it did not even draw unanimous condemnation. Most of her colleagues were out of town when she laid it down — home for the holidays. Which is only fitting, since any fair-minded taxpayer will grant that a man needs a hiatus after working a long series of three-day weeks, extending back in an unbroken string to Thanksgiving week-end. Then Congress will return refreshed in another four weeks or so, to take up the nation's urgent business (as usual), which will not include the constitutional amendment proposed by Mrs. Smith.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Dec. 27, 1961

The Novato Unified School District board agreed to open negotiations on renewing the contract of dismissed Supt. William J. J. Smith.

Warden Fred R. Dickson announced 25 to 30 of San Quentin Prison's most troublesome inmates would be moved to other institutions in an attempt to end a reign of violence at the big prison in Marin.

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 27, 1951

The historic Borello ranch at Olema was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest N. Kettenhofen of Novato for $140,000 in what was called one of the largest real estate transaction in Marin County during 1951.

State Controller Thomas H. Kuchel said the State of California's surplus "may well exceed $128 million" by June 30, 1952.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By WAT TAKESHITA

Farewell From Wat Takeshita After 20 Years As I-J Writer

If you think that the first column you ever write is a tough one, you ought to try writing the last one. It's worse.

Comes a time in a man's life when something jolts him out of his comfortable routine and casts him off on a new course. For me, that time is now.

I'll be leaving the I-J and newspapering at the end of this year and literally turning a new leaf from the first of the year. Not that I haven't enjoyed newspapering; I have. And top management at the Independent-Journal has been great.

THE LATE ROY A. BROWN and Justus Craemer and the present publishers, Wishard Brown and Jack Craemer, have been the type of men you'd want to work for and with. To the casual reader, the newspaper may appear cold and impersonal, but to one who has worked with the paper's management for more than 20 years, they have been tops — not only as businessmen running an enterprise but as human beings concerned with the lives and welfare of their employees and families.

They have always treated all employees from editors to trainees with courtesy, and with respect for individual dignity.

The same cannot be said for some of the mid-management personnel with whose policies we have sometimes disagreed and disagreed sharply.

No job, regardless of pay or prestige, is so important that a person must sacrifice self-respect and dignity to hang on. And what better time to make the change than at the start of a new year?

FOR 20 YEARS I've been skimming the surface of social and political activities, with little time to sympathize with the downtrodden or to probe in depth the interesting or tragic episodes that occur daily. Now, I may have time to do more than just skim the surface.

I'm grateful for the many friendships made on the old courthouse beat, San Rafael City Hall both old and new, and at the Civic Center and Hall of Justice. Those friendships I'll always cherish and, I hope, never lose.

And so, until we meet again, a pleasant holiday season and a Happy New Year to all!

THE BITTER-ENDER

Communication Gap? What Would You Expect?

By ED BRANDER

"I believe that with this approach we can actualize an ongoing program that will be meaningful in adjusting the behavioral patterns of these under-achievers."

The man really said it. I couldn't believe my ears, but he said it. And he was an educated man. At least, he had a string of letters afterhis name — Ph.D., P.D.Q., A.M., M. and P.M., or something like that.

He was a school superintendent talking to his board of trustees. The board members sat there and nodded their heads as if they knew what he was saying. Of course they didn't. They couldn't. He was talking non-language.

I HASTEN TO ADD that educators are not alone in perverting the mother tongue into incomprehensible jargon. All sorts of specialists talk non-language. And write it, too.

Probably newspaper copy readers must be blamed for starting it all, with their headlines: "Nixon Ups Budget." "Jackson Inks Pact." "Spiro Ires Chet."

The copy readers may be forgiven, though. They're up against the tough job of telling what the story's about in words that must fit the number of characters of type in narrow columns. And though they torture the language, the results usually are semi-intelligible — and happily, very brief.

Besides, they've been doing it for years and years. But only recently has non-language become the favorite of the so-called intelligentsia.

THE TECHNICAL and professional papers are full of it, of course. But it has spilled out into general publications. Try this morsel from a book review in a recent issue of the Nation:

"Unfortunately this crucial role for psychoanalysis has hitherto been concealed, partly by the weakness of its scientific status through its neglect of systematization and verification procedures, but mainly because psychoanalysis rests on a meta-psychology, based on the assumption of scientific materialism, in conflict with the theory of meaning which informs its clinical and therapeutic practice."

Enough! Enough!

Even the clergy has gone in for non-language. Try (if you're still able) this direct quote from a religious publication:

"The On-Going Church: The total commitment and involvement required of the emerging laity, if they are to enter into the dialectic and dialogue of our times, is a confrontation required by the ecumenical spirit, in which the People of God give witness to Christ in their own milieu, at work and at worship through the community, with the community and in the community, always guided by the charisma of the Holy Spirit; fed ao the agape and constructed in kerygmatic catechesis, they will make the cosmic Christ relevant to the modern existentialist world, spiraling up through biological and psychological tensions toward the omega-point . . ." There is more, but I spare you.

KNOW SOMETHING? That same school superintendent I quoted in the first paragraph complained, at that same meeting, that there is a "communication gap."

I should say there is! What else can you expect when our educated and educators throw out the English language and return to the Tower of Babel?

Dim Future Seen For Rails

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A railroad president believes the new government rail corporation, Amtrak, should preside over "an orderly shrinkage of rail passenger service" because passenger service has little future.

B. F. Biaggini, president of the Southern Pacific Co., said there was no market for long distance, intercity passenger transportation by rail.

"People just won't ride it," Biaggini said. "And they won't pay what they should to support the service."

Biaggini said he did not believe rail passenger service would amount to much by the end of the 1970s "other than in a place like the northeast corridor—the stretch from Boston to Washington."

An Innocent Suggestion

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) —It all started when city officials innocently suggested citizens might help in the post-holiday trash cleanup operation by bringing their Christmas wrapping paper trash to the fire stations for easier pickup.

The response was overwhelming. By today, tons of trash — including kitchen garbage — stood in heaps at all the city's fire houses.

A single garbage truck put on holiday duty to pick up the trash was not able to put a dent in the piles of garbage. Officials said regular crews would try to clean up the mess by tonight.

Chief Pilot Dies In Crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)— The bodies of the state of Nevada's chief pilot and his wife were found Sunday in the wreckage of their light plane in a mountain area.

Lew Gourley, 58, Carson City, Nev., and his wife, Penny, were killed last Wednesday when their single-engine plane crashed on a flight to Arizona. The Gourleys planned to spend the Christmas holidays with their son, Alex, and other family members at Mesa.

Rescue teams from the Nellis Air Force Base and the Clark County Jeep Squadron recovered the bodies after search planes spotted the Gourleys' plane.

Darwin Theory Held Failing Modern Test

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Michigan State University naturalist told a group of scientists today that Darwin's theory of evolution fails a new test based on chromosome count which gives rise to the possibility that there were numerous spontaneous beginnings to life.

Prof. John N. Moore, in a paper prepared for delivery today at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS), said Darwin's theory was "more illogical than biological."

In another text prepared to be delivered today to the year's largest science meeting, the executive director of the National Wildlife Foundation said the American public is confused by supposed scientific research that contradicts itself on the environmental issue.

Thomas L. Kimball, the head of the organization, said the lack of pure scientific research has fouled up the attempts to improve the environment.

The AAAS opened its weeklong session Sunday.

The theory of evolution expounded by Charles Darwin in 1859 stresses the "monophyletic" theory that the first living cell over millions of years changed into complex many-celled organisms — from a simple amoeba-like animal to man.

If this were so, Moore said there should be an increase in chromosomes and the quality of gene material carried by chromosomes as the complexity of animals increase.

"Absolutely no pattern of increase of chromosome number from less complex to most complex is at all detectable," Moore said.

He said chromosome counts showed man ranking lower than frogs and toads.

"It resolves the question, 'Did life begin spontaneously just once, or many times?'" he said. "Since we have the gaps and inconsistencies in the records, it's reasonable to conjecture that there were multiple beginnings of life."

Moore said there also was no scientific evidence of links between major kinds of plants and that the study of fossils had not shown any connection between plants and animals.

"The typical evolutionary explanation doesn't make sense in view of today's knowledge," he said. "The monophyletic explanation is more illogical than biological."

On the environmental question, Kimball said the public is confused by "purported scientific research rationales that mix philosophy, politics and opportunism with analysis of factual research data" that results in diametrically opposed conclusions and recommendations.

"Unfortunately, there appears to be a growing conviction among the American populace that is is extremely difficult to get the unvarnished truth from the scientific community," he said. "As a consequence, professionalism is being downgraded in direct proportion to the inability of the public to guess which scientist has the right answer."

Kimball asked the AAAAS to establish ethics committees for all scientific disciplines involved with natural resources and exclude from the committees those who make a conclusion and then gather only data to support that conclusion.

The lack of pure scientific work, he said, has led to "new pollution abatement laws replete with political tub-thumping, a new dimension to more intense and centralized government regulation, an alarmed industrial complex insecure in its continued ability to pollute at the expense of the environment, the Madison Avenue hucksterings of endless products reportedly harmless to the plant and animal ecosystems and a citizenry that is incapable of separating advertising fantasy-land from truth."

At a symposium Sunday, scientists talked of how aggression serves people constructively. At a similar meeting last year, the destructive role of aggression in war and violence was stressed.

Dr. Edward D. Joseph of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York began with aggression as a thought rather than as an action. He said a thought, any thought either hostile or nonhostile, is a useful channel for the discharge of aggressive behavior.

Aggression is instinctive in people but he defined it as an "approach to" any number of situations in normal and ordinary life.

Joseph said he wondered if psychoanalysts, of which he is one, have "emphasized the hostile and destructive aspects of aggression, at the expense of overlooking the equally or perhaps greater importance that it may play in human adaptive behavior in both human mental development and human interactions."

Arsonists' Fire Razes School Wing

Fire set by arsonists completely destroyed a four-classroom wing at Santa Venetia Middle School Christmas night. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Marin County Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli said the wing, a separate building, was completely engulfed in flames when firemen arrived after a neighbor noticed the blaze at 11:54 p.m.

He said the building was hidden behind other wings of the school, allowing the fire to get well under way before being seen.

A witness reported seeing two men running from the school just before the fire started, the chief said. He said it was not known whether they were adults or juveniles, but it was believed they were over 18 years old.

Chief Pedroli made a plea to anyone knowing anything about the cause of the fire to contact him.

The fire, which left four classrooms a pile of rubble, was started in at least two places and possibly three, according to Pedroli. It was prevented by firemen from spreading to another building 20 feet away.

Seven firemen from the county department with four engines were assisted by a unit from San Rafael and another from Terra Linda in putting out the fire, which was under control about 1 a.m.

Pedroli said someone had broken into the school, which houses sixth, seventh and eighth grades, the night before the fire. And earlier on Christmas night, a construction shed being used by workmen building an addition to the school was broken into, he said.

School officials were meeting with insurance investigators today to determine what to do about the destroyed classrooms, according to the San Rafael schools superintendent, John F. Plank.

Plank said he thought it might be possible to rebuild the fire-damaged wing at the same time construction of a $130,000 addition is going on.

The school is being enlarged so that about 300 additional students from San Pedro and Glenwood areas may be bused there next year.

Chief Pedroli said his men were still sifting through the rubble today in an attempt to determine how the fire started.

Another Chance Of Rain Tonight

Intermittent rain, heavy at times, and gusting winds continued to hit Marin County during the Christmas weekend and there was a 40 per cent chance of more rain tonight.

Throughout California, 68 persons died in automobile accidents during the three and one-quarter day Christmas period, the California Highway Patrol reported.

There was no traffic death in Marin or Southern Sonoma County and little storm damage reported.

Chuck holes in Novato Boulevard and Center Road bothered Novato drivers. The largest hole was at Novato Boulevard and Seventh Street, Novato maintenance superintendent Carrol Madsen reported.

Travelers' warnings remained in effect from eastern Oregon and Northern California into Nevada and Utah, and another storm system was reported moving southward from the Washington coast.

The 68 traffic deaths statewide was the worst record in California history, the highway patrol said, surpassing the previous record of 64 deaths in 1950.

Strongest rains in Marin fell in the western part of the county, with Point Reyes Station reporting 3.44 inches between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. today. Woodacre had 3.63 inches in the same period.

Other totals between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. today included: Sausalito, 2.22 inches; Belvedere, 2.01 inches; Mill Valley, 2.33 inches; Fairfax, 2.2 inches; Novato, 2.87, and Petaluma, 2.12.

A total of 1.51 inches which fell in Tiburon between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday was the heaviest rain there in a 24-hour period since last March.

Winds in Tiburon gusted up to 33 miles per hour Friday and Saturday morning and up to 43 miles per hour in the 24 hours prior to 8 a.m. today.

Hanoi Broke Its Promise, Laird Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, in the face of some of the heaviest U.S. air strikes in North Vietnam since 1968, charged today that Hanoi had violated the understandings that led to the bombing halt three years ago. (See related story, page 2.)

Laird said those violations included the shelling of South Vietnamese cities, including Saigon Dec. 19; construction of an infiltration road through the demilitarized zone; failure to negotiate meaningfully as promised: and firing on unarmed U.S. reconnaissance aircraft.

"I am saying the understandings must be lived up to by both sides," Laird said. "They clearly have not lived by these understandings."

He gave no indication when the current bombing campaign of North Vietnam would end but said it was not the largest in any 24-hour period since he became defense chief three years ago.

In a year-end news conference, Laird also said there would be no draft calls in January and "quite possibly" none in February or March.

Laird said the absence of a draft in January was due to Congress' order of a further cutback in Army strength of more than 5 per cent; Pentagon wishes to test the effect of recent higher pay approved by Congress in an effort to work toward an all-volunteer Army; and progress made in withdrawing troops from Vietnam.

Greyhound's Stormy Era Of Commute Runs Ending

By JEFF GREER

A stormy romance three decades long will come to a parting of the ways New Year's Day.

That's when the Golden Gate Transit District will take over the commute bus routes served since March 1, 1941, by Greyhound buses for all of Marin and much of Sonoma County.

From 1860 until after the Golden Gate Bridge opened in 1937, the ferryboat was queen of commuterland, and the railroad train its consort.

The transfer of commuters' affections to private autos and Greyhound buses crossing the new span was both sudden and financially distressing to Northwestern Pacific Railroad and the ferryboat companies that plied San Francisco Bay.

The railroad petitioned in 1939 to abandon its commuter service, but was not given state permission to do so until early 1941.

Greyhound was already on the scene for Mill Valley and other Southern Marin commuters; the big buses started their first runs from there to San Francisco in October, 1940.

Elmer M. McVerry, Ross resident who is still Marin County operations superintendent for Greyhound, recalled that his company took over commute operations gradually. The firm extended service first to the Ross Valley and later to San Rafael. Few riders commuted from further north in the county, he recalled.

McVerry was a bus driver on the Mill Valley runs in 1940, then became a dispatcher in San Anselmo and San Rafael a year later.

He still has an office in Greyhound's San Rafael terminal, which will have far fewer buses rolling through after the commuters switch to the big green and white Golden Gate Corridor bus fleet. The terminal now has service through Ross Valley each half hour, and hourly on the Highway 101 route.

Next month, "there will only be about 10 Greyhounds a day" through San Rafael, McVerry said. They will link Marin to such points as Fort Bragg and Eureka. Commuters from east of Santa Rosa in the Valley of the Moon and Sonoma area will still ride Greyhound to San Rafael for transfer to the bridge district buses, until the Golden Gate district extends its service.

McVerry didn't recall hearing about it, but the first time commuters rode Greyhound buses probably was in 1933, when a freight train accident stalled NWP's commute trains at Corte Madera. The railroad hired lumbering "Pacific Greyhound" buses with long noses and luggage racks on top, to take the stranded commuters around the blocked section of rails to the Sausalito ferry, according to the Independent-Journal's files.

Other commuters began riding Greyhound regularly in 1934, when NWP discontinued

Now The Computer Can Deny A License

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A note of caution for the holiday partygoer: A computer which adds an average of 3,000 new names a day is making it easier for the states to deny licenses to drivers convicted of serious offenses, particularly drunken driving.

Known as the National Driver Register Service, the computer operated by the Transportation Department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration now contains the names of more than 3 million drivers.

The idea is to help state motor vehicle agencies decide when they should deny licenses by providing information on a driver's past record, no matter where he lived.

The federal government does not rule on license applications since the licensing of drivers is controlled by the states. But state officials have made some 99 million requests for a search of the computer records on drivers in the 10 years the computer has been in use.

Safety officials say these searches have turned up more than 870,000 drivers whose names were on the computer's list of license denials or revocations.

Before the computer began operating, a state official had no way of checking whether an applicant had lost his license in another state.

There is no mandatory requirement that a state participate in the computer listing service, but all 50 states now submit the names of drivers whose licenses have either been revoked or their application denied.

The government keeps the names of motorists who have lost their annual licenses for a serious violation such as drunken driving, which officials claim may be the cause of one-half of the 56,000 traffic death toll, in the computer for seven years. In less serious violations, the name is removed after five years.

Each state sets its own criteria for licensing drivers and this makes it difficult to gauge the effectiveness of the computer service.

GI Drug Rehabilitation Draws Travis Protest

Air Force officials, who operate the hospital, made no move to break up the demonstration. An unindentified Army colonel was called in to talk to the rebellious patients.

Eighteen soldiers and four civilians were in the ward, Air Force officials said.

The Air Force said there were no arrests and no violence in the protest by the 22 persons.

An antiwar Veterans group said the protest was designed to protest "unfair military policy regarding drug patients."

William Hankin, a spokesman for the Vietnam Veterans against the war, said four civilians, including a serviceman's wife, were staying with the soldiers in the ward.

Hankin said his group was "trying to fight against the army's blaming GIs for drug addiction."

Hankin, who said he was a medic in Vietnam, claimed the men in the ward were not addicts but had flunked a test "that is not accurate. A soldier could have been given drugs for a wound and flunked it."

600 Peasants Now Are Landowners

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI)— The Dominican government has distributed 100,000 acres of land among 600 peasant families as a year's-end present, it was announced Monday.

Gilberto Villanueva, director of the land reform institute, said the latest grants brought to 4,415 the number of families who have become landowners this year.

Nixon, Brandt Set To Talk

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon completed preparations today for summit talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt which he hopes will produce a new harmony in allied policy.

Nixon and Brandt are scheduled to meet for about five hours tomorrow and Wednesday in the President's Florida White House.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon is seeking to coordinate the actions of the U.S., Great Britain, France and West Germany in dealing with "the accelerated pace of change in the international arena."

'Undermanned' Corte Madera Fire Department Hit In Report

Corte Madera's fire department is undermanned, poorly equipped and inadequately trained, and upgrading it will be a costly project, according to two consulting engineers hired to investigate it.

Applying top priority remedies would cost almost $200,000 including $64,000 to add four new firemen, and provide 24-hour coverage, Bill S. Ingram, a Watsonville structural engineer, and Watsonville Fire Chief Bryce W. Connick, concluded.

Ingram in a cover letter, recommended that priority recommendations be in effect by July 1, 1972, but added, "We are certain that it will be difficult to accomplish the recommended work in the time allowed."

All of the recommendations for new equipment — including a fire station and two engines — would cost the town $500,000, the report says. It also says the ideal size of the force — now five regulars and 14 volunteers — is 18 regulars and 40 volunteers, but that would raise salaries to $227,000 a year.

That salary estimate alone amounts to more than two-thirds the total revenue of slightly more than $300,000 now raised by property taxes which must carry the burden of financing.

The preliminary report does not offer a further timetable, but Ingram said one would be supplied with the final report.

The two fire consultants will discuss their findings with the citizens fire subcommittee that commissioned the study at 8 p.m. Jan. 5 at town hall.

They proposed a step-by-step program to upgrade the department, which they said is now so bad it "will continue to be quickly overwhelmed by fires of even moderate size under any but the most favorable conditions."

One of Ingram's suggestions for keeping costs down was that Corte Madera contract with Larkspur for fire protection aid.

Biggest cost in the initial step would be $64,000 for additional manpower per year followed by $50,000 for a contract with Larkspur.

He said the town's "basically good water system needs to be extended and improved in some areas" but that the main problem is lack of manpower, equipment and training.

"Fire methods have been dangerously poor with too much dependence placed upon light manning and very small (light pressure) hose streams. This is the result of understandable attempts ... to make up for serious shortages in proper manpower and equipment," Ingram said.

He went on to say that the two-fire-station situation "serves no useful purpose in

SAIGON (UPI)—Squadrons of American jet fighter-bombers bombed military targets in North Vietnam today for the second consecutive day and military sources hinted at more raids to come in the heaviest strikes since the end of the bombing pause in November, 1968.

Hanoi Radio said hundreds of U.S. planes were bombing and strafing densely populated areas, including a hospital, in what the broadcasts called grave acts of war. The U.S. Command said only that the jets were hitting "military targets."

U.S. military sources said the massive raids from U.S. aircraft carriers in the Tonkin Gulf and from airbases in Thailand were ordered personally by President Nixon to counter a growing threat against withdrawing U.S. troops in South Vietnam.

A U.S. Command spokesman, in a vaguely worded statement, hinted the jets returned to their home bases at nightfall Monday and would resume the bombing at daybreak Tuesday.

"The strikes are continuing but are not necessarily continuous," the spokesman said tonight when asked whether the U.S. pilots had called off their bombing runs because of darkness.

A third day of the massive bombardment would be the longest air attack on North Vietnam since President Lyndon B. Johnson halted "offensive" bombing of the north on Nov. 1, 1968. American jets have carried out five one-day and two two-day "defensive" air attacks against the North since then.

Radio Hanoi said five American F4 Phantoms with a total of 10 crewmen were shot down Sunday and railed at the "criminal war acts" by the "stubborn American pirates." The U.S. Command has mentioned no losses officially. Hanoi said several pilots were killed and some captured.

The U.S. Command labeled the latest attack "protective reaction air strikes" against "enemy activity which imperils the diminishing U.S. forces," the command said today.

American troop strength in South Vietnam had dropped to 158,300.

That figure represented a withdrawal of 4,200 men last week and the 158,300 still left was the lowest number since October, 1965, when the U.S. buildup was still on; the figure then was 153,300 men.

Many of the raids were reported directed at huge stockpiles of Communist supplies near the border of Laos in hopes they could be destroyed before they could be sent down the Ho Chi Minh trail into Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Two Hijackings: One Makes It To Cuba

TORONTO (UPI) — A calm and polite young man who talked lovingly of his family but said he had "a mission to fulfill" hijacked an Air Canada DC9 jetliner to Cuba last night after allowing the 82 passengers to disembark here, many of them unaware a hijacking was in progress.

The man, who was not identified, handed a stewardess a note saying he had a fragmentation grenade and wanted to go to Cuba just five minutes before the plane was to have landed at Toronto Airport.

Another hijack attempt was made on an American Airlines plane which took off from the same airport several hours later but the would-be hijacker was overpowered by two crewmen and two passengers when the plane landed at Salt Lake City.

When the Air Canada jet returned to Toronto at 2:45 a.m. today after an almost three-hour stay at Jose Marti Airport in Havana crew members described their hijacker as a "very nice" young man.

The slight, fairhaired youth boarded the plane at Thunder Bay Airport in Ontario, about 50 miles from the Minnesota border.

"He showed us pictures of his little boy and his wife and talked about how much he loved them and his mother," Stewardess Ruthe-Anne Snell, 21, said. "He said he had no father and he'd never see his family again."

Several hours earlier, an American Airlines 707 with 75 persons aboard took off from the same Toronto airport bound for San Francisco. It stopped once in Chicago and took off again with 97 persons aboard.

Over Wyoming, a young man pulled a plastic toy gun and a five-inch knife and attempted to hijack the plane, officials said. The American plane made an unscheduled stop in Salt Lake City where the man was overpowered by two crew members and two passengers. He was turned over to FBI agents in Salt Lake City.

Russell Calame, FBI agent in charge of Salt Lake City, said the U.S. attorney's office authorized charging Donald L. Coleman, 24, Downers Grove, Ill., with hijacking charges, which would be filed today.

Seoul Hotel Fire Toll Rises to 158

SEOUL (UPI) —Lack of outside fire escapes and proper emergency equipment were main contributors to the high death toll in the fire at the Taeyongak luxury hotel, a Korean engineer said today.

At least 158 persons — including one American —were killed and 69 injured in the fire at two-year-old, 22-story hotel on Chritmas day. Officials said 38 persons died jumping from the upper floors, at least one man fell from a rescue helicopter and the others burned to death or suffocated.

Chi Young-dae, an engineering professor and expert on building fires, said the lack of outside fire escapes was the major cause of the death toll — the highest in a hotel fire in history.

Authorities said most of the bodies were badly burned and only 84 had been identified so far. The single American casualty was identified as G. W. Goodwin of Sacramento, Calif., a civilian security officer at the U.S. Osan Air Force Base 30 miles south of Seoul.

The hotel was a luxury establishment located in the heart of the Seoul business district.

Blades, Pot Found In Prison Gifts

Sources inside the prison said a sweatshirt addressed to Bobby Augusta Davis, 30, convicted murderer of four highway patrolmen, concealed eight hacksaw blades.

The package made it almost all the way to Death Row before its contents were detected. According to Joseph R. O'Brien, prison information officer, the blades were found in a check of Christmas gifts.

The source said another inmate almost had a high Christmas, but guards found a five-pound cache of marijuana concealed in a box of chocolates.

O'Brien said neither gift was on the list of approved presents sent to relatives and friends of the inmates.

REPORT

The second station on the east side of town "only invites controversy over which station will house the all-too-few-on-duty men."

"The headquarters station is reasonably well laid out and equipped but is much too small to house the entire Corte Madera fire operation and is not in the optimum location," Ingram said.

He recommended eventually a new building be built to house equipment and provide training space.

Ingram proposed that additional men be hired, new equipment be purchased and a training program for firemen be undertaken.

Ingram did not recommend doing away with volunteers now used by the fire department. He said, however, that the current "blackball" system of reviewing membership applications should be replaced by a qualifications appraisal and background check.

City officials commissioned the investigation after angry homeowners demanded more fire protection following a Sept. 16 fire which destroyed two houses and damaged a third. Earlier this month, another Corte Madera house was destroyed in a predawn fire.

Citizens in east Corte Madera have demanded immediate hiring of more firemen, but Mayor Holmes S. Norville said today that no action will be taken until the council appointed fire committee makes it recommendations in March. In the meantime, he said, the committee will distribute questionnaires to find out how much residents would pay for better fire protection.

He praised the report for bringing out points the town was "just maybe beginning to suspect," but said it would be infeasible to implement it in a year.

A Long Series Of Vandalism

A Larkspur man, who endured a series of vandalism for two months, finally reported the problem to police after another incident yesterday.

Police said Albert J. Byers complained that a pole lamp was smashed at 1 a.m. at his home, 450 William Avenue, then related a plague of damage during the past two months.

Byers told police juveniles cut the wires and took two outdoor lamps, smashed his Christmas lights in the street, ripped a sprinkler and plastic hose from the ground, broke his fence, vandalized his car, stoned his house and threw lighted matches, garbage and bicycle parts in his yard.

Passengers Hurt In Road Wreck

A 78-year-old man was reported in serious condition today at Marin General Hospital with a back injury suffered in a two-car accident on Highway 101 yesterday.

Anton Jensen and his wife, Elna, 72, were passengers in a car driven by Colin J. Rawnsley, 51, of 425 Corte Madera Avenue, Corte Madera, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The patrol said Rawnsley's car, northbound on Highway 101 at the north San Pedro Road overcrossing at 9:15 p.m., struck another car which had spun out, bounced off guardrails on both sides of the freeway and came to rest in the center lane.

Rawnsley was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut nose and his wife, Marjorie, 44, was treated for a bruised abdomen and possible back injury.

Mrs. Jensen was reported in satisfactory condition today with a cut right leg and possible head injuries and a fractured rib.

Man Is Treated For Gunshot Wound

A Marin City man was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital with a gunshot wound in the knee, suffered in an accident at his home.

Marin City sheriff's deputies said Gerald Ford, 24, of 149 Drake Avenue, was injured about 10 p.m. Thursday when a gun he was cleaning accidentally discharged.

Boy, 15, Injured In Minibike Crash

A San Anselmo boy was treated at Marin General Hospital yesterday for a fractured and dislocated toe in his right foot suffered in a minibike accident.

Rick Canoni, 15, of 100 Park Doive, was treated at 12:24 p.m., the hospital said. No details of the accident were available.

Junipers Taken

Eleven Juniper plants valued at $110 were dug up and hauled away from a Standard service station at 301 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard between 10 p.m. Friday and 7 a.m. Saturday, Larkspur police reported today.

He said the men were being held past their discharge date because they failed the test.

In New York, meanwhile, 16 members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW) barricaded themselves inside the Statue of Liberty overnight in a "symbolic protest" which they said would continue until New Year's Day. (See picture, page 2.)

The National Parks Service warned Monday the men would be removed if they turned down a last chance to negotiate. "We have the wherewithal to open the memorial," said Franklin Arthur, chief of the service's Law Enforcement Division.

The demonstration, one of a series staged during the Christmas weekend by the antiwar group, began at about 5 p.m. EST as the statue closed for the day. The protesters, most in their 20s and dressed in jeans, sweaters and old fatigue jackets with combat ribbons, blocked the three entrances to the national monument.

"We as a new generation of men who have survived Vietnam are taking this symbolic action at the Statue of Liberty in an effort to show support for any person who refuses to kill," they said in one-sentence statement.

Arthur said they had demanded evidence that the statement was printed in the servicemen's newspaper (Stars & Stripes) and broadcast throughout Vietnam on the Armed Forces Radio Network. But he said he told them he could not tell news media what to carry.

Jerry Wagers, regional director for the parks service, said he had spoken with the demonstrators early today through the locked doors. He said they turned down his offer to let them conduct a news conference and to continue their protest on park grounds if they came out voluntarily.

"We are nonviolent. We have not damaged this place. We have no plans to damage it," one demonstrator yelled to newsmen through a glass door at the rear of the statue.

An "Open Letter to President Nixon" taped to the door said:

"Each Vietnam veteran who has barricaded himself within this international symbol of liberty has for many years rationalized his attitude to the war. When we were in Vietnam we excused our actions because we thought we had no choice. After coming home we excused our bitterness because we thought that we were entitled to it.

"Last spring we threw our medals into the dirt because we thought it would excuse our guilt and because we thought it would help end the war. Now, as we sit inside the Statue of Liberty, having captured the hopes and imaginations of a war-weary nation, we have run out of all excuses.

"We can no longer tolerate the war in Southeast Asia, regardless of the color of its dead or the method of its implementation. Mr. Nixon: You set the date ... we'll evacuate."

Japan Still Bound To The Family Wedding

By JEFF PENBERTHY
Toronto Telegram Syndicate

TOKYO — A boy and a girl, standing awkwardly apart on a Tokyo station platform ... newly-weds, but strangers.

For the second time this month, Sunday fell on a "Taian Day" — a lucky date on the lunar calendar — and 20,000 couples lined up at Shinto Shrines to be married at this special time.

At Tokyo's Meiji Keneka, the priests pumped out 150 matrimonial units in conveyor belt fashion, and similar festivities were going on all over Japan.

In several places, there were commercially-sponsored "mass weddings," with hundreds of couples taking their vows simultaneously.

Climbing the stairs, we found the new Tokaido line platform crowded with newlyweds and well-wishers. On "Taian," the bullet train becomes a 130 mph honeymoon express.

Relatives waved banners which showed wedding pledges: "We promise you the flower of our passion will bloom in northeastern Honshu." Another two blushing optimists had vowed: "We shall not regret our marriage."

One couple was standing apart by a steel pylon, a little island of misery in a sea of happiness.

The girl, pretty, eyes downcast, nervously fingered the ribbon on a bouquet. He stood several feet away, hands deep in the pockets of a dark suit, tensely waiting for the train's arrival to break the spell of his predicament.

Deserted at last by their relatives and the ominipresent "go-between," they were honeymooners but hardly acquainted.

It is a shock for a foreigner to find that in Japan, one of the most industrialized and progressive nations in the world, more than one third of the million marriages celebrated each year begin something like this.

As the percentage of modern marriages grows, so does the divorce rate. Many are still convinced that the old way is the best.

The challenge of "love marriages," for one thing, has brought some ludicruous excesses.

In recent years, Japan has been feasted to a nude wedding, couples married on buses, car rallies, aeroplanes, skin-divers wed in the water, skaters united on ice — even a pair of sky-divers who exchanged rings in free-flight.

Now, even the traditional marriage arrangement has had to undergo some modernization.

Initially, Omio flourished in Japan's rural village society, and the Nadoko (matchmaker) knew the families of both parties intimately. Marriages were often arranged while couples were still children.

With the mass movement of population into the big cities, however, the professional matchmaker's association, a non-profit organization where a husband or wife can be found for 15,000 yen ($37.50).

"Its a happy job we have," said the association's co-ordinator, Mrs. Hisae Sakata, the pretty (arranged) wife of Japanese Rear Admiral.

"There are seven million boys and girls in Japan who want to get married. We can help them find the ideal partner with a scientific approach."

A young person is introduced to the association by a guarantor — a relative, employer or person of community standing — who can "guarantee them honor." Supplying three snapshots and a studio portrait of themselves, the hopefuls then fill out a long questionaire which has two parts:

"Who I am," and "who I am looking for."

This is evaluated by Mrs. Sakata and her nine "counsellors," all middle-aged mothers, and eventually a potential partner is selected. An "Omiai" (first meeting) is then arranged between the candidates and their families.

This takes place in a brightly lit room, overlooked by a mirror which is framed by two love-birds.

"If they like each other they may meet a second time alone. If there is a third meeting, we usually consider that they are almost engaged." Mrs. Sakata said.

One advantage that the modern "Omia" lacks is that under the village system, the matchmaker and spouse were then responsible to guide the couple, and mediate n any marital problems that arose for the rest of their married life.

One reason that the marriage arrangement continues to be popular, even among modern young people, is that the Japanese are a shy race, and rarely entertain in their homes.

Young people generally have far less opportunity to mix socially than their western counterparts. Besides, the arranged marriage has an unusual record of success.

A matchmaker of the old style, Genkichi Ishizaka, 76, has arranged more than 3,000 marriages, and claims that only five ended with divorce.

Their car, being driven by the younger Penales, collided at 8:54 a.m. with a car driven by Romeo Littleton, 49, of 22 Park Street, Apt. 4, San Rafael, who was driving east on Third, which is one-way west, according to police.

Police said the accident occured when Littleton went through a red light at Irwin Street. Littleton was cited for running the red light and driving the wrong way on the one-way street.

Wat Takeshita Retiring From I-J

By JEFF GREER

Wat Takeshita, prizewinning reporter whose typewriter pounded to the pulse of Marin County news for two decades, will retire from the Independent-Journal Dec. 31.

The veteran newsman was guest of honor today at a luncheon attended by 50 persons, including county supervisors, department heads, longtime county employees and Assemblyman William T. Bagley. The gathering at Nero's Restaurant, in Novato was arranged in Takeshita's honor by Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos and County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell. It was the first county retirement luncheon ever held to honor someone who was not a county official, Mitchell said.

Takeshita was presented with resolutions of commendation from the California Assembly and Marin County Board of Supervisors, as well as other gifts.

After coming to San Rafael in June 1952, Takeshita handled the crime and courts beats, general assignment, the county offices and political news in Sacramento and Marin, and wrote and edited the I-J Editorial page at various times.

Associated Press through the years awarded Takeshita three top prizes for spot news stories, in competition among dailies throughout California and Nevada.

WAT TAKESHITA
Murder suspect looked a little bit like me . . . !

Takeshita's writing also earned him the California State Fair spot news contest award in 1958, when he received the plaque from Gov. Goodwin J. Knight.

Last year, he received an award from the California Association for Mental Health, for increasing public awareness of mental health problems through his stories.

Takeshita said he recalled vividly covering a host of major stories that made I-J headlines — particularly the famed "Filipino Houseboy" murder trial of Bart L. Caratativo, in 1954. Then Dist. Atty. William O. Weissich proved to a jury that Caratativo slew a Stinson Beach resort owner and her estranged husband, after forging a will that left her $160,000 estate to the former houseboy.

"The defendant was short and dark, and looked a little bit like me," Takeshita said. "The courtroom spectators used to say, 'Gee, they're pretty lenient about letting the defendant wander around' when they saw me coming and going in the courtroom."

Caratativo's death in the San Quentin gas chamber was the only execution Takeshita ever had to cover. "I'd never want to do that again," he declared. Watching the double slayer's death was "almost like an invasion of privacy, but I guess the state had to have witnesses," he said.

Takeshita's early days with the I-J reflected a more leisurely pace that vanished as Marin grew and became more hectic. "I used to sit in the Courthouse Creamery across from the Courthouse, with Sheriff Walter B. Sellmer and the attorneys. Whenever anything happened, deputies would run across the street and tell us."

Takeshita was trusted to ride along on police investigations. He was privy to official information throughout his career, an advantage he said helped him write more penetrating and accurate stories.

In recent years, he was a fixture in the Marin Civic Center's administrative wing, covering the supervisors, planning commission and other county offices. After recently being transferred back to the crime and courts beat he held years ago, he decided to end his repertorial career — with no particular plans for his future.

Takeshita, born in San Jose, lived on a Fresno County farm operated by his late father, Japanese-born Tsunejiro Takeshita, until he entered Stanford University before World War II.

Takeshita and his family were among thousands of Japanese-born and first-generation United States-born citizens forced out of their rightful homes in the Pacific Coast states by frightened fellow citizens who feared sabotage after Pearl Harbor.

Takeshita's family first was herded into the concentration camp in the Santa Anita racetrack then allowed to join other Japanese families in Gila River, Ariz. Takeshita's father came to California in 1901 and earned enough to buy his own farm which he operated until dispossessed by the war scare. Reparations were made only in the late 1960s, and even then did not fully compensate for loss.

Takeshita edited a tri-weekly newspaper in Gila River, until 1945. Then he became a Japanese language teacher in an Army school at the University of Minnesota.

He joined the Army in 1946, serving as a translator in Tokyo for military intelligence and later in civil service until 1951. He returned to Stanford for a master's degree, and joined the Independent-Journal the next year.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday unanimously adopted a resolution that other county workers said "just about tells it all" with regards to Takeshita's career:

". . . Whereas Wat Takeshita has covered the county government beat for many years, during which his reportage has always been distinguished by an extraordinary degree of accuracy, fairness and honesty, and:

"Whereas, Wat Takeshita has garnered the deep respect and warm friendship of each supervisor, every county officer, and the innumerable county employees who have been privileged to know him;

". . . Be it resolved, that this board of supervisors does hereby commend and express its appreciation to Wat Takeshita for the outstanding manner in which he has served his employer and the citizens of Marin by chronicling county government with intelligence, precision and skill."

The veteran newsman said he planned to take "a couple of months" to decide on a new career. Meanwhile, he will concentrate on his other interests. He is an active volunteer with the Suicide Prevention switchboard in Marin, a Big Brother, and a life master player and frequent winner in contract bridge competitions.

Takeshita said he intends to continue living in San Rafael.

Deep Snowfall For Reno Area

RENO, Nev. (UPI)—Nevadans dug out today from one of the deepest snowfalls in 20 years.

The storm blew in Christmas Eve, and on Christmas Day there was 15 inches of new snow at Reno Municipal Airport.

Chou Undisputed Leader Of Chinese

LONDON (UPI) — Premier Chou En-lai has emerged as the undisputed "political supremo" of China after smashing a military-backed, left-wing alignment against negotiations with President Nixon, qualified diplomatic sources have reported from Peking.

Chou, whose influence has been rising steadily since the collapse of the so-called cultural revolution in China, is now all but personally running China's political scene, with the blessings of Mao Tse-tung, the diplomats reported.

With a free hand from Mao, Chou is turning Peking's course by 180 degrees, aiming at an early place for China in the world concert of big nations and a strong front against Russia as the most dangerous potential enemy of the future.

At home, opponents have been silenced for the present. But it is by no means certain that they have been silenced for good, the reports said.

The diplomatic reports said the present state of affairs in Peking is the result of planned top level changes by Mao last summer and a subsequent dramatic purge to smash a developing dangerous opposition.

It began, according to the sources, when Chou, with Mao's backing made known that the National Assembly would meet Aug. 16 for a major revampting of the ruling machinery. One of the veiled aims was to whittle down the power of the military, which had been rising to the discomfort of those in supreme political power.

Party meetings in the Central Committee and on lower levels had reflected growing domestic uneasiness, highlighted by opposition to Mao's sudden policy switch which resulted in Peking's invitation to President Nixon.

Mao's deputy, Lin Piao, aligned himself with some of the military as leader of the so-called left-wing opposing the policy switch, the reports said.

The opposition was smashed by a drastic purge which ended in the "physical elimination" of Lin and his wife and a number of military and party leaders, it said.

By HOWARD LUXENBERG.
UPI BUSINESS WRITER

NEW YORK (UPI)—The dramatic Wall Street rally that broke out the day after Thanksgiving will feed steady stock market growth in 1972, according to a United Press International survey of leading brokers.

Many of the analysts even predict that the Dow Jones Industrial Average will crack through the 1,000 point barrier next year.

A few were pessimistic, fearful that President Nixon's new economic program (NEP), unveiled last August, will hurt corporate profits. But most Wall Streeters, convinced that investor psychology finally has turned from caution to confidence, point to recent government actions and see 1972 as a strong year.

The Price Commission, one of the agencies responsible for establishing NEP guidelines, imposed a 2.5 per cent average ceiling on price increases. The Cost of Living Council, another NEP agency, said firms with sales of $100 million a year or more would have to get prior approval for price increases during the period of controls. This covers such giants as General Motors and, in general, the 1,300 biggest American firms doing 45 per cent of all U.S. business.

As the curtain closed on 1971, however, many companies were being allowed to raise prices in excess of the guidelines. Business analysts and economists regarded this as a sign that NEP was not as much antibusiness as a lot of people thought it might be.

International monetary conditions has been another area of worry for investors despite reports that progress was made at December meetings between the United States and its major trading allies.

The Western world's wealthiest nations, known as the Group of 10, have met regularly in an effort to hammer out a world currency realignment as part of a package to end the trade crisis. A solution is expected in January or February.

Martin D. Sass, president of Neuwirth Management & Research Corp., an investment advisory service, said he believes there will be positive developments in the realignment of international currency to facilitate international trade and encourage a flow of investment dollars into the American stock market.

Sass said uncertainty is a major enemy of the stock market, but that as some of the problems are resolved and as the visibility of the economic recovery increases it will be reflected in a lower rate of savings and a return to the investment scene. He looked for a 10 to 15 per cent increase in pretax corporate profits for 1972.

Harry W. Laubscher, senior vice president and diractor of research for Walston & Co., Inc., said "one year from now the Dow Jones blue chip barometer could be wandering around the1000 level, which since 1966 has proven to be a regular bugaboo to the market." The best closing level for the Dow was 995.15 on Feb. 9, 1966.

Laubscher declared that the history-making moves by the administration in the field of economics have done much to materially improve market prospects for 1972.

"Better attitudes toward price-earnings ratios and a rising profit pattern point to higher stock prices in 1972," said Robert H. Stovall, a general partner at Reynolds Securities, Inc.

Robert S. Waill, vice president of Inverness Counsel, Inc., echoed Stovall's feeling. Waill said "as investors finally come to recognize that profits are truly on a rising trend and that a better day is dawning, the new awareness will be reflected in the prices of common stocks."

Harry B. Freeman, Jr., president of Van Strum & Towne, Inc. and the Channing Mutual Funds, said that intermittent pullbacks in the market should be expected, but "I believe 1972 will be a successful year for common stock investments."

Alan R. Shaw, vice president and director of research for Harris, Upham & Co., said he looked for earnings among the Dow Jones industrials of $56.25 in 1971, and $63 to $65 in '72. He said this would compare with 1970 earnings of $51.64.

President's Appraisal Of Year

NEW YORK (UPI)—President Nixon said Sunday his most important decision of 1971 was opening communications with China, a move he believes will contribute more to world peace than anything else he has done.

The most difficult domestic decision las year was to impose wage-price controls and devalue the dollar, the President said.

Named "Man of the Year" by Time Magazine, Nixon's remarks were made in an interview published by the magazine Sunday.

"The most important decision I made this year was the decision to open communications with China," he said. "I believe that it will make a greater contribution to the next generation, to peace in the world, than anything else we have done.

"It was a mixed bag as far as public reaction was concerned," the President said. "I knew that it posed many problems with many of our friends in the world. But it had to be done and this country had to make that move. No other country could; ironically, the Soviet Union was unable to." Discussing his economic moves on the domestic front, Nixon said, "It became apparent that if the U.S. was going to maintain its competitive position in the world, some very strong medicine had to be taken by the patient, the U.S., and also given to our trading partners in the world.

"I was troubled by it because I am committed to the free market." But I would be much more troubled if this had been done by someone else. I don't believe in controls as an end in themselves or on a permanent basis."

Nixon said he believed he has a greater opportunity than any president in history to help create a new structure of peace in the world.

"I am convinced that the United States right now is on the brink of exercising its power to do good in the world, such good as never has been done in the history of civilization because we now can muster our moral force, our economic force and we, of course, have the military power to back up our words.

"Our aim is to build a structure of peace such as we could not dream of after World War II; we couldn't dream of this when Eisenhower was president. It wasn't the right time. It wasn't the right time when Kennedy was there. But now the time may have come, and we must seize the moment -- seize the moment in our relationships with the superpowers."

The President said history showed the key to peace was an even balance of power among the strongest nations. The danger of war arises when one nations becomes too powerful.

Smallest Antarctic Creatures Will Be Object Of Study

By LOUISE WALSH

ORONO, Maine (UPI)—Allen R. Crooker, who may have seen plenty of snow during his 24 year lifetime in Maine, ain't seen nothin' yet. In early January he heads for the Antarctic.

Crooker, a graduate student at the University of Maine, will be part of a research team studying insects at the South Pole. The only break in the isolation during the six-month work, he said, will be provided by U.S. Navy personnel in the area.

A resident of Mechanic Falls in southern Maine, Crooker is well familiar with Mother Nature's work with snow. But the prospect of six months at the bottom of the world, surrounded by only snow and lab equipment, delights him.

Crooker and three other researchers—under the guidance of biology Prof. Russell Strandtmann of Texas Tech, an authority an Arctic and Antarctic arthropods, and the sponsorship of the National Science Foundation—will be stationed at Palmer Station on the tip of the Antarctic peninsula. They will study the winter habits of mites, midges and springtails.

Crooker said he will focus on insects while William L. Graham of Texas Tech studies mites. The difference? "Mites have eight legs," Crooker said, "while insects have only six. That's the most obvious difference to the layman."

Crooker will observe insects surviving in a harsh environment. His time will be spent mostly on the wingless midge—the world's southernmost free-living insect that goes through four life stages.

"Springtails are very primitive," Crooker explained. "Many are found on water surfaces in Maine. They have a hook on the under side of their abdomen which permits them to jump—hence, the name springtail."

He also will study a species found on snow or under rocks. The springtails are black and about one-sixteenth of an inch in size.

The study will be the first on mites during the Antarctic winter. Other research has shown light penetraling the snow cover apparently provides enough warmth for mites to move around under the snow. It previously was thought only eggs could survive in winter.

Crooker and Graham fly to Santiago, Chile, Jan. 1 before going to Punta Arenas in southern Chile for a boat to Palmer Station. Crooker said he will keep weekly contact with Strandtmann via radio telephone communications by the Navy.

By AL ROSSITER JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Apollo 16's astronauts will carry a special array of cosmic ray detectors to the moon in March to find out more about the mysterious particles that can streak through men and their spacecraft.

Cosmic rays are atomic particles that travel through space at nearly the speed of light. Some come from the sun but the most powerful cosmic rays come from all directions outside the solar system.

When they pass through plastic and other materials, they leave a trail of damage less than a millionth of an inch wide. Such tracks have been found in plastic helmets worn by Apollo astronauts. Cosmic rays passing through space pilots' eyes are believed to be responsible for the light flashes seen by astronauts with their eyes closed.

Scientists say such cosmic ray penetration is of no concern to astronauts spending only a few days in space. But there has been research to indicate that men flying on two-year missions to planets without adequate shielding might suffer a potentially harmful amount of body cell damage from cosmic rays.

A four-foot long cosmic ray detector consisting of four hinged panels has been attached to the outside of the Apollo 16 moon lander. Apollo 16 astronauts John W. Young, Thomas K. Mattingly and Charles M. Duke are scheduled for launch to the moon March 17 and they will spend 12 days in space.

The panels are made up mostly of thin sheets of the kind of high impact strength plastic used in spacesuits helmets. Other types of plastic also are used and there are several glass samples.

As a cosmic ray passes through the plastic, it will leave a distinctive track which will be enlarged for laboratory study after the astronauts bring the folded detector back to earth. The shape of each track should reveal the kind of particle that made it.

The cosmic ray detector was built by the General Electric Co., and was designed by GE scientists and researchers from the University of California at Berkeley and Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

GE said the Apollo 16 experiment may answer the most important and puzzling questions about cosmic rays— how old are they?

The study of the mass, energy and abundance of cosmic ray particles penetrating the detectors also should provide new information about the origin of elements in the universe, GE said.

Included in the glass samples is a thin slice of a tektite, a puzzling glassy rock found in large number in some areas on earth. Scientists believe they are hardened drops of rock melted and splashed about by meteorite impacts, but it is not known whether they came from the earth or the moon.

By subjecting an unexposed piece of a tektite to cosmic rays during the Apollo 16 mission, scientists wil get the necessary calibration data to see whether or not the tracks found in tektites were the result of an exposure of a few seconds or a few days. That would help answer whether they came from the earth or moon.

A Cautious Path Taken By Jordan

RAYMOND WILKINSON

BEIRUT (UPI) —Jordan expects more guerrilla attacks against its representatives abroad, but for the moment King Hussein can do nothing more than urge his officials to be cautious.

In the last few months, following their defeat on the battlefield in July and August, Palestinians have begun a steadily escalating campaign against Jordanian property and personnel.

Jordanian aircraft have been hijacked or damaged by bombs. In Cairo last month Prime Minister Wasfi Tel was gunned down.

Two weeks ago the Jordanian ambassador to London was machinegunned but escaped serious rious injury, and in Geneva four Swiss persons were injured when a package exploded at the Jordanian mission to the United Nations there.

The voice of Assifa, the radio controlled by the Al Fatah guerrilla group, said following the latest incident that a dialogue between the king and guerrillas had ended, to be replaced by "the language of bullets and explosions."

The Black September group—the organization which claimed responsibility for the Tel assassination and the London shooting—pledged to eliminate all Arab leaders, especially those of the Jordanian regime— the group considered to be anti-Palestinian.

Jordanian officials believe future attacks will be directed against Jordanians or Jordanian property outside the Hashemite kingdom.

In the last round of fighting the guerrilla presence inside the country was eliminated, making operations there the most difficult to mount.

While talks between the two sides were in progress, which was as recently as last month, there was always a possibility some accommodation might be reached.

It seemed unlikely now that these contacts would be resumed in the foreseeable future.

Thus, any chance of stopping the guerrilla campaign rested with moderate Arab countries such as Egypt which still retained influence with the guerrillas and Jordan.

Egypt was embarrassed that the Tel assassination occurred in Cairo, but it has seemed disinclined or, perhaps, incapable of influencing the guerrillas against repeat incidents—as long as they did not happen in Egypt.

At one point in guerrilla history such tactics were employed only by extremist groups such as the Popular Front for the liberation of Palistine (PFLP) which hijacked three airliners to the Jordanian desert last year.

Fatah, long considered the most moderate guerrilla organization, was said to be the mother of the Black September group. This being so it pushed most of the guerrilla movement toward extremist action and shortened the chances that an accommodation might eventually be reached.

With Jordan incapable of retaliating against the guerrillas who no longer operate from its territory, and with Arab nations either supporting the campaign or refusing to intercede, there seemed to be no early chance of stopping the attacks.

"King Hussein can tell his representatives to be careful and then wait for the next attack," one diplomatic observer said. Adv for pms Mon: Dec. 20

Trial Sought For Some Pakistanis

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

India is considering requests by the new Bangla Desh government to turn over former Pakistani officials in East Pakistan for trial as war criminals, Foreign Secretary T.N. Kaul said today.

Leaders in the new government have asked for the arrest of Dr. A.M. Malik, the former governor of the eastern wing, eight of his ministers and 21 other Pakistani officials on charges of genocide against the East Pakistani people during nine months of civil and fullscale war.

Kaul said that while India was bound by the Geneva Convention to take steps for the protection and repatriation of war prisoners, the government would consider the Bengali requests.

It is up to the Bangla Desh government to make investigations and place any evidence of crimes by individuals in the hands of the Indian army, Kaul said, adding that the Geneva conventions do not provide immunity to soldiers from criminal charges.

In Dacca, meanwhile, the Indian army chief of staff Gen. S.H.F.J. Manekshaw said today he hoped to withdraw about 25,000 Indian troops from East Bengal together with all Pakistani soldiers in camps in Bangla Desh now.

UPI correspondent Kenneth J. Braddick reported that Manekshaw also said a substantial Indian force would remain in the new nation for some time.

The request was the first from the new government asking Bengalis to stop reprisals against non-Bengalis since the 14-day war between India and Pakistan ended Dec. 17.

An Indian official said earlier Indian troops would not step into local affairs and planned no action to try to stop communal strife.

Bengali residents of the People's Republic of Bangla Desh—formerly East Pakistan —said West Pakistani troops and collaborators committed thousands of atrocities in the country since civil war broke out March 25.

A number of reprisal murders have been reported since Pakistan surrendered to Indian troops and rebel Mukti Bahini forces.

An estimated 250,000 non Bengalis are reported kept prisoner in two towns near Dacca—Murpur and Mohammedpur. A rebel blockade is keeping out food and medical supplies.

Also Western newsmen who visited the ferry crossing town of Goalunda on the Ganges River about 45 miles southwest of Dacca Sunday reported seeing piles of non-Bengali bodies in the area.

UPI Correspondent Kenneth J. Braddick in Dacca reported D. P. Dhar, an Indian cabinet-level foreign affairs expert, said the Indian army would take no steps to help the nonBengalis but he had been assured food and medicine would be provided.

"You must remember that the wounds are fresh. Some of those wounds were inflicted on the Bengali people by those who are now complaining they are starving," Dhar said.

"The battle for freedom has been won. We are now facing a much more serious challenge. We now have the battle for reconstruction of the country. We cannot reconstruct and build a new order without peace," the government said in a special statement.

CLASSROOMS DESTROYED BY ARSON

Firemen conferred yesterday in the ruins of a wing of Santa Venetia Middle School, preparing to seek clues to a costly Christmas night fire that reduced four classrooms to charred rubble. (See story, other photos, page 1.) Damage was estimated to run to about $100,000. The fire was deliberately set according to Marin County Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli.

Suspected Pot Party Nets Eight Arrests

Petaluma police broke up what they said was a pot party yesterday, but ruefully reported that half the participants escaped through a rear door and eluded arrest.

Eight others were arrested on charges ranging from being in a place where narcotics are used to battery on a peace officer.

Police said neighbors complained of a loud party at 163 Webster Street at 2 a.m. yesterday. When three officers arrived they said narcotics were observed throughout the house. Fifteen persons were believed to have been at the party, but seven escaped before a fourth officer could be called in to assist.

Booked into Sonoma County jail on felony charges were Dawn Corrinne Fowler, 20, of 163 Webster Street, possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs and obstructing a police officer; Larry John Patton, 20, of 1400 Second Street, San Rafael, battery on a peace officer and being in a place where nacotics are used; Tommy Jay Logan, 22, of 163 Webster Street, battery on a peace officer, possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs; and Ricky Bernard Joseph, 19, of 331 English Street, Petaluma, battery on a peace officer, possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

Released to appear in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court on Jan. 3, on charges of being in a place where narcotics are used were Marilyn V. Ferrera, 20, of 427 Fourth Street, Petaluma; Thomas Dale Firestone, 22, of 78 Wilmington Drive, Petaluma; Dennis Joseph Silva, 21, of 315 Seventh Street, Petaluma; and Donald Figone, 20, of 317 Wilson Street, Petaluma.

Those arrested on felony charges were scheduled to be arraigned today in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court.

Armed Man Robs Station

Menzion's Mobile service station in Mill Valley was robbed of an undetermined amount of cash at 7:45 p.m. yesterday by an armed bandit who locked the station attendant in a restroom.

Mill Valley police said attendant Michael Wagener reported a man came to the service station at 530 East Blithedale Avenue, pulled a gun and told him to open the cash box.

After removing the contents, the bandit locked Wagener in a restroom and fled, according to Wagener.

The robber was described as of Latin-American ancestry, 6 feet-2 inches, 160 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a brown suede jacket, dark trousers and dark-rimmed glasses.

'Gift' Bomb Kills Mayor

MANILA (UPI)—A bomb hidden inside a red ball of cheese and wrapped as a Christmas gift killed a newlyelected Filipino town mayor in his midtown Manila hotel suite Sunday night, police said today.

Jose Cruz, 36, was dead on arrival at nearby Manila Doctors' Hospital with multiple wounds in the neck, stomach and legs. Cruz was elected mayor of the coastal fishing town of Malabon northwest of Manila and had been staying at Manila's Shellborne Arms Hotel prior to assuming office Jan. 1.

The bomb explosion shattered the hotel suite's glass panes, ripped pieces of furniture and other articles inside the room and set fire to the curtains and the bed.

Pioneers' Descendants Forsaking Soil For Concrete

By JESSE BOGUE
U.P. International

In 1870, Elmer Zeis' grandfather loaded his household goods into a wagon and left New York state for the West, to the 3-year-old state of Nebraska.

It was not a unique event. By the thousands, others were doing the same or already had headed for those rich prairies beyond the Mississippi and the Missouri.

But Elmer Zeis still is on a Nebraska farm, living in the farmhouse where he was born, working 600 acres of level land northeast of the town of Valley, 18 miles west of the bustling city of Omaha where other descendants of the covered-wagon voyagers now live the urban life.

Zeis, a hard-working and thoughtful man, represents a declining breed—a farmer who has stayed on the land. He plans to continue his life there.

So does Jack Shafer, fifty-ish and a working grain farmer who took over his father's wheatland near Calvin, N.D., population 78; and Leo F. Howes, Moretown Common, Vt., who said he has "been farmin' for 41 years. It's changed quite a bit."

They all have ideas about what has happened to the small American farmer and why his problems—costs, prices, labor supply, marketing obstacles—continue to grow.

In 1949, an estimated 26 million persons were on farms, representing 17.5 per cent of the total United States population at that time. In 1959, it was down to 16.6 million, representing 9.4 per cent of the total, or a little more than half of what had been the proportion 10 years earlier. By 1969, it was 10.3 million, 5.1 per cent of the total; and the estimated population for 1970 was 9.7 million, or 4.7 per cent.

Out in Zeis' home state, some agriculturists think the decline must level off. Nebraska Agriculture Director Glenn Kreuscher sees the downward trend as primarily from financial causes, but he says that "today, with the equipment we've got and the money it costs, we don't need a man out there on every little patch of ground."

Norman Beller, head of the state-federal division of agricultural statistics in the Cornhusker state, says "There has been no slacking off on this downward trend, but some time there's got to be." Zeis, helped out by his wife, Irene, and sons Mike, 14, and David, 12, grows about 330 acres of corn, some hay, and feeds about 300 head of cattle a year. He is a Farm Bureau member, and president of the Douglas County Extension Board.

Asked to pinpoint the main problem facing farmers, he gave an answer which might be typical of any small businessman: crop and livestock prices might be satisfactory if it were not for the skyrocketing costs of equipment and maintenance.

"You can't get a piece of small equipment for under $1,000," he said. "The combine I bought this fall cost $20,000; I pay all that and use it one month out of the year. Then I have to trade a piece or two each year just to keep current."

A tractor of the type he uses costs $10,000; a smaller model, $8,000; a disc, $2,500; a grinder, $2,700; a feedwagon, $1,500.

Zeis estimates he has $50,000 tied up in machinery, and another $25,000 in storage buildings and bins. "It's just as if someone in the city would try to get along with what they made 30 years ago," he said.

Cost factors are almost as bad in the livestock area, he continued. Buy beef for feeding at $36.50 per hundred pounds; add to that the costs of feed; a death loss of 1 to 2 per cent; 7 to 7 1-2 per cent interest on money borrowed to buy livestock; machinery prices; fence and building upkeep, veterinary costs...

"We're not crybabies," Zeis said. "I just want to stay on the farm.

"We're still waiting for things to get better. Ten years ago, I would have thought by now we would not have any financial problems —and we shouldn't, but we do.

"I keep doing more very year to try and expand—like I want to put 100 more acres in crops and increase my feeding operation. Yet, I'm afraid of the prices.

"I don't think the government has solved anything since it began creating agricultural programs," Zeis continued, "but I don't think now it could leave suddenly. I wouldn't prefer any more permanent help from the government; but they got us into it, they should get us out ... pricing and tax relief are things the government could do pretty easily."

But he sees some reason for cheer for himself and others like him.

"Something has got to change because people have to be fed," he said. "And there's now way to do it without the family farm."

A half-continent away, costs figure high among the reasons cited by Vermont Agriculture Commissioner Edward Eurich for the disappearance of the small farmer—these, plus belief of many that it is easier to make a living in other fields. The number of family farms in Vermont shrank from 26,000 in 1925 to 5,000 in 1967, and are down to 4,000 today.

Howes said it is getting tougher by the year to operate a small farm. He has 331 acres, and 30 milk cows on them.

"Used to get by milking only a few cows," he said. "Gotta milk more now. We're a family farm. Got one fellow who works for me, but how long he stays depends on how long I stay in business.

"It's hard to get help these days, you know. It's hard to get good dependable help. You gotta be mechanized. Big investment even with a small farm. The expense is terrible. The price of milk is good—but expenses! Electrical work is bad, and expensive, and so is machine fixing."

In Limestone, Maine, on land he said his father "carved out of the wilderness" before the turn of the century, Hamer R. Ward Sr., 70, now rents out 280 acres of prime potato crop land, and takes in rent on apartments from airmen at nearby Loring Air Force Base.

"Just like all independent businesses, we're falling by the wayside, and I think it's a bad thing for the country," said Ward.

He resents what he said is the way the processing industry is controlling farmers. "Now the fresh market is gone for these potatoes," he said.

"We have to go through processors. Everything is getting under control of a few big people and the chains are taking over." In Fresno, California, in the land from which much of the United States gets its fruits and other land products, Vernon Wynn is manager of the Production Credit Association, source of farm loans.

Wynn said the average loan made by PCA was $20,000 in 1961, and has jumped to about $75,000 today. Farmers are having a tough time meeting expenses from their own resources, he said, and are borrowing for longer periods of time.

In some cases, he has told a farmer to find an "outside" job, or even to have his wifa get a job in order to make enough money to live upon.

Yet he refuses to lose hope in the small farmer.

"As long as he can remain economical, and I think he can, the small farmer will exist," said Wynn. "And everybody will benefit.

FIRE DAMAGES HOUSE, BURNS CAR

Fire of undetermined origin burned the garage, car and upstairs bedroom at the home of James Frush Jr. at 352 Riviera Drive in the Peacock Gap section of San Rafael. Michael, 10, first smelled the smoke and told his mother, Patricia, who looked into the garage to find it a mass of flames. Neighbors called in the alarm at 4:04 p.m. Friday as the Frush's telephone had already burned out. Damage was estimated by firemen at $10,000 to the house and $8,000 to the contents, including the 1969 Buick Riviera. It took two fire trucks and eight men from the San Rafael Fire Department 10 minutes to control the blaze, said Fire Chief Robert E. Marcucci.

San Quentin Inmate Just Walks Away

Leroy Reno, 25, was discovered missing at 11:45 a.m., according to Joseph R. O'Brien, the prison's information officer.

Reno was serving a six months to 10 years sentence for an assault with a deadly weapon conviction in Los Angeles County and another six months to five years sentence for an attempted escape from the state department of corrections medical facility at Vacaville. He had been at San Quentin since July 1967 and was to be paroled April 10, 1972, O'Brien said.

He was probably wearing prison denims when he escaped O'Brien said.

Convict's Attorney Plea Before Judge

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court today took under submission a request by San Quentin convict Louis N. Talamantez to swap attorneys.

Talamantez, one of six inmates accused of murder, conspiracy and assault in the bloody prison uprising of last Aug. 21, wants attorney G. Douglas Vaughn of San Rafael to defend him.

Attorney Louis F. Hawkins of San Rafael, who was appointed by the court to represent Talamantez, asked to be relieved from the case.

Judge McGuire said he had several other motions by attorney Steven Koolpe to consider this afternoon. Koolpe, court-appointed attorney for another San Quentin inmate, John Larry Spain, wants the court to keep sealed the transcript of grand jury proceedings which led to the indictment of six inmates and missing attorney Stephen M. Bingham.

Koolpe also wants permission to inspect inmate Spain's files including his prison records and disciplinary actions taken against him. The attorney maintains that prison officials refuse to show him those files.

Baboon Dies Of Old Age

Keepers said Waldo died Sunday and had been a resident of the zoo for nearly 25 years. They added they did not know when he was born but the average life span for a baboon was 10 to 15 years.

The keepers said Waldo was a misogynist and, in fact, had killed two of his prospective mates.

"Maybe that's why he lived so long," said one keeper at the monkey house where Waldo lived alone.

Flood Control Project Pact on County Agenda

The Marin County supervisors, meeting tomorrow at 1 p.m. at the Civic Center, will consider an agreement assuring the Army Corps of Engineers of the county's intention to continue with the Corte Madera Creek flood control project.

The agreement promises that the Marin County Flood Control District will fulfill the corps' requirements for acquision of rights of way, easements and utility relocations prior to construction of Phase Four of the project.

Phase Four, being protested by some Ross residents, calls for continuation of the concrete flood control channel upstream from the Lagunitas Bridge in Ross to a point near the Ross-San Anselmo boundary.

The board's agenda calls for a two-hour meeting tomorrow.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors is expected also:

LUCAS VALLEY — To consider annexing the 285-acre Thomas A. Nunes ranch in Upper Lucas Valley to the Lucas Valley County Service Area. Annexation of the property is the first step toward purchase of the land which the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association hopes to keep in open space.

PRISONERS — To consider a new contract with Sonoma County for the housing of Marin County prisoners. The contract calls for a 95-cent hike in the present $8.62 per day rate paid for each prisoner. The increase is estimated to cost an additional $13,800 over the next year.

MASTER PLAN — To consider a contract with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation for an architectural review of the Civic Center master plan. Included in the $18,000 review will be plans for the county's ballet building.

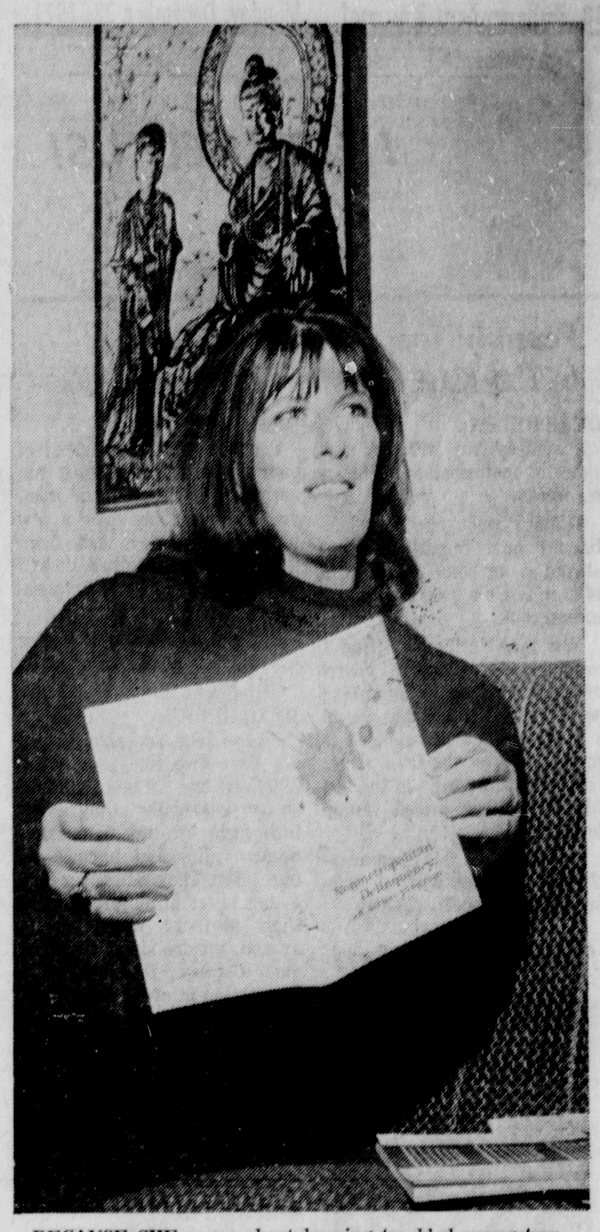
JUNE SCHWARCA displays one of her favorite pieces made from copper foil that was among 25 pieces of her sculpture exhibited in September in the Museum Bellerive in Zurich, Switzerland. Marin women artists and artisans create sculpture, paintings, tapestries, weaving and ceramics in their studios and homes.

CLUB AND organization women spent hundreds of volunteer hours on their projects. Here Mrs. William Fuss and Robert Steele try out the kitchen installed mostly by volunteers for the Pathfinders' new Tea Room at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. They serve meals throughout the week at the center.



BECAUSE SHE cares about keeping troubled youngsters out of deeper trouble, Novato resident Dyanne Bohner started an action program to nip delinquency among youths. She enlisted cooperation from the police and probation department to set up a volunteer program "KINSHIP," that uses a family-based approach.

Marin Women: A Variety Of Talents

By BARBARA HOSMER

Was there a typical Marin woman in 1971? If so, which one was she?

This past year Marin women wrote music, painted award-winning pictures, taught retarded children useful skills, did surgery on animals, sailed yachts, worked a sheep ranch, learned wilderness survival, marched for peace, collected for UNICEF, nursed the sick and wrote books.

They served as phone pals to lonely people, sang songs ranging from grand opera to rock, registered 18-year-old voters, raised champion bulls, worked to clean up the environment, lobbied for and against abortion laws, made tray favors for the convalescing, hiked and rode trails, and did cancer research.

Others lobbied for women's rights, flew airplanes, designed clothes, lectured at colleges, went back to college, served as docents at the De Young Museum, guided youngsters through the Audubon Canyon Ranch, taught each other skills, helped fix up the Senior Citizens Depot, counseled young people and studied law.

They also did the things "expected" of suburban women — played tennis, golf and bridge, held fashion shows, raised charity monies, sewed, gardened, reared children, and washed countless clothes and dishes.

Others were summertime fire watchers on lonely hilltops. Some rose to high offices in their organizations, and a few climbed Mount Whitney.

ALICE GATTERDAM took to raising black Angus as a profession and has won top prizes with her champion bulls for breeding and show. She taught herself the cattle business and runs her own 100-acre Gam Ranch.

VOLUNTEER THERAPIST Gert Foley of San Rafael encourages Jimmy Norton with his heavy locked roller skates. On crutches since she was a teen-ager, Mrs. Foley supervises early day classes for physically or mentally handicapped young children from eight Marin schools at Marin Skateland in San Rafael. Young Jimmy attends Forest Meadows Development Center.

SINGER LOU Rawls recorded a song, "How Thoughtless I've Become," written by Mrs. Charles Klieman in her home in Sausalito. The songwriter, who uses her maiden name, Thelma Gates, turned to composing when she was unable to find a teaching job. Singers Robert Goulet and Leslie Gore also have shown interest in recording her songs.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Possibly The Theft Of Jewelry Is The Key Question At Hand

DEAR HELEN:

I went to stay with my sick sister in another state for about six weeks.

While I was gone, my husband's best friend (female) stayed in our home to take care of him. She's a good housekeeper and cook.

Now that I'm home, I find a very expensive set of pearls and my mother's wedding ring set is missing. I also discovered a gold brooch that belonged to my mother on the floor under our bed. It had been in the box with the other prized family jewelry.

DEAR TOOK:

Perhaps this "best friend of your husband's" figures if you are willing to share your man, you won't quibble over a few pieces of jewelry. Let them know where your values lie and you may get your "irreplaceable" possessions back.

. . . But I still think you're worrying about the wrong theft. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I have four adorable nieces. We have two fine sons, aged eight and ten, but no daughters, so we especially enjoy these little girls. We buy them inexpensive gifts and have them over often. They return our love — but never in the presence of their mother! When she is around, they're standoffish and quiet because, though she's a fine person in every other way, she becomes angry and terribly possessive when others give attention to her children.

Here are examples:

1. She made her daughters refuse ice cream we bought them and our sons. Said she "could buy cones for them herself."

2. She tore out the ribbon I put in her two-year-old's hair when I baby-sat. Said she didn't like ribbons.

She ripped off a dress I bought for my godchild (her oldest daughter) and said the color was wrong for her. Most of our gifts she throws away.

4. She will not allow me or my husband to help dish out food to the children when we are together for family meals, though she helped our sons when they were younger.

Needless to say, these episodes upset the youngsters and cause tears. I "keep my distance," but sometimes it's hard, with kids you truly love.

Yet my sister-in-law is kind and loving in other ways, and so good to our sons. She only becomes hostile when I try discussing this with her.

Are these over-ossessive mothers afraid their children will stop loving them if they also love other people? — CONFUSED AUNT

DEAR AUNT:

Over-possessiveness stems from jealousy, which has its roots in insecurity. And insecure people are constantly fearful that others are better loved.

I hope your sister-in-law will somehow come to realize that love is like an outdoor climbing plant: Push it into a small dark, stifling place and, even though pampered, it soon dies. But if you let it grow naturally, with only a little "direction," it reaches out to become stronger and more beautiful each day. — H.

3-Pronged Attack On Mounting Trash

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — In this age of acrimony, it is rare to see industry, labor and private groups all on the same side of a major public issue.

But that is the case with solid waste, the polite words for ordinary trash and garbage. While controversy continues to plague efforts to control air and water pollution, there is growing accord on most elements of the trash problem.

There also is less urgency, according to one group of experts known as the National Center for Resource Recovery Inc. Officials of the Center set some sort of a record the other day by holding a press conference to acknowledge that there is "a problem but not a crisis." In Washington it is rare to have a press conference to herald anything but a crisis.

But the problem is mighty big — and could become a crisis if progress is not made faster in finding ways to solve it. Some four billion tons of solid waste are generated in this country each year, an average of about five pounds per person per day in homes and businesses.

THE COST of handling this mess is also high: about $5 billion a year, making it the third largest municipal expense after roads and schools. Although trash and garbage may not yet be a national crisis, the problem has reached that stage in many towns and cities.

The shortage of land for dumping trash and the pollution of air and water by trash are only two of the biggest problems.

The National Center for Resource Recovery Inc. is a joint effort of injustry and labor formed a year ago. It has a $2 million budget to help find ways to make trash removal profitable (through recoverable materials) and to speed the process through exchange of information.

Research studies have already led center officials to conclude that substantial recovery of valuable resources from refuse is attainable and that such efforts are preferred over disposal. Pilot projects, with government assistance, have proven the value of recovery processes.

Richard L. Lesher, president of the center, acknowledges that individuals contribute very little of the over-all problem. "Litter is a very, very tiny part of the problem," he says.

But that does not mean the individual cannot make a large contribution to solving the problem by reducing trash and garbage. Concern Inc., a well known citizens group, has just issued "Eco-Tips No. 3," with advice to people who want to take an active role.

The group suggests cutting down on disposable items by buying returnable products and reusable materials whenever possible. It also suggests buying in bulk, avoiding fancy packages and eliminating extra bags and boxes.

POLITICAL ACTION is also urged. The group suggests that consumers demand the use of recycled paper in government and business offices. And it advises people to find out what happens to their own trash and garbage to make certain that it does not add unduly tg existing pollution.

Natuarlly enough, single copies are available without charge from Concern Inc., 2233 Wisconsin Avenue, NW., Washington, D.C., 20007. Bulk copies cost $5 per hundred.

With groups like this and the National Center for Resource Recovery, the United States may yet keep the solid waste problem from becoming a full blown crisis.

State's Method Of Treating Youth Offenders Paying Off

By LIZ LAGUE

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — "In 1960 California's institutions (California Youth Authority) were full and wards had to sleep in the halls," says Dr. Marguerite Q. Warren, program director for the Center for Training in Differential Treatment, Human Learning Systems, a private, non-profit research organization that contracts with the CYA.

Dr. Warren said this was because the number of youngsters coming into the corrections system at that time was going up.

"If the rate hadn't changed," she added, "the state would have had to double its bed space."

Now, 10 years later, the CYA is able to close one of its institutions.

What Dr. Warren terms "one of the most impactful systems in the world" started in 1961 with the CYA decision to begin the Community Treatment Project (CTP), including in-depth research on treatment of offenders.

She joined the CYA in 1960, bringing with her experience in classification of youths, and also in treatment gained while working with the military.

THE BASIC question the CTP research is answering is "What kinds of kids benefit from what kinds of treatment?"

With funding from the National Institute of Mental Health, a federal agency, and the CYA, California began something no other government in the world had — compiling extensive research data on the treatment of juvenile offenders.

"California is a leading light in the world," said Dr. Warren, "because it was willing to try something innovative and back it with intensive research."

This research has provided comparison of treatment in institutions with treatment in home communities, plus data on which treatment is best suited for which type of youth.

After years of study, Dr. Warren can now state "the community program offers a preferable method of treatment for many youths."

IS IS THE SUCCESS of treatment of offenders in their community — while living at home or in foster homes — and the impact of this kinding on local probation programs that has greatly reduced the number referred to the state system. This, plus more effective treatment within the CYA, has reduced the number committed to state institutions, and made construction of new institutions unnecessary.

To determine the kind of treatment an individual juvenile needs, a nine-way classification system called Interpersonal Maturity Level (I-level) is used.

Once the I-level is determined, through testing and interviews, the youth is matched to a worker whose natural style he will be most likely to respond to, and an individual treatment program planned.

"Some case workers have an authoritarian approach, others have a low-threat, protective approach," explained Dr. Warren.

"This matching of child with adult workers could have great implications for public schools," she added.

Five "worker styles" have been classified for matching with the nine juvenile maturity levels.

NOW CALIFORNIA is sharing what has been learned over the past decade with the rest of the world.

"We're trying to develop a training model to teach people in other agencies how to run this kind of program," continued Dr. Warren.

The training includes a five-week concentrated session in Sacramento with four Human Learning Systems teachers. Trainees have come from several states and Canadian provinces. An upcoming session will include a trainee from Australia.

In addition, Dr. Warren is frequently invited to visit and talk with juvenile corrections staffs in other states and countries.

She attended the VI International Congress on Criminology in Madrid, Spain, in 1970, presenting a research paper on correctional treatment in community setting throughout theworld.

Dr. Warren recommends research as a good way for women to get in corrections and other fields traditionally male-dominated.

Whitten, a student at U.C. at Davis. He was graduated from Midland School in Los Olivos and U.C. at Davis. The future bridegroom is a second-year student at Hastings College of the Law.

No Morning Coaxing Needed

There'll be no coaxing in the morning to get the children, or any other member of the family, to eat breakfast if a little variety is injected into the way food is served.

Try serving cereal, whether hot or cold, topped with a scoop of a favorite-flavored ice cream and slices of fruit.

Brezhnev Wants '72 To Be His Year

MOSCOW (UPI)—If Leonid I. Brezhnev has his ways, 1972 will be a year of progress on all fronts for the Soviet Union.

It will also be the year of Brezhnev.

The Communist Party General Secretary and his policies dominated the Soviet Union during 1971, a year that saw Brezhnev rise to new heights of prestige and power. He emerged from beneath a veil of facelessness to reveal a bluff, bearish human side of him that the world never had seen.

His emergence was no accident. It was part and parcel of a carefully planned Soviet public relations campaign that targeted 1972 as a year of decision for the Soviet Union, for Europe, for the United States and for the world.

Brezhnev and his Soviet colleagues launched, in 1971, a "peace offensive" that has the goal of building a new world order. If he has his way, it will be a world order arranged to work to the advantage of the Soviet Union and its Communist allies.

—A dissolution of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and its East bloc equivalent, the Warsaw Pact.

—A complete U.S. withdrawal from Southeast Asia.

—The buildup of Soviet armed forces, both strategic and tactical, that will be as good as or better than those of the United States.

Western diplomats see the first and the last elements as the keys to all the others. A new Soviet world order must have its policemen to enforce it. It is exactly that basic military point that gives the Soviet bid credibility.

Soviet bloc armed forces have never been stronger. In many military areas the Soviet Union is quickly surpassing the United States, including some areas of traditional U.S. dominance, such as nuclear missile armed submarines.

The authoritative military publication, "Jane's Weapons Systems," reported in 1971 that the Soviet Union has taken the initiative in research and development of sophisticated weaponry, rather than following the American lead.

Most Western experts have predicted Soviet superiority in nearly every major category by 1975, from missiles and submarines to tanks and troops.

Working to Soviet advantage is growing sentiment in the United States for a cutback in military spending and a pullback of American troops from Indochina and elsewhere.

The Kremlin suffers no such pressures.

Should NATO be dissolved, the Warsaw pact probably would vanish—on paper—at the same time. But geographical and ideological solidity of the Soviet bloc would mean that a multinational Communist force will remain in fact, if not in form.

The other elements of the Soviet "big plan"—trade, Vietnam, the Middle East and China—also are developing in general conformance with Soviet desires.

On the trade level, more and more Western nations, the United States and its NATO partners included, are rushing to the Soviet marketplace with everything from orange juice to digital computers. Trade barriers fall daily, and the Soviet Union is the primary benefactors.

In Vietnam, the United States is on the verge of complete pullout. The Soviets privately consider the war all but over, with Communist victory a certainty.

In the Middle East the Soviet position with the Arab nations has weakened, but not collapsed, and the Kremlin still can hope for a peace favorable to Soviet interests.

China and the Soviet Union continue their angry ideological attacks on each other, but government-to-government relations have improved. There is no indication that gunfire will break out soon along their borders.

Soviet plans could reach a decisive stage in May, when President Nixon meets Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Two Die In Boat Crash: $190 Fine

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Donald J. Minton, 28, Sacramento, was fined $190 Thursday for reckless boating in connection with a May 31 accident which killed the son of State Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest and another man.

Minton pleaded no contest to the charge which was reduced from involuntary manslaughter. He also was placed on three years probation by Municipal Court Judge Sheldon Grossfeld.

Killed in the accident were Roy Baker Priest, 28, son of the Treasurer and assistant director of the State General Services Department, and Robert William Rose, 24. Both Sacramento men were passengers in a boat piloted by Minton which was involved in a collision in steamboat slough. Minton suffered a brain concussion.

Bodega Bay Marina Plea

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Bodega Bay property owner has asked the Army Corps of Engineers for more time to complete a large marina development on the bay off Bay Flat Road.

Work has been authorized under a corps permit to Dec. 31, but Erin Shaw says she needs until March 31, 1973, to complete the project. About 70 per cent of the work has been done.

Citizen objections may be submitted in triplicate to the corps office, 100 McAllister Street, by Jan. 22.

Boeing Diversifies, Makes Fresh Water

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Boeing, the company that makes the 747 jumbojet, also is in the business of making fresh water out of sea water.

When the Boeing Co. realized that its market for airplanes was rapidly diminishing, it decided to diversify. And construction and operation of desalination plants is just one of many new enterprises Boeing has gone into.

The desalination project is a joint venture with El Paso Natural Gas, and Reading and Bates Offshore Drilling Co. The patent, which is held by Reading-Bates, once was held on option by Boeing, but the aerospace firm turned it down when the aircraft business was booming.

Boeing utilized its Kent plant, 12 miles south of Seattle, as a site for a pilot plant, which is capable of producing more than 2,000 gallons of fresh water a day by the evaporative desalination process.

After the pilot plant proved successful, Boeing put the process on the market.

The first customer is the Caneel Bay Plantation, a luxurious resort on St. John Island in the Caribbean, St. John is one of the Virgin Islands that does not have ample fresh water and must rely on imported water from St. Thomas Island.

The Boeing plant on St. John will be capable of producing 100,000 gallons of fresh water a day. The contract with the St. John developers is for eight years, starting in 1972. Boeing will install and operate the plant during that time. The original requirement, calls for furnishing only 60,000 gallons a day, with an option to increase that by 40,000 additional gallons.

Throughout the world there are about 700 plants which daily turn brackish inland water or sea water into drinkable liquid.

All kinds of methods are used — freezing, boiling, forcing water through a membrane and shooting electric currents through it, and various techniques of evaporation.

The federal government is greatly involved in research involving desalination processes through Interior's Office of Saline Water.

Congress has authorized $27 million for this office for fiscal 1972. Twenty years ago the appropriation was $2 million.

Peru Road Funds Buy A Wedding

WASHINGTON (UPI) —When American contractors built a highway in Peru with U.S. government funds, part of the money went to finance a wedding, buy a stereo set, and build a house for the manager of the project.

The General Accounting Office (GAO), a government watchdog agency, made the charges in a weekend report. It said it probed the building of the $47 million Tarapoto-Rio Nieva highway project in Peru, acting on the tip of a disgruntled project engineer.

The project engineer was identified by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., as Charles Pettis, who worked for Brown & Root Overseas, Inc. Proxmire said Brown & Root was the engineering consultant and Morrison-Knudsen Inc. the contractor for the project, which was financed by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) and the Export-Import Bank.

GAO investigators charged another Brown & Root employe, who was not identified, used funds provided to buy meals for highway workers to pay for an orchestra, furniture rental, liquor, bartenders, waiters, flowers and hotel rooms for guests at his wedding and to buy stereo equipment, office furniture, silver and tools for construction of his house.

The GAO said the employe felt the use of government-paid labor to build his home was justified because there was a housing shortage in the area.

Pettis contended Brown & Root fired him and blackballed him in the U.S. engineering construction industry. He said he had been unable to find work since December, 1968.

Big, Small Planes Collide

VIENNA (UPI) —A swissair jetliner carrying 81 persons smashed into a private plane on a misty runway Sunday, killing the pilot of the smaller craft. No one aboard the jetliner was injured.

Officials said the cause of the crash was not immediately determined but an investigation is underway.

The DC9 twin-engine jetliner was traveling at 130 mph and was about to takeoff when it struck the Beechcraft 55, also a twin-engine craft, flown by Konrad Glatz, 65.

The DC9 pilot, Capt. Paul Frei, said he had been given permission to take off and was speeding down the runway when the light plane suddenly appeared.

Frei said he tried to swerve but it was too late to avoid hitting the smaller plane.

Many Wanted To See Snow

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—The urge to see snow the day after Christmas in California resulted in dozens of stranded motorists on the winding Mt. Hamilton road east of San Jose.

Hundreds of persons turned out to take a look at the white stuff, the California Highway Patrol said, and were stranded when a new freak snow fall hit.

All were cleared out by nightfall, although many stranded drivers kept their motors running until they ran out of gasoline.

Minor injuries In Rear-End Collision

A 53-year-old Novato woman suffered minor injuries Thursday when her auto struck the rear of a trailer on Bel Marin Keys Boulevard, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Dorothy R. Webeck, of 912 Bel Marin Keys, was treated at Novato General Hospital for cuts and bruises following the 5 p.m. accident.

GOOD MORNING

San Rafael Police Sgt. Charles Brobeck checks out an automobile which crashed into the residence of Lillian Freeman of 89 Brentwood Drive early today. Mrs. Freeman told police she heard a noise and saw lights at about 3 a.m., but did not investigate. She found the car in the lower bedroom at 6:45 a.m. The car, which had its lights, radio and ignition on, belongs to Richard Mackintosh of 27 Alderwood Court, which is across a courtyard from Mrs. Freeman. Mackintosh, according to police, said he and his wife went home from a party between 11 p.m. and midnight yesterday and that his wife returned to the party about 12:15 a.m. today, police said. Mackintosh said he did not know what time his wife returned home the second time from the party, and she was not talking, police said.

Immediate Remap Sought In Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Secretary of State Edmund Brown Jr., naming Gov. Ronald Reagan as defendant, today asked the state Supreme Court to reapportion the legislature immediately.

He said if a redistricting plan for the Assembly and Senate is not adopted by Jan. 15, it will be "impossible" for local officials in some counties to meet legal deadlines in preparing for the June 6 primary.

Brown, a Democrat, asked the court in a suit to adopt the reapportionment plans approved by the Democratic-controlled legislature Dec. 20 over Republican opposition.

The Assembly plan is designed to boost the current Democratic margin of 42-37 (one vacancy) to at least 44-36, while the Senate plan is aimed at protecting all 21 Democratic incumbents in the 40-member house.

Reagan has said he will veto the Senate and Assembly reapportionment bills. Republicans want him to veto the congressional plan as well.

Along with the reapportionment bills, the legislature also approved identical redistricting resolutions which are not subject to the governor's veto or signature. Brown accepted and filed the resolutions last week and said as far as he was concerned they had the full effect of law.

Brown, who said he filed the suit to prevent "massive chaos and confusion," insisted that if the primary election deadlines are not met, "the legal standing of the election itself will be in doubt."

"We could see the most chaotic election in California's history," the 33-year-old son of the former governor said.

He said Los Angeles County, the state's most populous, must have a final reapportionment plan by Jan. 15 and that other counties had expressed "grave doubts" that the primary could be conducted properly if redistricting was not accomplished by early January or at least by mid-month.

They included Alameda, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego and Fresno counties.

Instruments Stolen

Seamstress' Dope Case Hearing Set

A San Francisco seamstress faces a preliminary hearing in Marin Municipal Court on Jan. 11 on charges of having narcotics and dangerous drugs at the Marin Hall of Justice.

Laura Rennick, 23, of 923 Sanchez Street was arrested on Dec. 21 at the north entrance to the Hall of Justice after failing to pass the metal detector test.

Deputies said they found a cigarette box under her waistband, and the box contained a half dozen bullets of various caliber and pills and white substance which appeared to be codeine and methamphetamines.

According to investigators, Miss Rennick, a self-employed seamstress, said the cigarette box was given to her by a casual acquaintance and she was not aware of its contents.

Mars 'Oases' May Have Life

MOSCOW (UPI) —The Soviet Union's Mars 2 and Mars 3 probes are looking for "oases" on the red planet that might contain life.

Two scientists said Sunday the mission of the two unmanned craft orbiting Mars is "to study Mars thoroughly and see whether there are what might be called "oaseu on the surface —sections more suitable for life than others."

Writing in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, Prof. Georgi Petrov and Dr. V. Moroz said:

"The biosphere, if there is such, must be concentrated in such oases. They must be warmer and situated in low places where there is more moisture."

'Round 'N 'Round Driver Winds Up In Jail

A Fairfax man led California Highway Patrol officers around and around on Highway 101 and nearby roads in Corte Madera and Larkspur today in a chase that finally ended on the muddy banks of Corte Madera Creek.

Douglas Kersey Hoff, 19, of 23 Glen Drive, was covered with mud from head to toe when he was booked into Marin County Jail at 4:30 a.m. on suspicion of auto theft, driving without a license, drunken driving and resisting arrest.

He was held in lieu of $1,250 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

The Highway Patrol said officers Homen L. Fosdick and Roger R. Nagel spotted an auto weaving as it drove south on Highway 101 near Lucky Drive at 2:50 a.m.

They turned on their red light and siren and pursued the car, but it tookthe westbound Madera Boulevard exit, drove north on Tamal Vista Avenue and returned to the southbound freeway at Fifer Avenue.

With the officers still in pursuit, the car again took the Madera Boulevard exit and went north on Tamal Vista Avenue, north on Council Crest Drive, back onto Tamal Vista, then under the freeway to the east side and north on Lucky Drive, officers said.

The car finally came to a halt in a muddy field near Corte Madera Creek where Lucky Drive dead-ends, and Hoff ran from the vehicle and climbed onto a dock by the creek, officers said.

After a struggle with Fosdick and Nagel, Hoff was handcuffed but went limp and had to be dragged through the mud to the patrol car, officers said.

The car he was driving reportedly had been stolen 30 minutes before from Jack Ross, of 960 Bel Marin Keys, officers said. They reported Hoff told them he never had had a driver's license.

Meet Barbara. She's this year's airplane.

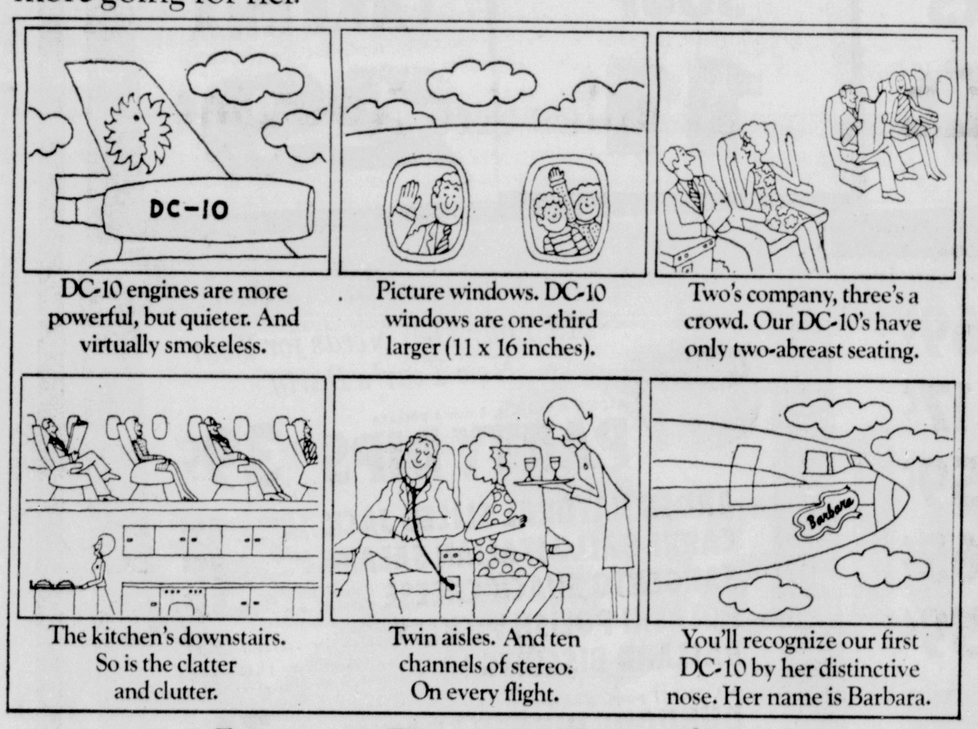
Fly Barbara. She's the first of our new fleet of DC-10's between San Francisco and Florida. She's big and beautiful. And luxuriously comfortable. And she's got a lot more going for her.



DC-10 engines are more powerful, but quieter. And virtually smokeless.

Two's company, three's a crowd. Our DC-10's have only two-abreast seating.

The kitchen's downstairs. So is the clatter and clutter.

Living Room Comfort

You get the kind of living room comfort you've always looked for on an airplane. You get armchair space. And you're never more than one seat from the aisle. In coach. You also get ten channels of stereo. On every flight.

Only National.

Only National has DC-10* service from San Francisco to Florida. Barbara flies daily nonstop to Tampa/St. Pete and direct to Miami and Fort Lauderdale. Every evening at 10:45. And it's a Night Coach, too. You'll save 20% over day coach fare. Our new DC-10 service is in addition to our five other daily flights from San Francisco to Miami.

What Are You Waiting For?

What are you waiting for? This winter, fly this year's airplane. Fly Barbara and her friends. For reservations, call your travel agent now. Or National Airlines. Ask operator for Enterprise 1-3070.

Fly Barbara. Fly National.

All flights depart San Francisco International Airport. National honors American Express, BankAmericard, Carte Blanche, Diners Club, Master Charge/Interbank, UATP, our own card and cash. *Effective January 6, 1972.

FIRST COMMUTE BUS — "Number 190" was Marin County's first scheduled commute bus, carrying Tiburon and Belvedere residents to the Sausalito ferry beginning in 1934. It ran hourly from 6:39 a.m. to nearly midnight. The Fageol Coach bus had two engines, one driving each rear wheel, according to Joseph Horvath of San Rafael — the first driver on the run. The engines were just foreward of the Greyhound insignia. Note the striped awnings fore and aft.

A Stormy History Nearing An End

the old ferryboat Marin, which ran from Tiburon to connect with larger boats at Sausalito for the trip across the bay.

Joseph Horvath of San Rafael, Greyhound maintenance foreman who retired in 1969, recalled his days as a driver on the 1934 bus trips.

"The state ordered Northwestern Pacific to continue providing service to the Tiburon commuters, so the company hired Greyhound," Horvath said. "I'll have to plead guilty to being one of the first commute bus drivers.

"The Tiburon operation was very instrumental in Greyhound going into the commute business. It worked so smoothly," Horvath said.

Southern Pacific Railroad Co., which eventually became the parent firm for Northwestern Pacific Railroad, had a financial interest in Greyhound in the late 1930s and early 1940s.

The rail line, McVerry said, had helped arrange merger of several North Bay stage lines and bus companies that had struggled through Depression years. "Pickwick, the old Monticello Lines in Napa" and others became Pacific Greyhound, McVerry recalled.

"Greyhound's assumption of commute service in the early 1940s was a booming romance," said Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney in 1967 at a heated hearing over Greyhound application to the state Public Utilities Commission to raise commuter fares. Greyhound, Maloney said, "came courting but over the years it has become sadly disillusioned with Marin and its commuters — and now wants a divorce." His rhetoric flowered against Greyhound's request for a 7 per cent fare increase intended to raise $1.8 million more revenue.

But the romance between the commuters and the bus firm was cold ashes long before that. In 1952, Greyhound tried to divest itself of its commute runs in Marin and Sonoma County, for only $200,000. The state said no.

Then, in 1955, Greyhound won permission from the federal Interstate Commerce Commission to separate its commuter and its long-haul services into different divisions.

A coalition of commuters' clubs, spearheaded by Thomas D. Hardcastle of Novato, took the issue to court. In 1957, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the ICC had exceeded its powers in approving Greyhound's plan to create "Golden Gate Transit Lines" to take over the commute runs. The justices said they found "94.3 per cent of Greyhound's revenue was intrastate, largely commuter" derived.

THOMAS D. HARDCASTLE
Veteran of commuter wars

Greyhound officials began stressing the red ink involved in commute services by 1963. That April, they told the Golden Gate Bridge District that the firm had lost $468,000 on commute runs the previous year, and that the long-haul runs were financing the operation.

Hardcastle by then was a director of the Golden Gate Bridge District. He already was calling for the action eventually taken by the district — a publicly subsidized fleet of commuter buses. He said in a talk Jan. 29, 1963 that such a fleet would entice more commuters out of private autos and "ease traffic congestion until a second bridge (or bridge deck) can be built to carry rapid rail transit."

In 1964, Greyhound applied for a 20 per cent overall fare increase to offset claimed annual losses of $704,500 in Bay Area commute runs.

Hardcastle won a break for the bus riders. He persuaded his fellow bridge board members to lower the toll per commute bus from one dollar to 13 cents. This pulled the teeth of the Greyhound rate hike request so far as commuters were concerned. They had ridden for seven years without a fare hike.

In 1967, however, Greyhound won a 7 per cent hike in commute fares.

The firm came back a year later with a request for 40 to 70 per cent hikes in commute fares — and got 6 to 18 per cent in 1969.

By then the drive to replace the private bus line with a publicly owned transit system had gotten up a full head of steam.

Commuters through the years had complained about other things besides the high cost of riding.

During the 1950s, Mill Valley carried on a running feud with the firm over where it parked its buses overnight. Residents in the Manor area of Fairfax voiced the same battle cry in the middle 1960s. Closure of the Marin City ticket office was hotly protested.

There was a constant tug-of-war between Greyhound and riders who complained that they had to hang from straps during rush hours, rather than sit. Greyhound countered that it could not put on more buses, or it would lose even more money.

McVerry said Greyhound commuter patrongage peaked "about 1965, with about 6,500 daily riders."

Strikes either threatened to or actually hampered bus riding in 1958, '59 and 1966, clogging the Golden Gate Bridge with even more private autos. Other disenchanted riders, citing the age and lack of air conditioning and other amenities on Greyhound's commute vehicles, switched to private commute clubs that held happy little parties aboard chartered buses as they returned from their daily toil in San Francisco.

Typical of many Marinites' feelings was the complaint voiced by Mary H. Price of Tiburon in 1966. She charged that commuters on the Tiburon Peninsula were getting "old, bad buses" that passengers on other runs wouldn't ride.

Greyhound made no bones of the fact it wanted out of the commute business. In June 1965, Greyhound's president, Ralph E. Thomas, declared his firm was "not interested in promoting commute services" due to increasing losses on the operation. He admitted to state utility commissioners that the firm spent only $165 in fiscal 1962-63 to advertise and promote commuter patronage.

The company's attitude toward the commuter service perhaps is reflected in the complete lack of company records about the history of Greyhound operations in Marin County. Only the dry, emotionless fiscal records are available; there are no photos nor other mementos than those of numerous safety awards to drivers who took the passengers where they were going unscathed if not always happy.

Independent-Journal files recall a few incidents, such as Jan. 5, 1959 when winds and high waves across Shoreline Highway marooned the 6:30 a.m. coastal commute run for hours near Bolinas.

Most of the color in the history comes from the scrapbooks and the memories of oldtime Greyhound drivers such as Horvath and McVerry — and of such veteran passengers as Hardcastle.

Hardcastle, who was "Mister Commuter" for years and spoke for a Bay Area coalition of thousands of bus and passenger auto riders, probably won't be on hand for the New Year's Day switchover to Golden Gate buses. He's on vacation in Hawaii, and isn't expected to return to his office until Monday.

PIONEER RIDE — Old Pacific Greyhound tour buses were pressed into service in 1933, to carry Northwestern Pacific Railroad commuters around a freight train wreck south of Corte Madera, to the waiting Sausalito ferryboats. Joseph Horvath of San Rafael, retired Greyhound maintenance foreman, said the buses also were used whenever high water shorted out the electric trains' third rail in the Richardson Bay-Alto area.

Publicly Owned Transit Almost Reality In 1939

Few Marin County residents remember it, but the idea of publicly owned transit almost became a reality in 1939.

A committee of Marinites became alarmed because Northwestern Pacific Railroad wanted to abandon its commuter trains, and the group persuaded the board of supervisors to put a proposition on the Nov. 7, 1939, ballot. Chairman of the group was San Rafael attorney Wallace S. Myers.

The measure called for creation of a "county utility district" — embracing only the area served by Marin Municipal Water District — to set up a mass transit system.

The principal proposal was to create a fleet of buses to carry commuters across the two-year-old Golden Gate Bridge.

The ballot measure was hotly opposed — both by taxpayers who feared the system would prove an intolerable burden, and by Pacific Greyhound Co. the firm promised to spend 1.3 million and create a fleet of 83 buses if the measure lost.

The Mill Valley City Council, spurred by a voluminous report from its own transportation commission, also opposed the district. The city declared it would operate its own fleet of 16 commuter buses, and even bought rolling stock.

Greyhound bought full-page ads in the Marin Journal and other newspapers, promising that private enterprise could provide better service than a public system.

The district was defeated by a vote of 6,213 yes to 9,783 no.

According to Joseph Horvath of San Rafael, retired Greyhound maintenance foreman for Marin County, Mill Valley's equipment eventually was purchased by Greyhound.

It was not until 1964 that the Marin County Transit District became a reality, and together with the Golden Gate Bridge District launched programs that will result in the first publicly owned commute bus service in Marin's history, beginning New Year's Day.

Doctor Finds Vitamin C Helps Health Of Arteries

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON(UPI)--A doctor who found she could raise or lower the cholesterol content of blood with different doses of vitamin C believes regular use of the vitamin contributes to the health of arteries.

In an article in the medical weekly, The Lancet, supplemented by a telephone interview, Dr. Constance R. Spittle of Pinderfields Hospital in Yorkshire said her research indicated 1,000 milligrams of vitamin C a day could be an important therapeutic measure.

"The chance discovery that I could vary my own serumcholesterol simply by varying my vitamin C intake, and regardless of cholesterol consumption, led me to investigate this in other people," she wrote in the Lancet.

Dr. Spittle described how she took 58 healthy volunteers and divided them into three age groups — young, middle-aged and elderly—and did the same with 25 patients suffering from atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries. This condition is attribued to the deposit of fatty substances, in which cholesterol is implicated, on the walls of the arteries.

Her main findings were that, in healthy people under 25 the cholesterol level tended to fall on the vitamin C supplement. In the atherosclerotic group the cholesterol level tended to rise. These results may seem contradictory but Dr. Spittle said they were both consistent and beneficial.

In the atherosclerotic group the rise was probably due to "mobilization" of cholesterol in the pressence of vitamin C from arteries clogged with an excess of it. Hence there was more of it in the blood but it, too, was being transported away.

Dr. Spittle said Russian research on animals tended to support these suggestions. The Russians gave two groups of animals a cholesterol-rich diet —but one group also received vitamin C. The animals solely on the diet had cholesterol in the aorta, the major heart artery. Those that had the vitamin C supplement had cholesterol only in the liver and adrenals, not in the aorta.

"Smokers have lower vitamin C levels than non-smokers," she said. "Men have lower levels than women on the same diet and older people have lower levels than young people. In other words coronarythrombosis (heart attack) prone individuals have lower vitamin C levels than those not so at risk.

"I suggest that atherosclerosis is a long-term deficiency of vitamin C which permits cholesterol levels to build up in the arterial system, and results in changes in other fractions of the fats."

England's Thames Cleaned Up

By KENNETH JOACHIM
Toronto Telegram News Service

LONDON — Ten years ago, the 92 industrial miles of the river Thames was the most polluted stretch of water in Britain.

All fish and other marine life had ceased to live in it. The water stank. It was poison to drink.

Today, the Thames — all 210 miles of it, including the former "horror-stretch" — is acknowledged as the cleanest industrial river in Europe and is claimed to be the purest in the world.

The transformation has been so spectacular that investigators from Japan and the United States are here to find out how the miracle was wrought. Simularly, admiring teams from Europe and the continent have already come and gone.

Nobody waved a magic wand to clean up the Thames. Riding a big river of pollution takes time, money and determination. The Port of London Authority used a lot of all three.

The authority is the pollution-control body for what is known as the "Tidal Thames" — the 92 industrial miles of the river from Teddington in Surrey to the seaward limits.

The authority's powers were granted under acts of Parliament by which it licenses all discharges of industrial wastes into the Thames and enforces a rigid standard of purity.

An authority official told me recently: "Our basic concern is to ensure that the river is never devoid of oxygen, which is the first cleansing agent in the world because it encourages the natural biological processes by which the river cleans itself.

"Even power stations abstracting water for cooling purposes are required to re-oxygenate before returning water to the river — by passing it over cascades."

At the same time, the authority consulted all local councils operating sewage treatment works and hammered out a higher standard of treated effluent.

The extent of pollution had reached alarming proportions. The Thames, in the years of lax control since the war, had become the receptacle of all forms of industrial, domestic and agricultural sewage which killed off all fish and other marine life.

"It was so bad," the official said, "That all the polished glasswork on river craft discolored rapidly.

The pollution even affected houses in its vicinity: Bathtubs turned brown, paintwork got discolored and even peeled.

"All this because factories, chemical works, sewage treatment plants and others were draining their waste indiscriminately into the river."

So, armed with tougher laws for those who did not respond to persuasion, the authority got busy. They spent about $45 million on the clean-up project.

Water is constantly being sampled. Teams of pollution-control inspectors keep close vigil at all discharge points. And the authority doesn't hesitate to take legal action if the wastes fall below standard.

The result is that there now are fish along the entire length of the river.

Another recent major action by the authority was to stop the dumping of dredged material at sea, and instead pump it ashore to reclaim low-lying areas.

It was found that silt dumped into the sea was carried back to the Thames with each tide. That doesn't happen anymore.

Pot Case Christmas Eve Arrest

Eugene L. Syrup, 20, of 1000 Eighth Street, Novato, was jailed on Christmas Eve on charges of selling narcotics and dangerous drugs to an undercover Novato police officer during August and September.

Released on $10,000 bail, Syrup was scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court tomorrow for arraignment.

He was picked up Friday on a warrant of arrest charging him with selling amphetamine and hashish on Aug. 23, methamphetamine on Sept. 3, and marijuana on Sept. 28.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas said the items, purchased by an undercover man in various locations in Novato, have been analyzed and found to be dangerous drugs and narcotics.

Novato police said a couple of other men may have been involved with Syrup in the sale of drugs.

Mrs. Parsigian, Knifing Suspect, Ruled Insane

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Carolyne Parsigian of Santa Rosa, accused of stabbing Msgr. Clyde Tillman of Petaluma, has been committed to Napa State Hospital for psychiatric treatment.

Judge Joseph P. Murphy Jr. ruled Mrs. Parsigian, 56, insane and unfit to stand trial Friday after receiving reports from two psychiatrists who examined her.

She was arrested Dec. 16 a short time after allegedly stabbing the priest in front of St. Rose's Church, Santa Rosa. Police said Mrs. Parsigian had written letters complaining of harassment by the Catholic church.

No Trace Of Missing Jetliner

LIMA (UPI)—Officials said Sunday they have found no trace of a jetliner with 92 persons aboard missing since Friday on a flight over the rugged Andes Mountains.

Military and civilian planes searched the jagged peaks and nearby jungles for two days without locating the missing four engine Lockheed Electra turbo-prop owned by Lansa, the Peruvian airline.

The plane was on a flight from Lima to Iquitos, 650 miles away in the heart of the dense Amazon jungle, when it disappeared.

A 27-Year Try To Gain Soviet Freedom

By PETER WORTHINGTON
Toronto Telegram Syndicate

TORONTO — This is the story of a man named Smith. Jesus Smith, age 63, a Canadian citizen who has been actively trying for 27 years to return to Canada, and who is being kept against his wishes in the Soviet Union.

His is a story that burns into the consciousness of External Affairs, which wants to help him but is afraid that publicity will destroy what small chance he may have.

Possibly. On the other hand he can't be denied much more than he has been already, and at age 63 his best, productive years are behind him. In this age of Trudeau-Kosygin cordiality, and Soviet-Canada "friendship" protocols, perhaps for once the Soviets might be susceptible to freeing a citizen.

I first ran into the story when I was in Moscow six years ago for the Toronto Telegram. I watched, kept silent, and wondered about Jesus Smith ever since. Every time I launched a feeler toward our diplomats I got a strike-out, plus the admonition that I write nothing, else the poor chap's chances might further be jeopardized.

Jesus was born of Doukhobor parents at Borden, Sask., in 1908. His parents broke up and the father took his five-year-old son away. At age eight Jesus wound up in a Vancouver orphanage. His father had a longing to go back to "socialist paradise," which was the prevailing myth about the USSR in those days.

In 1921 father and son entered the Soviet Union through Manchuria at Harbin in 1921. The boy was 13.

They ended up along the Black Sea, working in shipyards and Jesus eventually became an electrical engineer. In 1929, at age 21, he had a longing for Canada apparently as a gesture to assert his non-Soviet origin he changed his name to "Smith."

He was married and living in Odessa when the war came to the USSR. He survived, somehow, the Nazi occupation and in the process lost all his personal documents.

When the Allied Repatriation Commission came to Odessa to help ship home Western prisoners of war, Jesus was hired as a messenger.

From there he contacted the Canadian embassy — which checked his story and issued him a Canadian passport. He was promptly arrested for espionage and sent to a camp on the Pechora river in the Arctic until 1951. On his release he tried to contact the Canadian embassy again — and was promptly re-arrested and sent to another camp in Siberia.

On release in 1955 he was condemned to live in exile in Siberia, where he remains today, despite being rehabilitated by a military tribunal when Khrushchev came to power in 1957.

External Affairs located his mother, who has since died, and his two half-sisters who have shown no interest in helping him.

Throughout the years Jesus Smith has remained staunchily loyal to Canada.

He is regarded as a walking wonder by Canadians — a miracle of loyalty, courage and persistence. Even during imprisonment he managed to smuggle a message out to the Canadian Embassy wishing Canada well on our national day, July 1.

There are those in Ottawa who have grave doubts whether Jesus Smith would be happy, at this age, living in a Canada he can hardly remember.

But that's not the point. In 1965, he was sent a certificate of Canadian identity, and acknowledged as "belonging" to us.

And yet nothing has been done, or is being done.

Surely, with Canada and the USSR so chummy these days we can exert some pressure to give Jesus Smith, Canadian, the opportunity to return "home." Fifty years is a long time.

Window Forced, Car In Larkspur Rifled

A thief forced a car window open on Christmas Day and stole $155 in tape equipment, cameras, ski gear and clothing from a car belonging to James A. Costa, Larkspur police said today.

The theft took place between 1 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. while the vehicle was parked at Costa's home, 140 Lower Via Casitas, police said.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The Simple Principles Do Not Always Apply To Issue

In some bridge hands your only hope is to cash several tricks in a side suit before an opponent can ruff. The more cards you have in such a side suit, the fewer cards the opponents can hold — and therefore the greater the danger that one of them will ruff. It's simple and obvious, but simple principles don't always apply in complicated situations.

HEART PLAY

South wins the first trick with the ace of clubs and leads out the ace and king of hearts. East discards, and South sees that he will have to lose a trump trick. South's only chance is to get rid of the two low clubs by the time that West gains the lead with his trump trick.

In order to get his discards South must run three rounds of spades and four rounds of diamonds. Which side suit should he tackle first? (Assume, as always, that South cannot see the East-West cards.)

It's "obviously" safer to try for three rounds of spades first. But West ruffs the third spade and cashes a club trick to defeat the slam.

What happened? Did South run into bad luck, or did he choose the wrong line of play?

NEEDS DIAMONDS

South made the wrong choice, as H.W. Kelsey points out in his excellent new book "Improve Your Bridge." Even if the three spades got by safely, South would still have to find at least three diamonds in the West hand. Therefore South can lose nothing by trying three rounds of diamonds before touching the spades.

When East shows out on the third round of diamonds, South sees that West started with four diamonds. Hence South can safely cash the fourth diamond, getting rid of one club. Then he runs the three spades, discarding his last club. West ruffs the third spade, but it is too late for him to defeat the slam.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A Q 5
♥ - 10 7 5 2
♦ - K Q 8 4
♣ - 10 5.
What do you say?

ANSWER:

Pass. You have 11 points in high cards and one point for the doubleton, enough for an optional opening bid. You make an optional bid if you have unusual length in the major suits or a very powerful suit, but you should pass when you have neither.

Corte Madera Creek Construction Sought

The Army Corps of Engineers has received an application for construction of a floating dock in Corte Madera Creek off Larkspur Plaza Road.

Interested persons must submit objections to the proposal of Shareholders Capital Programs of Emeryville in triplicate to the corps, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco, prior to Jan. 22, according to Col. Charles R. Roberts, district engineer.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Can 'Predeath' Disturbances Be Prevented? Or Treated?

A group of physicians from Scotland define "predeath as that phase at the end of life when the aged outlive the vigor of their bodies and the wisdom of their brains." According to the report in Internal Medicine News, they are referring to such diseases of the aged that lead to incontinence of the bladder, dementia, and arteriosclerotic brain disease. Can these disturbances be prevented? If not, what is the best treatment?

In many parts of the world there are not enough hospitals or nursing homes to care for the elderly when they reach this stage. The burden of care rests with the spouse, middle-aged daughters, neighbors, and friends. Times have changed.

TODAY, CARING for an elderly spouse, or parent is considered a burden instead of a duty or privilege. Tremendous expense is involved when the aged person is entrusted to a hospital, or nursing home.

It is doubtful whether the outcome of predeath differs when the person remains at home, or is institutionalized. Many survive beyond the age of 75 and often live for months or years in complete dependency. These people are indeed our forgotten citizens who were unfortunate enough to "outlive the vigors of their bodies . . ." Some people face these problems in their early sixties; others after they attain the age of 90.

WE LIKE to chart the course of life as a rapid rise during youth followed by a plateau that gradually declines during middle age and late life. The final trip (predeath) is usually short for those who have a heart attack, stroke, accident, or cancer. Others go on, but it is surprising how many suddenly take a turn foor the worse and switch from middle life to feebleness. A predeath disease is responsible, and if it could be prevented, or dayled, the person could have many more happy and productive years.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

PRELUDE TO HEART FAILURE

R. L. writes: What kind of heart disease is decompensation?

REPLY

This is not a disease but a prelude to heart failure, often with dropsy. Decompensation occurs when the heart no longer can deliver its quota of blood, especially after it has worked harder than usual to overcome a defect or other handicap. The return flow of blood to the heart becomes so sluggish that digitalis and oxygen may be needed to bring relief. The structure enlarges, beats rapidly or irregularly, and shortness of breath and dropsy develop.

CONSOLATION EATER

Mrs. E. N. writes: I'm 30 pounds overweight and cannot lose an ounce. Weeks will pass without sweets but then I go on a candy binge. Please advise.

REPLY

You sound like a neurotic eater who relieves inner tensions and anxieties by eating. The next time this urge comes on, take a long walk and try to determine what is "eating" you.

SEDATIVES AND COFFEE

R. R. writes: My son takes a sedative at night and then a cup of coffee. Doesn't the coffee nullify the effect on the pill?

REPLY

HE'LL BE CLEAN

F. G. writes: If a person bathes once or twice a day, what effect will this have on his skin?

REPLY

His skin will be clean. However, it may become dry, depending upon its natural oil content and the type of soap used.

TIRED LEGS

Mr. B. L. writes: I'm 51 and always enjoyed walking, but lately my feet get so tired I feel as if I'm toting 1,000 pound weights on each foot. I used to weigh 230, but am down to 195. Do you think my excess flesh is responsible for the leg problem?

REPLY

Yes, if fatigue developed before you began to reduce. If not, there is a better chance that the 35-pound weight loss plays a role in your fatugue. If this is the case, the weariness may continue until you adjust to your new poundage.

HUMAN BITES

S. M. writes: What kinds of tests are made on a man who bites another man?

REPLY

Mental tests. Human bites are serious because the mouth is teeming with lethal microorganisms. To my knowledge, only one person survived an attack of rabies. While he was sick in the hospital, there was a sign on the bed warning against human bites.

BORDERING ON NORMAL

C. D. writes: If a child is below average in intelligence, is he considered mentally deficient?

REPLY

Not necessarily, as there are many degrees of subnormality. Children who border on the normal are much brighter than youngsters who are definitely retarded, and mentally dificient.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Double Indeminity

John Walker had a few too many drinks and started to walk home. His tract house was a lot like all the others on the block. Sure enough, he wandered up to a neighbor's house. He pounded on the door and then broke the side window. The frightened neighbor got out his shotgun and aimed it at John.

The shotgun went off when John grabbed at it. Some hours later he died from the wounds. John's widow claimed that she was entitled to "double indemnity" under his insurance policy. She claimed he died accidentally. The insurance company refused the double pay.

In court John's widow won. True, John was not "accidentally drunk." But his going to another house and the scuffle over the gun resulted in the accidental death.

In a second case, the decedent felt he had been cheated in a poker game. He left, went home for his pistol and returned to get his money back. The operator of the game also had a gun and returned the fire. The gambler's widow claimed double indemnity, but lost. The use of the gun under those circumstances led to the natural and expected result of this violent conduct. Death could not be said to be "accidental."

In another case, Frank was trying to escape from police custody on a hit and run driving charge. He jumped out of the patrol wagon and hit the pavement hard. He was run over by a truck before he could get up and run away. His widow claimed double indemnity and won. The jury said that the death was by violent but accidental means.

Even though Frank's fall and possible injury from jumping out of the car wasn't an accident. Getting run over by a truck was an accident.

Generally any ambiguities or uncertainties in an insurance policy are read in favor of the insured. The insurance company writes the policy. If its language creates the doubts, those doubts are interpreted against the company.

Many policies specifically exclude injuries that result from voluntary intoxication. Some policies exclude coverage when the injury results from the commission of a felony — say by the use of banned drugs or from illegal violent acts.

'Pauper' Dies A Rich Man

GRANTHAM, Pa. (UPI)-Sam Hamilton swept floors in the stock exchange in San Francisco before he switched to washing dishes in a skid row mission.

"No one at the mission knew he had any money," according to the president of Messiah College here, who received a check from Hamilton's estate for $128,000 on Christmas Eve.

Dr. D. Ray Hostetter said Hamilton wished to remain anonymous, but his name slipped out when word of another grant, this one for $150,000, was received at life line mission in San Francisco.

Hamilton died eight months ago, apparently a pauper. Since that time his attorneys said Hamilton saved money and invested on the market, where he probably received "tips" while he was sweeping floors.

Cotati Planners Approve Switch

The Cotati Planning Commission has approved a change in zoning from duplex to multiple residential at 8192 El Rancho Drive.

The rezoning was sought by Wilmer Klebe.

The commission also asked for public recommendations and questions in preparation of the Jan. 4 meeting with the city council on the new zoning ordinance.

Listing Freighter Makes It To Port

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The Greek freighter Erato, under escort by a Coast Guard cutter, reached port safely Sunday after developing a serious list in the North Pacific.

The 13,000-ton Erato, which had been headed from Seattle, Wash., to Japan, was berthed at the Oakland Port Authority, and a spokesman said it would remain there for about two days.

The contractor shall in the performance of the work and improvements conform to the Labor Code of the State of California and other laws of the State of California applicable thereto, with the exception only of such variations as may be required under the special statutes pursuant to which proceedings hereunder are taken and which have not been superseded by the provisions of the Labor Code. Preference to labor shall be given only in the manner provided by law. Veterans and resident local labor shall be given preference by the contractor whenever possible, if skill and working ability permit without increasing the ultimate cost of the work and improvement to the City of San Rafael.

NOTICE IS HEREBY EXPRESSLY GIVEN that payments will be made to the contractor in cash by said City of San Rafael, but only from the proceeds of any assessments which are paid in cash or from the proceeds of the sale of any bonds which are to be issued on the unpaid assessments. Said payment will be made to the contractor based upon the provisions in the specifications for payment based upon the quantity of labor and materials furnished by said contractor.

Commencing not more than sixty (60) days after the commencement of the work and within the first five (5) days of each calendar month during the construction period thereafter, the contractor shall submit to the Engineer an itemized bill of the quantity and value of the materials accepted and work performed prior to the end of the preceding month, and the Engineer will, within a reasonable time, check such bill, make his estimate of the value of the same in accordance with the terms of the contract, and ninety per cent (90%) thereof shall be paid to said contractor on or before the 15th day of said calendar month; the remaining ten per cent (10%) of the amount due the contractor shall be paid thirty-five days (35) after completion of all of said work and improvement and acceptance thereof by the City Council of the City of San Rafael.

All proposals or bids shall be accompanied by a check payable to said City of San Rafael and certified by a responsible bank for an amount which shall not be less than ten per cent (10%) of the aggregate of the proposal, or by a bond for said amount and so payable, signed by the bidder and two sureties who shall justify, before any officer competent to administer an oath, in double the said amount, and over and above all statutory exemptions, or by a corporate surety bond in said amount satisfactory to the engineer.

The time fixed for receiving sealed bids or proposals for the doing of said work and improvement herein ordered is the 20th day of January, 1972, at the hour of 2:00 o'clock P.M. of said day, in the office of the City Clerk of the City of San Rafael, 1400 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, California. Said bids, after being publicly opened, examined and declared, will be calculated by the Engineer of Work, their report returned to the City Clerk, and the report of the results of the bidding and the calculations of the Engineer of Work will be reported to the City Council of the City of San Rafael. The City Council of the City of San Rafael reserves the right to reject any and all proposals or bids, should it deem this necessary for the public good, and also the bid of any bidder who has been delinquent or unfaithful in any former contract with the City of San Rafael.

Plans and specifications may be obtained at the office of the Engineer of Work, GONZALEZ & OBERKAMPER, 10 Paul Drive, San Rafael, California, upon deposit of $25.00 for each set. Said deposit is non-refundable.

DATED: December 20, 1971.

Negotiation Held Key In Mideast

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said today in Jerusalem Israel is looking forward to 1972 as the year of negotiation in the Middle East.

Eban told a news conference, " I can only express hope that 1972 will be what 1971 was not, a year of negotiation. That is the keynote of Israeli government policy."

Eban said the first month of the New Year would be crucial for the area. He said by mid-January the U. S. effort to achieve a partial agreement to reopen the Suez Canal, and the mission of United Nations peace negotiator Gunnar V. Jarring could be at a crucial juncture."

"We expect to be told by Jarring whether, and how, his mission can be revived," Eban said. "And from the United States Israel expects clarifications on whetherthe canal negotiations would be free and without conditions."

Eban's statement came as Israeli military sources reported a rare incident of cooperation between Egyptian and Israeli military forces.

The sources said Egyptian military authorities had informed the Israeli high command through the U.N. truce supervisory organization in Jerusalem it is holding maneuvers on the west bank of the canal.

The sources said Egypt did so so Israel would not mistake the maneuvers as Egyptian preparations for a preemptive strike.

In Cairo Arab foreign ministers opened a meeting today to discuss the Middle East crisis and the possibility of a summit conference early next month to unify any action against Israel.

A Diamond's Color

Hoover Nears 77, Says He Will Not Step Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) —On New Year's Day, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover will celebrate his 77th Birthday. He describes his health as "excellent" and says he never has considered stepping down.

"I have never considered stepping down from my position in the FBI as long as I can be of service to my country and have the health, vigor and enthusiasm to perform my responsibilities in the manner my superiors and the public have a right to expect," Hoover said.

Hoover made the comment in answer to written questions submitted him by UPI.

Hoover has served as FBI director since 1924. There have been many calls for his resignation in recent years, but President Nixon has said Hoover will stay on as long as his health and performance remain good.

The latest suggestion that Hoover retire came Sunday from Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the former urban affairs adviser to President Nixon, who now is a professor or urban politics at Harvard University.

"I think the sooner Mr. Hoover retires, the better the FBI will be," Moynihan said. "It has become a cankered bureaucracy preserving the unnecessary vanities of a man who has served too long in office."

Moynihan said he believed Hoover had endangered the FBI's role by a "very casual and clumsy attitude" toward civil liberties.

"I am sure the morale in the FBI is in just awful shape," Moynihan said.

Hoover, who has been criticized for the FBI's hiring of minorities, said the agency has 135 blacks, American Indians, orientals and persons with Spanish surnames out of 8,500 special agents. He said he would like to increase minority representation.

"I will not relax the high qualifications the FBI has traditionally demanded of its special agent applicants simply to play a numbers game with the very important issue of minority employment," he said. "To do so would only slur those who seek true equality, weaken FBI efficiency and morale, and destroy public confidence in our standards."

DREAM MACHINE?

When Dickens Bascom aims his coupe onto Marin streets, it's happy motoring — psychedelic style. Bascom, a Larkspur artist who has donated works to the city, wheeled his car into the parking lot of the California Highway Patrol office in Corte Madera the other day, and disbelieving looks from the officers. "There's something on it for everyone," said Sgt. James C. Dukes. There is, indeed — sneaker soles, clocks, a mailbox, bottles and religious figures. The vehicle had been cited last month for defective lights, but it cleared a CHP inspection Thursday. If the junk-laden auto violates any other vehicle laws, the CHP couldn't find them. Chamber Of Commerce Expert Sees Inflation Rate Increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The U.S. Chamber of Commerce's chief economist predicts American economic output will jump 9.5 per cent in 1972 while the inflation rate will be cut substantially.

The optimistic forecast was made Sunday by Dr. Carl H. Madden in a year-end paper. He predicted a "record economic advance" next year.

"The strength and breadth of accelerated economic growth will extend to every sector, including consumer buying and business investment," Madden wrote. "As the economy gathers strength, the jobless rates will fall along with the rate of price increases."

Other business leaders polled by Nation's Business Magazine generally agreed the economy should be on the upswing in 1972 but had difficulty assessing President Nixon's economic policy.

The magazine reported it surveyed 451 chairmen of boards, presidents, senior vice presidents and corporation economists.

It said only 98 of the executives said their companies had been helped by the first two phases of the administration economic plan. Another 122 believed their companies were affected adversely and 204 could see little or no effect. Of those surveyed, 391 expected to see the economy strengthened in 1972. They also were asked to predict how profits would compare in 1972 with 1971, and 33 said they expected decreases, 77 saw profits holding steady, and the remainder said profits should go up between 5 and 15 per cent.

Madden in his year end report predicted "inflation, after six long years, will be significantly tempered." He said total economic output could be expected to hit $1.15 trillion, up as much as $100 billion or nearly 9.5 per cent.

He said consumer spending should lead the increase with more emphasis on durable goods and services.

SPORT NOTES

Edwards Shares Some Bubbly Brew

By RALPH CHATOIAN

The huge man with a gentle voice was sitting in his stall in the 49er dressing room when a friend walked up and handed him a gift wrapped package.

"Ah," said the 6-foot-6, 262-pound man who makes his living chasing quarterbacks and tackling halfbacks. He tore away the wrapping paper and opened up a box revealing a bottle of champagne and two glasses.

Earl Edwards, strong 49er defensive tackle who moments earlier had helped the 49ers beat the Washington Redskins, 24-20 in a National Football League playoff game, wrestled a few seconds with the top before popping the cork all the way to the ceiling.

HE POURED a glass for himself and one for Bill Belk, reserve defensive end who has the stall next to him in the Candlestick dressing room. Toasting Belk, Edwards smiled, "I've been seeing this on television a long time."

Then he stood up and looked across the room where quarterback John Brodie was sitting, completely hidden by reporters and radio-TV people. "I have to toast Bro," he said, walking over and pouring a glass for wide receiver Gene Washington on the way. He finally got the champagne bottle to Brodie and poured. "Thanks, man," said the 49er who had thrown two touchdown passes and completed 10 of 19 passes for 176 yards on a day best for ducks, not for man.

Edwards' bottle of champagne was the only one in the dressing room but thoughts were flying toward a time three weeks from now when there might be more champagne was the only one in the dressing room but thoughts were flying toward a time three weeks from now when there might be more champagne. But the dressing room would be in Tulane Stadium in New Orleans, site of the Super Bowl Jan. 16. To get there the 49ers must beat the Dallas Cowboys next Sunday in Irving, Tex.

MANY OF thefans at yesterday's game might have thought a big turning point of the game, as far as momentum goes, was in the third quarter when the Redskins tried for a first down on a fourth and inches situation, the ball sitting on the S.F. 11-yard line. The try failed, linebackers Frank Nunley and Jim Sniadecki throwing Redskin runner Larry Brown for a two-yard loss. The 49ers were trailing 10-3 at the time and I thought this was the play that switched the momentum.

When the Niners got the ball, Brodie had fullback Ken Willard run twice and on third and 1, Brodie faked to Willard who carried out the fake beautifully, then passed to the streaking Gene Washington who caught it on the 40 and then sprinted into the end zone to complete a 78-yard play. When the ball was in the air, one of the Redskins' linebackers was still trying to bring down Willard, convinced he had the ball.

DID BRODIE think that fourth down play was the one to lift the 49ers? Did that excite him?

"No, not really," he said calmly after the game. "I didn't even know they were going for the first down. I thought they would go for the field goal. Then someone said we had the ball back. I just went back on the field."

Forty-Niner head coach Dick Nolan said they had practiced that third and short yardage pass play during the week, but "I expected Brodie to call it when we were a little closer to the Washington goal line."

BRODIE GAVE HIS reasons for calling the play when he did: "We just weren't moving the ball, nothing was working, so I thought, 'what the hell,' it looked like the thing to do." It sure was, John.

WILLARD, WHO carried out another fake beautifully when Brodie passed two yards to tight end Bob Windsor for a touchdown in the third quarter, ran just as hard on the decoy plays as when he had the ball.

"It really makes you feel good when you contribute to a big play any way you can," said Willard. "That touchdown to Washington was the biggest play of the game and I'm just glad I could contribute."

One of the happiest, but quietest players after the game was reserve Bob Hoskins, a roommate of Edwards when both were playing at University of Wichita. It was Hoskins who pounced on the ball in the Redskins' end zone when punter Mike Bragg couldn't handle George Burman's low snap. It proved to be the winning touchdown and was the first TD for Hoskins since high school days in Edwardsville, Ill. near St. Louis, although he was a running back and defensive end at Wichita.

HE CARTED the ball away after the touchdown and had it in his dressing room stall after the game. Explaining his recovery and TD, Hoskins said, "Bragg started going after the ball and then he looked up at me, sort of took his eye off the ball. That's when I was able to get to it." Punting specialists don't relish the thought of competing with 253-pound defensive lineman.

A punter by the name of Jim McCann was dressing quietly in the stall next to Hoskins. He had been taken out of his job with the 49ers and replaced by Steve Spurrier, and admits it's because the coaching staff feels he can't punt under the pressure of pro championships.

"I started worrying about dropping the ball and it put a little pressure on me and my punting. It's something I'll just have to get over. No, I don't know whether they'll use me against Dallas."

"It was our worst game ever," said Elmer Collett of Mill Valley about the special teams of

Nixon Tells Allen: 'Don't Look Back'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— President Nixon, who made one of the greatest political comebacks in history, has a few words of solace for the Washington Redskins: "Don't look back ..."

Redskin defensive back Pat Fischer looked back at the wrong time, center George Burman looked back but never reached his target and coach George Allen looked back at a fourth-down gamble and tried unsuccessfully to repeat it.

When the NFC semifinal playoff between Washington and San Francisco ended in the rain Sunday, the Redskins were 24-20 losers to the 49ers. They climaxed their finest season in pro football since their last playoff year of 1945 with a comfortable telephone call from the President.

"He thought we played a fine game," said Allen. "He said all of Washington (D.C.) was proud of our team and asked me to relay that to the players . He said don't look back ... look ahead."

Allen, who led the Redskins to an overall 9-5-1 record in his first season at the helm after leaving the Los Angeles Rams, said a pass interception, blocked field goal try and two

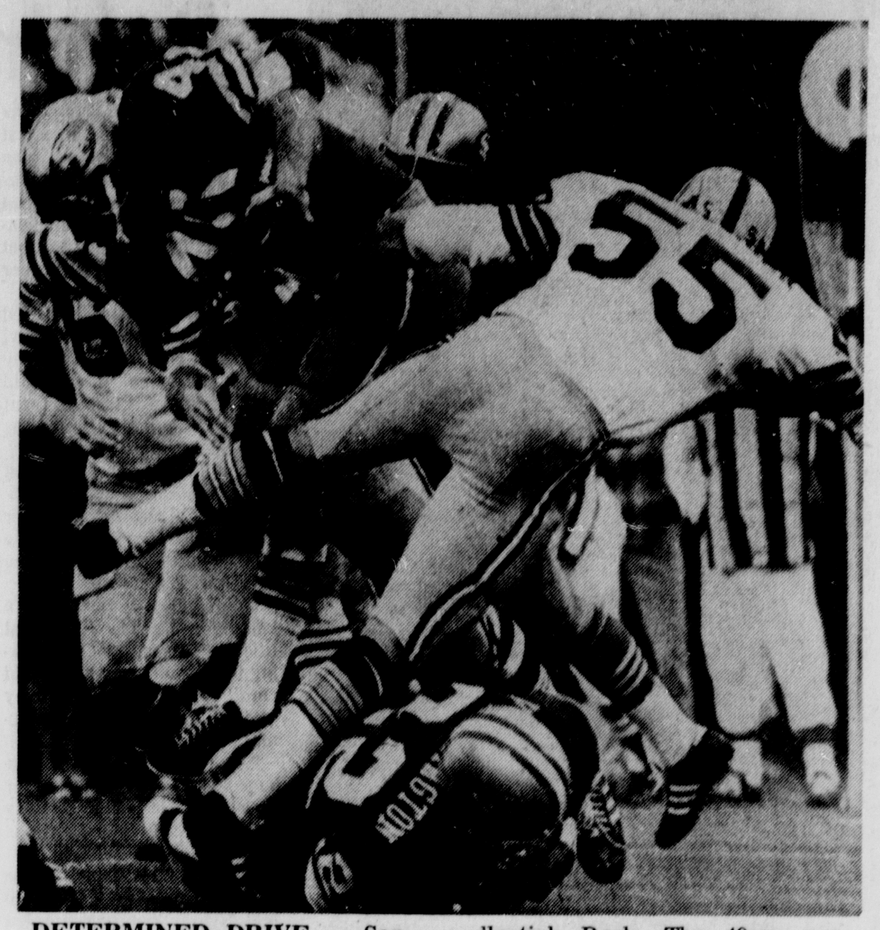
49ers Get Second Shot At Dallas



DETERMINED DRIVE — San Francisco 49er fullback Ken Willard churned out five yards Sunday against the visiting Washington Redskins in fourth quarter playoff action yesterday at Candlestick Park. The 49ers pervailed 24-20 to win the right to meet the Dallas Cowboys Sunday at Texas Stadium for the National Football Conference title.

Brodie's 2 TD Passes Subdue 'Skins, 24-20

A year ago, the Cowboys defeated the 49ers, 17-10, for the National Football Conference title, and now 15 games later the two clubs will square off again —next Sunday in Dallas —for the 1971 title.

The Cowboys defeated the Minnesota Vikings, 20-12, Saturday to reach the title game while them 49ers, taking advantage of Washington mistakes, beat the Redskins, 24-20, Sunday.

San Francisco head coach Dick Nolan doesn't care one way or the other about having to play Dallas again. He's content to be in the title game, but some of his players feel different.

"I don't care who we play," said Nolan after his 49ers scuttled the Redskins. "The only thing that counts is that we are going for the title again."

Ken Willard, San Francisco's short-yardage man who was stopped cold by the Cowboys last year, is happy to get another crack at them. So, too, is John Brodie, whose two third period touchdown passes Sunday ended Washington's dreams of reaching the Super Bowl in George Allen's first year as head coach.

"They knocked us out last year," said Willard, "and it's only fitting that we play them again."

"We know we'll be playing a

Stanford Closes Workouts

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The Stanford University football team closed its workouts to all observers today as the Indians installed their game plan for the Rose Bowl encounter with Michigan.

While Michigan was forced to travel to Bakersfield to find a good practice turf, the Indians reported conditions at Cal State Long Beach were excellent after the torrential rains of the past weekend.

The Indians worked out for an hour and 45 minutes Sunday on the field and coach John Ralston said the drill was filmed so he, his staff and the players could study the first day's effort on the game plan.

Ralston said the possibility of rain on New Year's Day would not have much effect on Stanford's preparations for the game but he hoped for sunny, dry weather chiefly for the benefit of the 100,000 spectators.

Secret drills were scheduled to continue for the balance of the week, Ralston said.

VS. SACRED HEART

Redwood String On Line

Just how important can a non-league basketball game be? Very, if it's Redwood vs. Sacred Heart.

The San Francisco high-school basketball power visits Redwood's Larkspur gymnasium Wednesday at 8 p.m., and all sorts of regional prestige will be riding on the outcome.

Tomorrow evening, San Rafael High opens play in the Spartan holiday tournament in Pinole, facing defending champion Pinole Valley at 8:30. Also tomorrow, Drake hosts Lincoln of San Francisco at 11 a.m., Redwood entertains Cottage Grove of Oregon at 8 p.m., and San Marin is home against St. Elizabeth of Oakland, 8:15 p.m.

On Wednesday, San Rafael continues play at Pinole and Terra Linda hosts its alumni at 8 p.m. Marin Catholic plays Lowell of San Francisco at Redwood, 7 p.m., right before the Redwood-Sacred Heart clash.

Thursday, Drake hosts Lowell, 11 a.m.; Marin Catholic entertains Serra of San Mateo, 7 p.m.; San Marin is home against Petaluma, 8:15 p.m.; and Tamalpais visits Santa Rosa, 8:15 p.m. San Rafael concludes its play at Pinole.

Redwood (10-0) is off to its best start in history, but was in real danger of losing only twice. "I guess we'll find out what kind of team we have against Sacred Heart," said coach Dick Hart.

The San Franciscans are 7-2, but both losses came during the Catholic lay teachers' strike, and coach Jerry Phillips is on record saying his team would be unbeaten if not for the interruption.

Sacred Heart's star is 6-foot-6 center Glen Hubbard, well known to Marin County fans because of his devastatng performances in the summer league here. Playing in the adult loop, he scored around 30 points a game.

Sacred Heart is a patient team, working carefully for the good percentage shot. "They run very good patterns," said Marin Catholic coach Dave Gonsalves, whose team lost to the Irish last week, 50-46.

Helping out on the front line are 6-5 Ken Cooper and Terry Richardson, who is only 6-0 but jumps like a kangaroo. Steve Pasera is a good guard who scored 15 against Marin Catholic.

Marin Catholic (5-6) has tended to be erratic this year, playing its best against the better teams and not so well against also-rans. Lowell is good, having among its performances a victory over St. Ignatius of San Francisco and a one-point loss to Tamalpais. Lowell features a high-scoring gunner, 5-foot-10 Nick Hoppe.

Drake (5-4) did not fare too well in previous encounters with San Francisco, losing its two opening games by a combined 39 points. But this is a different Drake team now with a 5-2 record since those debacles. Short but quick, Drake came up with its most impressive performance yet Dec. 17, shattering Hogan of Vallejo, 70-40.

San Marin (3-4) is biting off a hugemouthful. St. Elizabeth is not bad and Petaluma, the Drake tournament winner, is genuinely powerful. The Mustangs, still putting it together, may have found a third scorer to go with Hoza Wright and Fred Doar. Bart Saling tallied 20 in their last outing, against John Swett of Crockett.

San Rfael (5-4) wins its odd-numbered games and loses its even-numbered ones. This one is even. The Bulldogs are coming off a 71-34 crushing of Terra Nova of Pacifica, however, and are not about to believe in any numbers game.

Tamalpais (6-4) also has a tough game at Santa Rosa. The slick Allen brother combination, Tom and Chris, almost defeated Redwood at the beginning of the year and did subdue Terra Linda later on.

Ali Stops German In Zurich

ZURICH, Switzerland (UPI) —The toughness and the courage of an unheralded German helped Muhammad Ali to show that he might whip Joe Frazier the second time around.

The former world heavyweight champion knocked out Juergen Blin after two minutes and 12 seconds of the seventh round Sunday night at the Oerlikon Hallenstadion and looked in much better shape than he was for the Jimmy Ellis and Buster Mathis fights.

"I was hurt twice," Ali admitted. "But he did not have the skill to follow it up."

Ex-Oklahoma Back Killed In Accident

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (UPI)— Joseph G. Golding Jr., a fleet halfback for the 1941 and 1946 Oklahoma Sooners, was killed in a one-car accident south of Muskogee Sunday.

Warriors Hope To Thaw Out Against Celtics

BOSTON (UPI) — Golden State Warrior coach Al Attles hopes his men thaw out tonight against the tough Boston Celtics.

The Warriors are in a December freeze which showed Saturday night when they were beaten 114-89 by the New York Knicks. The Warriors shot only 33 per cent.

"We had only 12 more shots than the Knicks," Attles said, "but we weren't getting the opportunity shots or anything inside.

Russell had 30 points but the only other Warrior in double figures was Jeff Mullins with 12.

"You expect one man to be cold or even two, and someone else will pick them up," he said. "You don't expect everyone to be cold."

Southern Cal Crew To Join Sailing Field

LONG BEACH (UPI) —A University of Southern California crew won a sail-off Sunday for the right to take part in the eighth annual Long Beach Congressional Cup Sailing Championships.

Skippered by Doug Rosetello, 19, of Long Beach, the five-man Trojan team defeated a crew captained by Dr. William White of Pasadena for the right to represent the host Long Beach Yacht Club.

The Trojans won two straight races in the best of three eliminations.

Both boats were Cal 40 sloops.

LONGEST GAME

Miami Upsets Kansas City

Almost lost in the hullaballoo of pro football's longest game, the jubilance of the Miami Dolphins and Garo Yepremian's 37-yard field goal, was the fact that the game probably was the last sports event played in Municipal Stadium, built in 1923.

The Kansas City Chiefs will move into their new Arrowhead Stadium next fall and their baseball counterparts, the Royals, also expect to open the 1972 season in their new stadium in the Harry Truman Sports Complex.

FITTING END

So, 48 years of sports action ended fittingly. The Dolphins won, 27-24, after 82 minutes, 40 seconds of playing time. The actual length of the game was three hours, 21 minutes.

The loss was a bitter one for the Chiefs, who never trailed until Yepremian ended it 7:40 deep in the sixth quarter.

Middle linebacker Willie Lanier, who made 22 tackles, summed it up when he said: "There's no blaming of anyone. I missed big tackles, somebody misses a kick. So what? You're looking for an easy way out when you do that, and there's no easy way when you lose.

'BIG PLAYS'

"They came up with the big third-down plays, that's all. We'd go ahead, they'd tie it up. You should talk about their ability to come back. That's worth it."

If the Chiefs were gloomy — some showed it by throwing their helmets at the wall, others by crying openly —the Dolphins could not contain their ecstasy.

"We've never had a bigger victory," coach Don Shula said. "It's a story of guts and determination of a bunch of guys who won't quit. When we ware down, we seemed to come up with the big plays.

'LONGEST GAME'

"They say it was the longest game in football history. But I could care less. I'm only interested in the score."

The Dolphins now turn their thoughts to next Sunday, when they will play in their first American Football Conference championship game. The Dolphins will host Baltimore, 20-3 victor over Cleveland Sunday, in the Orange Bowl. Miami and Baltimore split two games during the regular season, each winning at home.

TAYLOR HELD

The Dolphins held Kansas City's ace receiver, Otis Taylor, to three catches for 12 yards. He was never a factor in the game after making the big play for the Chiefs all year.

"I wasn't surprised," said Taylor. "Every time I came off the line of scrimmage there were three or four guys on me. I was always doubled or tripled, I never did get single coverage."

Chiefs running back Ed Podolak enjoyed perhaps his finest game. He accounted for 350 yards rushing, receiving, and returning kicks. He had 85 yards rushing, 110 yards receiving, 154 yards on kickoff returns (including a 78-yarder) and one-yard on punt returns.

Eleven Chiefs still have another game to play. They were selected to play in the Pro Bowl. But as Taylor, one of the chosen, said, "my year is done. It's all gone."

Shrine Tilt To Feature Offenses

A Shriner parade and pageantry will precede the 1 p.m. kickoff.

The game, to be televised live on ABC's Wide World of Sport (Channels 7 and 13) will feature balanced attacks.

Coaches Murray Warmath of Minnesota, Alex Agase of Northwestern and Charley McClendon of Louisiana State will present the passing of Florida quarterback John Reaves, plus the running of Michigan State's flea-like sprinter Eric Allen and Ed Marinaro of Cornell. The latter was the runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

Coaches Jim Owens of Washington, Hayden Fry of SMU and Don Coryell of San Diego State will counter with such aces as quarterbacks Jim Jones of Southern California and Brian Sipe of San Diego State. Bob Moore of Oregon and Bernard Jackson of Washington State will bulwark the West's ground assaults.

Defensively, the West sports former Terra Linda standout Jim Sherbert, an Oregon State end; San Jose State linebacker Dave Chaney and Willie Hall, Southern California end, and University of California All-American end Sherman White.

While the West defensive stars abound, the East also possesses a fair share. The East array has backs Tom Casanova of Louisiana State and Tom Myers of Syracuse.

Dallas Tops Minnesota

DALLAS (UPI)—Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, who predicted all along the San Francisco 49ers would be back in the National Football Conference championship game, figures next Sunday's title games will be a toughie for his Cowboys.

'TOUGHER GAME'

"I expect it to be a tougher game than last year," Landry said after watching San Francisco dump the Washington Redskins 24-20 via national television.

Landry, who could watch the West Coast game in leisure since his Cowboys had earned their second straight title game berth Christmas Day with a 2012 victory over Minnesota, was refferring to the game a year ago when Dallas beat San Francisco 17-10 in the NFC finals.

'BETTER CLUB'

"San Francisco's a better club than it was last season," said the Dallas coach who lost a member of his own staff when Dick Nolan became head coach of the 49ers after the 1967 season.

Landry also thinks his Cowboys are a much better team execpt that he likes to use the word "maturity" in referring to his club which now has won six straight division or conference championships and will be shooting for a second straight Super Bowl trip Sunday.

"This is a very mature team we have now, but it has taken us years to build up the playoff experience we really need," Landry said.

"I was a little concerned about our defense rising to the height it did against Minnesota because it hadn't had to since last season."

The victory over the Vikings last Saturday, did, indeed, belong to the Cowboys' defense altough the offense also came up with the key plays when the chips were down.

But, it was the defense which had stolen four Minnesota passes and forced and recovered a key fumble by the Vikings.

Three of these turnovers were convered into points, causing middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan to comment:

"We set 'em up and the offense knocked 'em down."

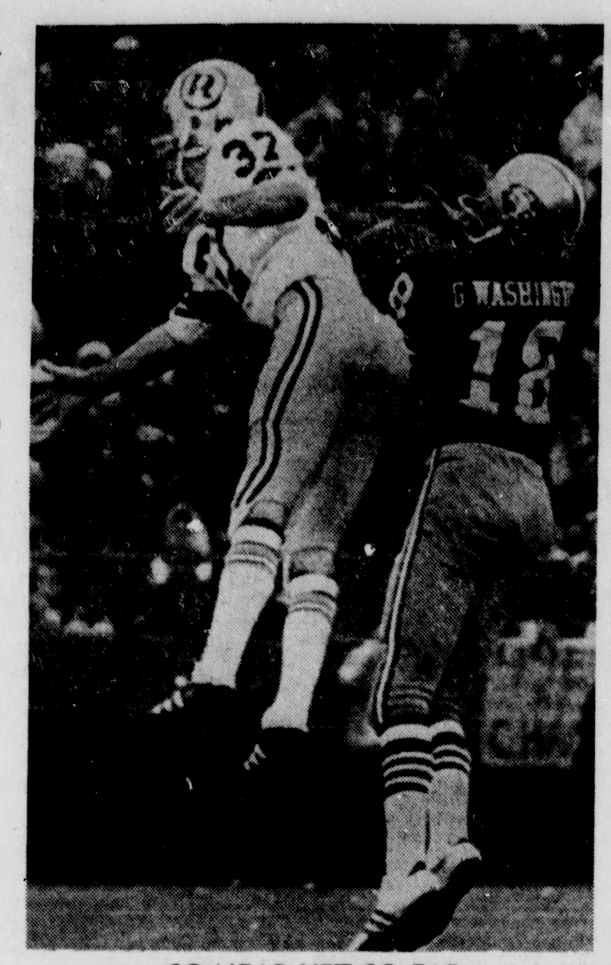
The fumble recovery set up Mike Clark's 26-yard first quarter field goal and Chuck Howley's interception and 26yard runback set up Clark's 44yard field goal which gave Dallas a 6-3 halftime lead.

And, Cliff Harris' 24-yard return with another interception early in the second half set up an explosive 13-yard touchdown gallop up the middle by Duane Thoamas that took the sting out of the Vikings and gave the Cowboys the momentum.

PUNT RETURN

And, Charles Waters' 24-yard punt return led to Dallas' other touchdown in the third period. Roger Staubach, who completed 10 of 14 passes for 85 net yards, hit Lance Alworth on a third down and 15-pass for 30 yards and then hit Bobby Hayes on a nine-yard touchdown pass that put the game out of reach.

The Vikings outgained the Cowboys 311 yards to 183 yards, but couldn't get the clutch yardage. They scored on Fred Cox 27-yard second quarter field goal, a safety when Staubach was tackled in the end zone and on a six-yard pass from Gary Cuozzo to Stu Voight, the latter with just 2:08 left in the game after the cause was lost.



SO NEAR YET SO FAR

Washington Redskins' defensive back Pat Fischer narrowly missed batting down this John Brodie pass which San Francisco 49er receiver Gene Washington snagged on a 78-yard scoring play in the third quarter yesterday. After accepting the toss, Washington scampered untouched across the goal line. (UPI Telephoto)

CLEVELAND FALLS

Baltimore To Face Miami

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Baltimore Colts will have just one thing on their minds when they meet the Miami Dolphins next Sunday for the American Football Conference championship, and the one thing will not be Don Shula, their former coach.

The Colts are more interested in the winning Super Bowl shares of $23,500 than in any embarrassment they could bring to Shula, who walked out on them two years ago and has built the Dolphins into a power.

Shula's expansion team is all that stands in the way of Baltimore and a record third Super Bowl appearance following the Colts' easy 20-3 victory over the Cleveland Browns Sunday.

Miami edged Baltimore by a half-game for the AFC East title this season, the Colts making the playoffs only as a "wild card" team, but they say they have no quarrel with their former coach.

"All that 'bitterness' is garbage," says middle linebacker Mike Curtis. "I feel that way and 95 per cent of the Colts feel that way.

"Shula's a good coach and we have to play a good team. The rest of it is theatrics invented by people to keep busy."

The Colts' tough defense, still smarting from suggestions they deliberately blew their season finale a week ago to draw Cleveland instead of Kansas City as a playoff rival, bottle up the Browns' offense at a skimpy 165 yards.

Bubba Smith blocked two field goals, Rick Volk intercepted two passes and the rest of the Baltimore defense came up with two fumble recoveries and another interception.

Johnny Unitas, as always the master, completed six straight passes in one 92-yard touchdown drive and rookie Don Nottingham, the 441st player chosen in last year's draft, gained 92 yards on the ground and scored touchdowns on one and seven-yard runs to stake Baltimore to a 14-0 halftime lead.

Nottingham was filling in for injured Norm Bulaich, who the Colts hope to have back next week.

Jim O'Brien, the hero of last year's Super Bowl, accounted for the rest of the Colts' scoring with second half field goals of 42 and 15 yards, more than offsetting a 14-yarder by Cleveland's Don Cockroft.

"Our defense did it for us," said Coach Don McCafferty of Baltimore. "They were fantastic."

Cleveland quarterback Bill Nelsen, who was forced into the three interceptions by a strong pass rush, dumped four times for losses and got only one pass to a wide receiver all day, observed improvement in the Baltimore defense since the teams met in a September game won by Cleveland, 14-13.

"I think they were much stronger than they were in September," Nelsen said. "and we didn't put much pressure on them. The double-teamed the outside men so I went to the backs more, but I didn't even have time to throw to them."

The Browns threatened the first two times they had the ball, twice penetrating deep into Baltimore territory on a 39-yard pass from Nelson to Fair Hooker and a 48-yard punt return by Leroy Kelly, but a fumble and the first of Smith's blocked field goals stopped the drives.

"With Baltimore's great defense, you have to capitalize when you can," lamented Skorich. "We couldn't."

The Colts, who allowed 500 yards less than any other team in the NFL this year, held Kelly to 49 yards on the ground and stopped Bo Scott with 25. Cleveland had a net of 69 yards rushing.

The classic performance by the world champions set up an ideal match for next Sunday at the Orange Bowl. Miami won the AFC East with a 10-3-1 record while Baltimore was 10-4, the teams splitting their two games.

Whatever happens, Curtis gives assurance, Baltimore will not be trying to win it for Shula's sake.

"I have to play them," he said pointedly. "I don't play Shula."

Passing Duel Looms In Shrine Contest

MIAMI (UPI)—The director of the Shrine North-South football game says if he has his way tonight the two coaches will shake hands and come out throwing.

Andy Gustafson prides himself on picking quarterbacks for the game that go high in the pro draft despite a lack of publicity during college, and he says tonight's game is no exception.

"We get out list of talent from friends in the pros and both quarterbacks Dean Carlson (Iowa State) of the North and Jim Hamilton (Arkansas State) of the South are high on their lists," he said.

"There's been so many great football players who didn't get a line of ink in college and their satisfaction must come from making it in the pros," Gustafson said. "This gives the North-South spectators a chance to say they saw so-and-so play while he was still an unknown."

Hamilton will be throwing to speedy Fred Graves and James Quinn of Virginia Tech and Carlson will be tossing to Al Hannah of Wisconsin and Barry Pearson of Northwestern.

But all the South throwing might not be done by the quarterbacks. Coach Bill Battle of Tennessee has installed a few gimmicks in his offense, including halfback passes and an end-around pass.

Tommy Durrance of Florida, who'll start at tailback for the South, has been hitting consistently in practice on short passes and Calvin Harrell of Arkansas State was practicing the long passes.

North coach Johnny Majors of Iowa State is expected to be a little more conventional, using Ernie Cook of Minnesota and Bill Butler of Kansas State to run the ball.

A family rivalry will also be involved in tonight's game, which will be nationally televised (ABC).

Majors' younger brother Bobby, an All-America at Tennessee this year, will be in the South team's defensive backfield.

The elder Majors said with a grin, "I haven't lost any sleep over it and I'm sure Bobby hasn't either, but it should be real interesting."

NBA PLAY

Cleveland Triumphs; Lakers Trim Houston

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The National Basketball Association's Central Division race is reaching the critical stage—the Cleveland Cavaliers are threatening for first place.

The Cavaliers, who gained national recognition last season with their extended losing streaks, moved to within a half-game of the division lead Sunday night with a 108-102 victory over the first-place Baltimore Bullets. It was Cleveland's fourth consecutive victory and moved the Cavaliers to a 13-23 mark as compared to the Bullets' 13-22.

Cleveland could move into first place Tuesday night if the Cavaliers can beat Portland and Cincinnati defeats Baltimore.

In other NBA action, Los Angeles extend its record winning streak to 28 games with a 137-115 rout of Houston, Chicago edged Seattle 103-102 and Milwaukee topped Atlanta 114-92.

Some hands reach out to touch and help, others are clenched in pain and despair. We all ask "Why?" to the cruel contrasts of our life. Why poverty in a land of plenty? Why loneliness in a world that would join hands? Why war when the impulse of the heart is to love? The aching chasm between the real and the ideal everywhere provokes the question . . .

WHY?

In a world looking for answers
maybe God is the place to start.
God is hope. God is now.

tough team," said Brodie, "but we wouldn't want it any other way."

Brodie threw scoring strikes of 78 yards to Gene Washington and two to Bob Windsor in Sunday's victory over Washington, but it was a gamble by Allen that turned the game around.

Alien had passed up a chance for a field goal early in the game and went instead for a first down try on fourth down. Charlie Harraway rewarded his coach with a one-yard smash to the five and two plays later Billy Kilmer threw five yards to Jerry Smith for a touchdown.

In a similar situation in the third quarter and with the Redskins ahead 10-3, the maneuver failed when Frank Nunley and Jim Sniadecki dropped Larry Brown for a two -yard loss at the San Francisco 14. The big defensive play seemed to perk up the 49ers, who were less than brilliant in the first half.

Brodie needed only three plays to tie the score, hitting Washington at the Redskins 40 over Pat Fischer, and the fleet San Francisco wide receiver galloped the rest of the way to score. The play came on third down and Nolan praised Brodie for making the call that he did.

Bruce Gossett booted a 23yard field goal for San Francisco's only points in the first half and Bob Hoskins fell on a fumble in the end zone with 3:20 left for what proved to be the winning score.

That "gift" came on a low snap from center George Burman to kicker Mike Bragg, who was standing in the end zone. Bragg couldn't handle the ball and Hoskins, who plays on the specialty teams, fell on it for the score.

That TD pushed San Francisco into a 24-13 lead but the Redskins, who never gave up and earned the praise of President Nixon, fought back for a touchdown —a 16-yard pass from Kilmer to Larry Brown — to cut the lead to the final spread and were still battling at midfield when time ran out.

Seals Waste Lead, Fall To Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI) — The California Golden Seals must have had a funny feeling they'd been there before.

The Seals were in front twice in the first period Sunday night and then bowed, 6-2, to the Vancouver Canucks.

The same thing happened in October when the two squads clashed in Oakland. The Seals then took an early 4-0 lead and fell apart for a 9-6 dumping.

Penalties caused havoc in the California camp Sunday night.

The final period saw Canucks Wayne Maki, Ted Taylor and Dale Tallon score while Dick Redmond of the Seals was in the penalty box and teammate Gary Croteau was sitting out a penalty.

Ironically, before Sunday the Seals' penalty had only allowed one goal in the last six games. That was against Los Angeles Saturday, a contest California won 3-1.

The Seals next meet host Montreal Wednesday and go on to Detroit Friday. It's Buffalo Sunday before returning to the coast where the Seals visit Los Angeles Jan. 4.

Score by periods:

BILETNIKOFF

Oakland Star Paces AFC Receiving Corps

OAKLAND (UPI) — The National Football League campaign ended on a sad note for the Oakland Raiders —they failed to make the playoffs for the first time in five years—but Fred Biletnikoff proved something he set out to do six years ago.

When the Florida State product was drafted on the second round in 1965, the rap on him was that he lacked the speed necessary to make it as a bigtime wide receiver.

Although he has had better seasons, 1971 was the most satisfying from the standpoint of accomplishment while playing under adverse conditions.

When the totals were added up after 14 regular season games, he was at the head of the class with 61 receptions for 929 yards.

Winning the league's reception category was great, of course, but it becomes all the more impressive when the problems that wracked the Oakland receiving corps are unfolded.

To begin with, Warren Wells, who with Biletnikoff gave the Raiders one of the most feared pass receiving tandems in the NFL, was sidelined before the season opener because of offthe-field difficulties.

When injuries struck, it forced rotation of the post normally held by Wells and, in turn, opposing teams found it more profitable to double-team Biletnikoff.

Not only that, the Raiders, considered the passingest team in football, made a 190-degree turn and became a grind-it-out squad on offense.

"Actually, all of that didn't make much of a difference," Biletnikoff said earlier this week while storing away his equipment for the last time.

"Winning the receiving title was satisfying, but so what?" he added. "The only thing that counts is winning the Super Bowl and we're not even in it.

"I'd gladly be the 20th ranked receiver if we could go to the Super Bowl."

All athletes work hard to reach the top in their field and with the 6-1, 190-pound Biletnikoff, it was no different.

Realizing he lacked the blazing Bob Hayes-type speed, Biletnikoff concentrated (the most important word in his vocabulary) on precise pattern running and perfected his "moves."

"As a receiver, he has many assets—among them fantastic body control and tremendous spring in his legs," Oakland's Daryle Lamonica said recently. "But maybe the most important attribute is his concentration on the ball. It's the best of anyone I've ever seen.

"It hasn't been easy for him this season," Lamonica continued. "With Wells gone, he has attracted much more defensive attention. Double coverage has been almost standard for Fred. I'd have to say this has been Fred's best year overall. He's the greatest."

Skeptics who said he'd never make it in the pros would have to agree with Lamonica after the kind of season Biletnikoff has had.

Foster Thrashes Italian Champ In Zurich

ZURICH (UPI) —Mac Foster, a California heavyweight, used former Italian champ Bepi Ros as a punching bag Sunday and scored a technical knockout in the eighth round.

Foster, whose home is in Fresno, was hitting the bulky Italian almost at will when Ros's handlers threw in the towell.

Ros took a mandatory eight count in that round and was bleeding heavily from the nose.

It was Foster's 29th knockout in 30 pro fights. He lost, but only once, to Jerry Quarry.

"We made too many mistakes; they didn't make any mistakes," he said. "The club that makes the fewest errors will win the game. That's what happened."

"The ball was wet and tough to handle," said Allen.

Not so, replied Burman, a six -year pro from Northwestern. "It was just a bad snap...too low. The ball wasn't wet. It's up to the center to see that it is dry."

Less than five minutes earlier with the 49ers having third and one yard to go for a first down at their own 22, Gene Washington got behind cornerback Fischer and caught a 78-yard bomb that gave the 49ers a 10-10 tie.

"(John) Brodie's been doing that for 10 years," said Allen. "Our defender just misjudged the ball." (Gene Washington said the tricky Candlestick Park winds blew the ball over Fischer's outstretched fingertips.)

But the play that seemed to turn the tide was when the Redskins' Larry Brown failed to get a first down early in the third quarter on fourth down and inches to go at the SF 11. Linebackers Frank Nunley and Jim Sniadecki smeared him for a two-yard loss with Washington leading 10-3 at the time.

NHL ROUNDUP

Rangers' Yule Long, Merry

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The New York Rangers agreed today that the longest Christmas most of them have ever spent at least ended on a merry note.

The Rangers were away from their families from Friday afternoon when they left for Minnesota until after Sunday night's game with Montreal in New York but came home with a pair of victories — a 2-1 win over the North Stars Saturday night and Sunday night's 5-1 romp over the Canadiens.

The Sunday night triumph gave the first-place Rangers a seven-point lead over the third-place Canadiens in the National Hockey League's East Division. The Rangers lead the second-place Boston Bruins by four points.

Vic Hadfield scored two goals and went past the 400-mark in career points and Ted Irvine, Glen Sather and Pierre Jarry also scored for the Rangers. Gilles Villemure, who has yielded only one goal in nine of the 18 games he has been in the New York net, had a shutout until Yvan Cournoyer scored with 4:15 left in the third period.

"We hated the schedule when we first saw it," said Hadfield. "But now that it's over at least we got the four points we could get out of the two games. It's like money in the bank."

Ken Hodge scored two goals and Phil Esposito tallied his league-high 28th of the season for the Bruins, who stretched their unbeaten string to six games with a 3-1 win over the Toronto Maple Leafs. Bob Baun's first goal of the season cut the Bruins' lead to 2-1 in the third period but Hodge scored his second goal of the game into an open net with 23 seconds left.

The Chicago Black Hawks ran their winning streak to eight games and increased their lead in the West Division to nine points by beating the Los Angeles Kings, 6-3, on third -period goals by Chico Maki, Bobby Hull and Jim Pappin. The Black Hawks remained unbeaten at home this season with 15 victories and two ties.

The Detroit Red Wings defeated the North Stars, 5-1, the Philadelphia Flyers routed the Pittsburgh Penguins, 6-1, the Buffalo Sabres downed the St. Louis Blues, 6-3, and the Vancouver Canucks topped the California Golden Seals, 6-2, in Sunday's other games.

Mickey Redmond scored two goals for the Red Wings, who outshot the North Stars, 19-4, in the second period; Serge Bernier had a goal and a club record of four assists in one game to lead the Flyers; Mike Byers and Rick Martin had two goals each as the Sabres extended the Blues' winless streak to 10 games and the Canucks rallied from two one-goal deficits in the first period to blast the Seals with the help of power-play tallies by Wayne Maki, Dale Tallon and Wayne Connally.

Six Marin Net Stars Invited To Tournament

Six Marin County players have been invited to participate in the Northern California Tennis Association's 10th Junior Round Robin tournament, which will begin Monday at the Carmel Valley Racquet Club.

The selections are Jerry Suyderhoud of San Anselmo in the boys 18; Dan Tierney, Tiburon, boys 16; Leslie Airola, Tiburon, and Bee Kilgore, Tiburon, girls 16; and Sue Beatty, Tiburon, and Diane DeMartini, Greenbrae, girls 14.

The seven leading players in each of eight divisions were invited to play. Each player will play two 16-game matches a day against the other six in his division. Final standings will be based on total games won.

The NCTA will award a gift certificate to the winner in each division. The outstanding player, determined by total games won, will be awarded a perpetual trophy. A sportsmanship trophy also will be awarded, the recipient determined by a vote of the players.

Indiana Upends Kentucky

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Unable to handle one division leader Saturday night, Indiana tried the other division front runner Sunday night with a much better result as far as the Packers were concerned.

Following a 150-129 loss at the hands of Utah, the Pacers came back to beat Eastern Division-leading Kentucky 117-111 in one of two American Basketball Association contests Sunday night. In the other game, Carolina rallied for a 123 -117 victory over the New York Nets.

Mel Daniels scored 26 points, including the go-ahead basket in the final quarter, to help Indiana beat Kentucky and snap the Colonels' winning streak at six. Roger Brown, with 25 points, and Fred Lewis with 23, contributed to the Pacer's attack.

Dan Issel paced the Colonels with 28 points, 23 of them in the second half, while teammate Louie Dampier chipped in with 26.

Joe Caldwell scored 15 of his 21 points in the last quarter and rookie Jim McDaniels tallied 38 points and pulled down 20 rebounds while playing the entire game as Carolina came from behind to beat the Nets. Rick Barry led the losers with 44 points.

Kicking Keys NFL Playoff

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—This may bring the whole state of Florida down on my neck but I don't think the better club necessarily won that ball game between Miami and Kansas City.

I say that primarily because of the way the longest game in pro football history was settled.

Garo Yepremian decided Saturday's playoff game in Kansas City with a 37-yard field goal after 7:40 of the second overtime period, his boot providing the Dolphins with a 27-24 win and a berth in next Sunday's AFC's finale against Baltimore, which conquered Cleveland, 20-3.

KICKER DECIDES

In the end, it all came down to which team had the better field goal kicker, or more specifically, which kicker had the better day because when it was all over Garo Yepremian, Miami's left footed little Cypriot, readily conceded that Jan Stenerud, Kansas City's skinny field goal specialist from Norway, really was "the best kicker" even though his two misses cost KC the game.

Again, this isn't taking anything away from such men as Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick, Bob Griese or Paul Warfield, but I had the feeling here was a ball game really being kicked away more, by Stenerud, a man trying to be too precise, than it was actually being won by superior forces.

Every time I looked up, it seemed, somebody was going for a field goal. If pro football is turning into a mere game of kicking field goals, why doesn't each club station its kicker on the 40-yard line or thereabouts and let him see how many he can make good in 10 tries?

There even is evidence some of the players are getting tired of all these field goals also.

What was it that Alex Karras grumbled?

BREAK BACK

"You break your back out there all day and here comes some 5-foot-6 foreigner running out on the field yelling 'I'm going to keeck a touchdown.'"

Alex Karras is a cynic, true. And why pick on foreigners?

But even some of the Dolphins admitted it was "a bit of a letdown" to see Saturday's struggle settled by this quiet little fellow who didn't even get his suit dirty.

Don't get them wrong though. The Dolphins love Garo Yepremian and they'll take what he has given them, but it makes me wonder a bit when a ball game like Saturday's is settled by a field goal, as last year's Super Bowl Game between Baltimore and Dallas was, if maybe too much of the foot has been brought back into football.

Take a look at the four playoff games this past weekend. There were field goals flying all over. Three in Dallas' 20-12 win over Minnesota, three in the Miami-KC contest; three more in the Baltimore-Cleveland clash and three more in San Francisco's 24-20 elimination of Washington.

TOO MUCH

That's 12 not counting the missed attempts, and I think it's too much. You get a ball club that plays a brilliant game on defense and is beaten by a field goal. I don't think that's what pro football really was meant to be. You get Garo Yepremian leading the league in scoring and Jan Stenerud right at his heels. Again, I don't think that's what the original designers had in mind.

"The game has changed," says a fellow like Gino Cappelletti, who did such an excellent job kicking field goals for the Boston Patriots before retiring this year.

"The way the game has changed, every team has a field goal kicking specialist, and all the coaches and the teams really want to know now is a kicker's percentage," Cappelletti adds.

"I dunno," says Gino Cappelletti, "I've got a lot of respect for a guy who can stand on the sideline, then come in cold and do the job."

Me, too. But I've got far more respect for the guy who works down there in the pit all day long and does the much tougher job.

"If it wasn't for Hoskins it would have been disaster for the special teams," said Elmer, nursing a groin injury suffered late in the game. You can bet that won't keep him out of the Dallas game."

Utah State Defeats Japanese Gridders

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Aggies, the first American college team to play in Japan since the sport was introduced here 57 years ago, clobbered two Japanese all-star teams during the Christmas week.

The Aggies beat a Japanese University East all-star team 50-6 in Tokyo Dec. 19, and trounced an all-Japan University West team 45-6 in Osaka Sunday.

Utah State head coach Chuck Mills said: "All-Japan had a well-drilled team with excellent fundamentals and gave us a hard time. I think it would be a good idea for an American university team to come to Japan once every three years. It not only would help to stimulate interest in American football, but would also give the Japanese teams a chance to find out their improvement and their level of play."

The varsity squad resumed practice Sunday night after a 10-day examination layoff and four of the blacks participated. One was delayed enroute to Ithaca and the sixth is injured, the spokesman said.

Basketball

ITHACA, N.Y. — Cornell University's varsity basketball squad is back at full strength with the return of its black players who had boycotted the team in a dispute with the coaching staff.

A school spokesman said Sunday night that the differences "have been resolved."

Grace Is Typical Of Diversification

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mention W. R. Grace & Co., New York, and most people think of shipping, cruises and South America.

Those areas actually accounted for only 2 per cent of the 120-year-old company's earnings last year. One would hardly recognize Grace, long noted for its "Casa Grace" in South America and the familiar green and black stacks on its ships.

W. R. Grace, completely out of the shipping business today, typifies the way companies are diversifying and internationalizing to stay afloat competitively.

Chances are the last turkey or record album you bought was wrapped in a Grace division's flexible packaging film, and your order of fresh meat may have been marketed in a Grace-made meat tray. That new skyscraper downtown may have been coated with a new Grace spray-on fireproofing, or perhaps the Halloween candy you gave the neighborhood kids came from Grace's candy unit. Even the books you take out of the public library may have been purchased through a Grace division.

Grace employs more than 60,000 people around the world in more than 300 plants, 1,000 sales office and distribution facilities. They are located in 48 states and 43 countries of North and South America, Europe, Africa, Asia, Australia and New Zealand.

Its main business thrusts today are chemicals and consumer products and services.

Grace's chemical business includes battery separators, container sealing compounds and catalysts. Industrial chemicals and specialty products, bases for its chemical business, range from petroleum and industrial catalysts and graphic arts products to cleaning chemicals and water and pollution control chemicals.

In the early 1960's, Grace decided to get into the consumer market and has. Its frozen foods business includes national distribution for seafood and pizzas. On the West Coast and in the Southwest, Nalley's (a Grace division) snack food products can be found on supermarket shelves.

The company retains some of its nautical flavor through riverboat-style restaurants in St. Louis and California.

Grace units design and market furniture upholstery and bedding, office supplies, footwear and handbags, women's casual wear and sporting goods. F.A.O. Schwarz, the famed New York toy store, is part of the Grace family.

Abroad, through subsidiaries, Grace is No. 1 in France and Spain and No. 2 in Europe in the expressway business. It dominates the in-plant feeding and meal voucher business in Continental Europe. In Italy, it operates the world's largest pasta manufacturing unit. Isn't It Time To Set Graduation Standards?

"It is inconceivable and appalling that a major educational system has not laid down some basic achievement to be met before a high school diploma is issued."

This statement is from a San Francisco Grand Jury report, sharply critical of the San Francisco schools, which was issued this month.

WHILE IT MAY BE "inconceivable and appalling," the fact is that few school districts have set standards that students must meet before receiving a high school diploma.

Quoting again from the San Francisco Grand Jury report: "It appears that the only standard now in effect is that the student attend a certain required minimum number of classes each year, for a specified number of years."

Even this much may not be always true. Not all high school teachers "take the roll" every day, so there is not always a check on whether the student has attended "a minimum number of classes each year" Nor is there, necessarily, a minimum attendance requirement for the student to pass the course.

THIS SCHOOL YEAR, for the first time, there will be some minimum requirements for high school graduation in California.

The George Miller Jr. Act of 1968 specified that the state Board of Education should prepare minimum academic standards for graduation.

The board in June, 1969, set the first of these, in mathematics and reading. It ruled that, effective with the 1972 graduating class, no student could be graduated from high school who had not attained the eighth grade level in reading and mathematics.

So far, the state board has gone no further.

THE GEORGE MILLER JR. Act also provided: "The governing board of any school district maintaining a high school shall adopt minimum academic standards for graduation . . ."

The late George Miller Jr., perhaps not fully aware of the dilatory tactics of many school boards, did not include any deadline by which such standards should be adopted. So far, few high school districts have gone beyond the eighth grade proficiency in reading and mathematics prescribed by the state.

What the San Francisco Grand Jury described as "inconceivable and appalling" therefore applies also in Marin and elsewhere.

THE SAN FRANCISCO grand jurors are not alone in being appalled at this lack of standards — which renders the high school diploma largely meaningless, to the detriment of those graduates who actually applied themselves and earned their diplomas.

We are in the third school year since passage of the George Miller Jr. Act. Would it be too much to ask that our school boards get busy on setting the standards which the act requires?

Ecology Madness

"Ecology! Everything these days is ecology! I hate the word." So says an engineer friend. And it is true that some people are lusting after the chaste maiden in an unseemly manner, denouncing as soon as the proposals are laid upon the table every new project to generate more electricity. "If we have to have a brown-out someday, some of these same people will yell the loudest and blame the utilities," says our friend.

We know there is some truth to his charge. Two decades ago Californians were ready to accept any kind of project, just so long as it was labeled Progress. Today some people display a similar myopia in the presence of the great god, Ecology.

Growth Of Secrecy Keeps Pace With New Agencies

It's no wonder that John Q. Public harbors dark thoughts about his government; that's the way it feels about him, too — especially the federal government.

We had assumed that keeping the public in the dark about its own government's business was a bureaucratic passion that grew as agencies atrophied, but we were wrong. The Economic Stabilization Board, with virtually no history at all as it tackles price and wage controls, already has sealed its doings inside a black box.

We tried to peek inside the other day, but the lid was slammed shut.

ALL WE WANTED to know was the board's decision on whether it would challenge the Golden Gate Bridge District's elimination of commuter discounts. We might as well have asked for the guidance system to our latest hush-hush missile.

"We are not permitted to give out that information," we were told by the board's public relations spokesman. We were tempted to ask him why the board even bothered in that case to have a spokesman, but he seemed so happy — all wrapped up in edicts from Washington — that we did not want to chill his day.

The fact that the board's decision would be free for the asking at the bridge district made no difference, he said. He had to stick to the rules.

It's that sort of flypaper-thinking that makes government such a marvelously inefficient machine. All very depressing.

STANDING AT THE OTHER end of the secrecy scale is the bridge district's general manager, Dale W. Luehring. Largely because of his open manner, the district's image and accomplishments have a new luster.

Luehring is everywhere with his message about the district's role in transit. Even when we took our son to see Santa, there was Luehring — all 20 of him as we passed the television sales area. All of the demonstrator sets were tuned to the same channel, and there he was, being interviewed again.

FOR WEIRD ACRONYM of the year we commend People for a Golden Gate National Recreation Area, who claim it's pronounced "piffgunura." What an awful label for such a noble cause!

Speaking of noble causes, San Francisco Supervisor Roger Boas's campaign for the Democratic nomination in the Sixth Congressional District (which will include all of Marin by next June's election) has picked up new support in Marin. Included in a list of endorsements were Marin County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, Mill Valley City Councilman Jean Barnard, and former Marin County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker.

The common "inside" prediction now is that Boas will not be challenged for the nomination by fellow Supervisor Robert Mendelsohn. The reason: Mendelsohn's big San Francisco supporters haven't recovered from his hugely successful 1971 campaign in time for him to run so soon again.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Letters for "What Our Readers Say" are welcomed. To be published, they must bear the writer's signature and address (only the city will be printed, but street or post office box address must be included.) Try to limit letters to 200 words. The editors reserve the right to cut long letters, or to reject any that may be libelous or in bad taste.

Two Columns Expose Wrongs In Our Country

Thank you, thank you for your two columns by Walton and Furgurson on Dec. 1.

Walton pointed out all too vividly how the big corporations are sending California down the tubes.

Furgurson and this "Fat Society" of his were great. He lays bare the idiocies of the "Fat Society" and those in it who would wreck our remaining wilderness.

Eureka To Usurp, Not Buy Tidelands

In your issue of Dec. 17, under "What Our Readers Say," you printed a portion of my letter, Double Indemnity in Tidelands Bill."

Your editor stated, "Senate Bill 1008 calls for a State loan to the City of Eureka for purchase by it of tidelands in private ownership, with the State to be repaid from Eureka's share of sales tax."

The sum of money alocated by this legislation is not for the purpose of purchasing tidelands. Rather it is for use by "City Hall" Eureka as a "war chest" to usurp private property from present lawful owners.

The money voted by the legislature will be used for attorney fees, court actions, surveys, etc. . .

What Revenue Has Deficit To Share?

The propaganda machine is revved up again spewing forth the glories of revenue-sharing.

Congressman Mailliard says the controversy between San Francisco and the federal government "is probably the best argument for revenue-sharing that I can think of". Comment: the best is none too good.

President Nixon has made some hints about picking up the tab for school financing to relieve the property tax burden. Let the efficient IRS syphon the money off from your wallet, pay the bureaucrats to administer it up and down, send some of it back to your schools if they behave and conform to federal bureaucratic standards. Any left over might be sent to Fargo, North Dakota, where a local politician needs votes. (No offense intended, Fargo)

Beware of revenue-sharing! Ask yourself — what revenue does a federal budget deficit have to share?

AN EDUCATOR'S VIEW

Did Supreme Court Decisions Make Humanism State Religion?

By Dr. JOHN W. GILBAUGH
Professor of Education, San Jose State College

Have the secular public schools become temples for a religious minority — the Humanists? Aftermath of the recent school prayer debate in the United States House of Representatives may dwarf previous separation-of-church-and-state controversies before the issue is finally resolved.

Motives may be open to question of those opposed to the proposed constitutional amendment which would allow prayers that are not compulsory in the public schools. While reasons given for opposition by various groups to nondenominational and non-compulsory prayers may seem logical and objective to minority groups who voiced them, they do not represent the feelings of a substantial majority of United States citizens.

Though the motives of all school-prayer opponents should be examined in depth, an initial probe of the Humanists, a minority religious sect, might prove to be an eye-opener.

THE READER may recall that nondenominational prayers and reading of the Bible without comment had been as much a part of the public school curriculum as the 3 R's and flag salute throughout the entire history of public education. That is, until the Supreme Court intervened by its 1962 and 1963 decisions which took God out of the public schools. This, of course, must have enthralled the Humanists. For, according to a spokesman for the Humanists, Humanism is identified as a non-theistic religion.

Here are some pertinent excerpts on Humanism and school prayer from Gina Allen's editorial broadcast on behalf of Humanists, on Dec. 9, over KCBS Newsradio, San Francisco:

"The American Humanist Association, with its national headquarters in San Francisco, has taken a firm stand against the prayer amendment. The AHA is the largest Humanist organization in the United States, with a great many members in the Bay Area . . . These members are drawn to Humanism because of its non-theistic philosophy. Humanism believes that people can and should take responsibility for their own lives without divine guidance. We are a religious minority and recognize that traditionally religious minorities are best protected by separation of church and state."

WHEN THE SUPREME Court banned God from public education it would seem reasonable to expect the same court to provide judicial safeguards to prevent any religious group from moving in to fill the resulting vacuum. A religious philosophy articulated in the public schools which places man on the throne that some religions reserve for God is as much a violation of the concept of separation of church and state as was the practice of reciting a nondenominational prayer, ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

To teach children to work out their own moral codes and to arrive at their own notions of what is right and wrong, all Humanistic, is offensive to those who believe in a supreme being other than worldly man. Yet this Humanistic religion has been given free reign in the public schools.

Recently, this educator observed a classroom bulletin board attractively decorated which conveyed in tall letters the Humanistic message: "DO YOUR OWN THING." Yet, if that same emphasis had been given to such messages as "TRUST IN GOD," or "JESUS SAVES," would the non-theistic Humanists have been the first to complain?

The time may be now for concerned Americans to address themselves to the question: Did the United States Supreme Court inadvertently establish Humanism as a state religion by its 1962 and 1963 rulings banning prayer and Bible reading in the public schools?

ALMANAC

Today is Monday, Dec. 27, the 361st day of 1971 with four to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full stage.

The morning stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1945 the United States, Russia and Britain announced they would govern Korea as joint trustees for five years, then grant independence.

In 1968 the Apollo 8 astronauts returned to earth after a trip around the moon 10 times.

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Everything Going For Nixon As He Enters Election Year

GOP CONSERVATIVES DON'T WORRY NIXON. The growing evidence of conservative dissatisfaction is seen as no political threat to the President.

Not that conservatives are without political power. Nixon was defeated for governor of California because of conservative desertion. He won the nomination for President in 1968 because he had conservative support.

But running for re-election as incumbent President is different. The electorate is nationwide. Nixon is winning more support from independents than he is losing to conservatives.

Nixon can't lose many conservative votes when he has Governor Reagan and Senator Goldwater actively campaigning for him.

THE LEGISLATIVE RECORD OF 1971. This Democratic Congress spent half its time attacking the President and the other half passing the legislation he most wanted.

It extended the draft, passed wage-and-price-control authority, and enacted a wide-ranging tax reduction.

Nixon succeeded in deflecting all congressional efforts to force him to end the U.S. role in Vietnam faster than he thinks wise, but by ever narrower margins.

The Vietnam doves lost some battles but are shaping the President's decisions. Withdrawal will be speeded up in the coming months.

THE LEGISLATIVE PROSPECTS FOR 1972. Though not in quite the form he would like, Congress will pass the measures the President most wants — some kind of revenue sharing, a reshaped family assistance program, limited reforms in the machinery of the executive branch.

The new international monetary agreement, including dollar devaluation, will be quickly approved.

THE DEMOCRATIC DILEMMA. It's this: In both House and Senate the Democrats simply have to give Nixon nearly everything he needs to implement his new economic program. When they support his economic policies, they help elect him, but if they refuse to support them they help defeat themselves.

Reason: The state of the economy is the overriding concern of the voters — and will be all next year.

Their hope: That Nixon's economic policies will work, but not too well, too soon.

NEW WAR THREAT IN ASIA. Kim Yong Shik, South Korea's foreign minister, sees a mounting threat of a new invasion from North Korea. Here is the evidence behind this fear:

1—The North Koreans are stepping up their psychological warfare. Their broadcasts daily proclaim that the government has completed its preparations for war.

2—It has named the approximate time of the attack — before March of 1972.

3—North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung is reported to be determined to reunite Korea by military means by his 16th birthday — April of next year.

Japanese visitors to North Korea report they found the country widely fortified and mobilized.

The big unanswered question: Will Red China aid a North Korean invasion, as it did in 1950, or act to deter it?

MORE CONSUMER PROTECTION IN PROSPECT. Congress will have a sheaf of bills before it next year to provide a comprehensive new-product safety law.

One out of every five accidents related to household products is placed to faulty construction or bad design.

This translates into 6,000 lives lost, 22,000 cripples, four million injuries.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

Mrs. Smith Tells Senate A Plain Truth That Hurts

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Quick — what contribution to American history was made by Rebecca Felton? By Rose Long? Dixie Graves? Rose Bushfield? Gladys Pyle? Hattie Caraway?

The office trivia expert identified them as Secret Agent 99 on "Get Smart," a famous southern stripper, a turn-of-the-century suffragette, a silent film star, Shirley's old science teacher, and that old bat who used to go around chopping up bars.

Few historians, and even fewer U.S. senators, remember today that these were the only ladies to make it into the Senate in the first 170 years of our nationhood. The greatest political distinction achieved by one of them was Mrs. Caraway of Arkansas' chairmanship of the Committee on Enrolled Bills, a position that does not automatically qualify one for enshrinement in the rotunda of the Capitol.

But ask any member of that "world's most exclusive men's club" who Margaret Chase Smith is, and he can immediately tell you that she is the only current lady member of that club. If he is a vigorous campaigner for the presidency, as so many club members are this year, he might today add some colorful descriptive adjectives which are not to be quoted under any circumstances.

WERE MRS. SMITH some outsider pounding to get in, or some freshman who does not yet understand the club rules, the gentlemen might merely sigh gently and go on with their business as usual when she challenges the very principles on which the Senate operates.

But she isn't. She came to the Senate in 1948, only three years after Hattie Caraway left, and then she was already a veteran of three terms in the House. That means she is senior to 88 of her 99 colleagues. Not only that, but for all those years she has been independent, tough, thorough and incorruptible. So when she speaks, they listen.

They have to strain to hear her, and when they do they are not always glad they did. It is her words, not her rhetorical style, that make an impression.

THE FIRST TIME they did was nearly 22 years ago, when she stood and quietly delivered a "declaration of conscience" against the late Joseph McCarthy's abuse of Senate rules in his campaign of "anticommunism." She said he had made the Senate a "forum of hate" and a "rendezvous for vilification." McCarthy was not the only one of her Republican colleagues who felt the sting of her indignation that day. Many others have felt it since.

Thus, when the grandmotherly lady from Skowhegan issued a statement just before the Christmas recess, less than a week after her 74th birthday, the Senate knew better than to expect a soft and lacy Merry Christmas greeting. What it got instead was a kick in a vulnerable spot the club would prefer not to have exposed to the public. And it hurt.

She said, quite accurately, that "the Senate is a club of prima donnas intensely self-oriented — 99 kings and one queen —dedicated to their own personal accommodation."

Her inclusion of "one queen" was mere graciuosness, for she is more Spartan and less guilty of the self-orientation she complained about than any of the 99 kings. She set a record that still stands for answering Senate roll calls — 2,491 of them consecutively until she was out with a hip operation three years ago. Since then, she has taken up where she left off.

BUT NOT HER colleagues. As she said, in the last Congress the average member voted only 79 per cent of the time, and a handful missed more than 40 per cent of roll calls on each side of the Capitol.

The worst villains, she said, are those who use the Senate as a springboard to moonlighting for fat fees on the lecture circuit or to running for president. Both take senators away from the duties they are paid $42,500 a year to perform, she said. And why does the Senate itself not do something about it instead of "piously wringing its hands?" That was what brought her to describing the Senate as a club of self-oriented prima donnas.

In effect, she predicted in advance that nothing will ever grow out of her proposal for a constitutional amendment to correct this abuse. She declared that any member who missed more than 40 per cent of the votes in any session should be expelled — not at the whim of his colleagues, but by constitutional law.

Her proposal did not draw unanimous endorsement from her colleagues. In fact, it did not even draw unanimous condemnation. Most of her colleagues were out of town when she laid it down — home for the holidays. Which is only fitting, since any fair-minded taxpayer will grant that a man needs a hiatus after working a long series of three-day weeks, extending back in an unbroken string to Thanksgiving week-end. Then Congress will return refreshed in another four weeks or so, to take up the nation's urgent business (as usual), which will not include the constitutional amendment proposed by Mrs. Smith.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

Dec. 27, 1961

The Novato Unified School District board agreed to open negotiations on renewing the contract of dismissed Supt. William J. J. Smith.

Warden Fred R. Dickson announced 25 to 30 of San Quentin Prison's most troublesome inmates would be moved to other institutions in an attempt to end a reign of violence at the big prison in Marin.

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 27, 1951

The historic Borello ranch at Olema was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest N. Kettenhofen of Novato for $140,000 in what was called one of the largest real estate transaction in Marin County during 1951.

State Controller Thomas H. Kuchel said the State of California's surplus "may well exceed $128 million" by June 30, 1952.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By WAT TAKESHITA

Farewell From Wat Takeshita After 20 Years As I-J Writer

If you think that the first column you ever write is a tough one, you ought to try writing the last one. It's worse.

Comes a time in a man's life when something jolts him out of his comfortable routine and casts him off on a new course. For me, that time is now.

I'll be leaving the I-J and newspapering at the end of this year and literally turning a new leaf from the first of the year. Not that I haven't enjoyed newspapering; I have. And top management at the Independent-Journal has been great.

THE LATE ROY A. BROWN and Justus Craemer and the present publishers, Wishard Brown and Jack Craemer, have been the type of men you'd want to work for and with. To the casual reader, the newspaper may appear cold and impersonal, but to one who has worked with the paper's management for more than 20 years, they have been tops — not only as businessmen running an enterprise but as human beings concerned with the lives and welfare of their employees and families.

They have always treated all employees from editors to trainees with courtesy, and with respect for individual dignity.

The same cannot be said for some of the mid-management personnel with whose policies we have sometimes disagreed and disagreed sharply.

No job, regardless of pay or prestige, is so important that a person must sacrifice self-respect and dignity to hang on. And what better time to make the change than at the start of a new year?

FOR 20 YEARS I've been skimming the surface of social and political activities, with little time to sympathize with the downtrodden or to probe in depth the interesting or tragic episodes that occur daily. Now, I may have time to do more than just skim the surface.

I'm grateful for the many friendships made on the old courthouse beat, San Rafael City Hall both old and new, and at the Civic Center and Hall of Justice. Those friendships I'll always cherish and, I hope, never lose.

And so, until we meet again, a pleasant holiday season and a Happy New Year to all!

THE BITTER-ENDER

Communication Gap? What Would You Expect?

By ED BRANDER

"I believe that with this approach we can actualize an ongoing program that will be meaningful in adjusting the behavioral patterns of these under-achievers."

The man really said it. I couldn't believe my ears, but he said it. And he was an educated man. At least, he had a string of letters afterhis name — Ph.D., P.D.Q., A.M., M. and P.M., or something like that.

He was a school superintendent talking to his board of trustees. The board members sat there and nodded their heads as if they knew what he was saying. Of course they didn't. They couldn't. He was talking non-language.

I HASTEN TO ADD that educators are not alone in perverting the mother tongue into incomprehensible jargon. All sorts of specialists talk non-language. And write it, too.

Probably newspaper copy readers must be blamed for starting it all, with their headlines: "Nixon Ups Budget." "Jackson Inks Pact." "Spiro Ires Chet."

The copy readers may be forgiven, though. They're up against the tough job of telling what the story's about in words that must fit the number of characters of type in narrow columns. And though they torture the language, the results usually are semi-intelligible — and happily, very brief.

Besides, they've been doing it for years and years. But only recently has non-language become the favorite of the so-called intelligentsia.

THE TECHNICAL and professional papers are full of it, of course. But it has spilled out into general publications. Try this morsel from a book review in a recent issue of the Nation:

"Unfortunately this crucial role for psychoanalysis has hitherto been concealed, partly by the weakness of its scientific status through its neglect of systematization and verification procedures, but mainly because psychoanalysis rests on a meta-psychology, based on the assumption of scientific materialism, in conflict with the theory of meaning which informs its clinical and therapeutic practice."

Enough! Enough!

Even the clergy has gone in for non-language. Try (if you're still able) this direct quote from a religious publication:

"The On-Going Church: The total commitment and involvement required of the emerging laity, if they are to enter into the dialectic and dialogue of our times, is a confrontation required by the ecumenical spirit, in which the People of God give witness to Christ in their own milieu, at work and at worship through the community, with the community and in the community, always guided by the charisma of the Holy Spirit; fed ao the agape and constructed in kerygmatic catechesis, they will make the cosmic Christ relevant to the modern existentialist world, spiraling up through biological and psychological tensions toward the omega-point ..." There is more, but I spare you.

KNOW SOMETHING? That same school superintendent I quoted in the first paragraph complained, at that same meeting, that there is a "communication gap."

I should say there is! What else can you expect when our educated and educators throw out the English language and return to the Tower of Babel?

Dim Future Seen For Rails

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A railroad president believes the new government rail corporation, Amtrak, should preside over "an orderly shrinkage of rail passenger service" because passenger service has little future.

B. F. Biaggini, president of the Southern Pacific Co., said there was no market for long distance, intercity passenger transportation by rail.

"People just won't ride it," Biaggini said. "And they won't pay what they should to support the service."

Biaggini said he did not believe rail passenger service would amount to much by the end of the 1970s "other than in a place like the northeast corridor—the stretch from Boston to Washington."

An Innocent Suggestion

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) —It all started when city officials innocently suggested citizens might help in the post-holiday trash cleanup operation by bringing their Christmas wrapping paper trash to the fire stations for easier pickup.

The response was overwhelming. By today, tons of trash — including kitchen garbage — stood in heaps at all the city's fire houses.

A single garbage truck put on holiday duty to pick up the trash was not able to put a dent in the piles of garbage. Officials said regular crews would try to clean up the mess by tonight.

Chief Pilot Dies In Crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)— The bodies of the state of Nevada's chief pilot and his wife were found Sunday in the wreckage of their light plane in a mountain area.

Lew Gourley, 58, Carson City, Nev., and his wife, Penny, were killed last Wednesday when their single-engine plane crashed on a flight to Arizona. The Gourleys planned to spend the Christmas holidays with their son, Alex, and other family members at Mesa.

Rescue teams from the Nellis Air Force Base and the Clark County Jeep Squadron recovered the bodies after search planes spotted the Gourleys' plane.

Darwin Theory Held Failing Modern Test

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A Michigan State University naturalist told a group of scientists today that Darwin's theory of evolution fails a new test based on chromosome count which gives rise to the possibility that there were numerous spontaneous beginnings to life.

Prof. John N. Moore, in a paper prepared for delivery today at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS), said Darwin's theory was "more illogical than biological."

In another text prepared to be delivered today to the year's largest science meeting, the executive director of the National Wildlife Foundation said the American public is confused by supposed scientific research that contradicts itself on the environmental issue.

Thomas L. Kimball, the head of the organization, said the lack of pure scientific research has fouled up the attempts to improve the environment.

The AAAS opened its weeklong session Sunday.

The theory of evolution expounded by Charles Darwin in 1859 stresses the "monophyletic" theory that the first living cell over millions of years changed into complex many-celled organisms — from a simple amoeba-like animal to man.

If this were so, Moore said there should be an increase in chromosomes and the quality of gene material carried by chromosomes as the complexity of animals increase.

"Absolutely no pattern of increase of chromosome number from less complex to most complex is at all detectable," Moore said.

He said chromosome counts showed man ranking lower than frogs and toads.

"It resolves the question, 'Did life begin spontaneously just once, or many times?'" he said. "Since we have the gaps and inconsistencies in the records, it's reasonable to conjecture that there were multiple beginnings of life."

Moore said there also was no scientific evidence of links between major kinds of plants and that the study of fossils had not shown any connection between plants and animals.

"The typical evolutionary explanation doesn't make sense in view of today's knowledge," he said. "The monophyletic explanation is more illogical than biological."

On the environmental question, Kimball said the public is confused by "purported scientific research rationales that mix philosophy, politics and opportunism with analysis of factual research data" that results in diametrically opposed conclusions and recommendations.

"Unfortunately, there appears to be a growing conviction among the American populace that is is extremely difficult to get the unvarnished truth from the scientific community," he said. "As a consequence, professionalism is being downgraded in direct proportion to the inability of the public to guess which scientist has the right answer."

Kimball asked the AAAAS to establish ethics committees for all scientific disciplines involved with natural resources and exclude from the committees those who make a conclusion and then gather only data to support that conclusion.

The lack of pure scientific work, he said, has led to "new pollution abatement laws replete with political tub-thumping, a new dimension to more intense and centralized government regulation, an alarmed industrial complex insecure in its continued ability to pollute at the expense of the environment, the Madison Avenue hucksterings of endless products reportedly harmless to the plant and animal ecosystems and a citizenry that is incapable of separating advertising fantasy-land from truth."

At a symposium Sunday, scientists talked of how aggression serves people constructively. At a similar meeting last year, the destructive role of aggression in war and violence was stressed.

Dr. Edward D. Joseph of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York began with aggression as a thought rather than as an action. He said a thought, any thought either hostile or nonhostile, is a useful channel for the discharge of aggressive behavior.

Aggression is instinctive in people but he defined it as an "approach to" any number of situations in normal and ordinary life.

Joseph said he wondered if psychoanalysts, of which he is one, have "emphasized the hostile and destructive aspects of aggression, at the expense of overlooking the equally or perhaps greater importance that it may play in human adaptive behavior in both human mental development and human interactions."
